Movement Rampant on Campus To Gain Restoration of Grant

'Ad Hoc' Committee to Present
Facts at an Open Meeting

CO-OPERATION INVITED

All Faculties Represented; Committee's Outlook is Optimistic

In the course of the next few weeks members of the staff will be invited to join a delegation to petition the government to restore the provincial grant. The case is being prepared by the "Ad Hoc" Committee and will be presented at an open meeting at the Women's Union on Friday at 4.15 p.m.

The committee was organized early in September when a number of Varsity students complained to the Canadian Youth Council that the fees had been raised. The Council, whose interest is the making of education available for as many as possible, suggested that a committee be formed of members of student organizations.

"Students of various faculties offered their services," declared Mr. Paul Bridle, "and volunteers are now preparing a report on the fee situation, the amount of money allowed in the provincial budget for education, the adequacy of bursaries and the extent of the hardship caused by the new schedule of fees." Harold Archer, a member of the committee, cited a number of students whose absence this year was due to the heightened expense of a university course. He also stated that the report was very successful.

"The 'Ad Hoc' Committee has been formed for only one purpose—that of restoring the provincial grant to the University," said Miss Betty Cary of the Canadian Youth Council. "The Council supports the principle of complaining as the action is not against the University and is not the work of any single group of students." The committee is at present composed of representatives from nearly every faculty. These representatives will appeal to the students through the college organizations.

The reduction of the government grant and the consequent increase in fees has led to the formation of the Ad Hoc committee, a student organization for the purpose of banding together the faculty and the students in a protest against this decision. The aim of the committee is to interest public opinion in the plight of the more indigent students and ultimately to obtain if not a return of the grant, at least more bursaries and scholarships.

Miss A. M. Parkes, associate secretary of the S.A.C., when asked her opinion of the committee, said, "Anything which interests the public favourably in the University is an excellent thing, and anything which interests students intelligently is an excellent thing."

STUDENT OPINION

In the opinion of the majority of representatives and heads of various campus organizations, the report which is at present being prepared on the fees situation should be heartily endorsed by the students.

"The students would certainly appreciate a reduction in fees," declared Helen Babe, vice-president of the Victoria College Union. "I feel sure that the students on the whole will be behind it. Of course the actual student (Continued on Page 5)

DANCE COMPOSITIONS TO FEATURE PROM

Symphony Concerts of Vital Interest to Student

SERIES CONCLUDES OCT. 17

To-night's Promenade Symphony Concert, the twentieth of the season, will provide the students of the University with an opportunity of attending this feature of the musical year. Fortunately for out of town students, Reginald Stewart does not conclude the series until the seventeenth of October, giving four concerts during the fall term.

Toronto is considered fortunate in having available such an institution as the "Proms", which makes it possible for large numbers of music lovers to hear the work of the masters. The University of Toronto is particularly fortunate in that the concerts take place in the Varsity Arena, which makes them accessible to the student body.

The programme to be given to-night is one especially chosen by Reginald Stewart to bring out the dance compositions of great composers. Possibly the most striking of these is Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 which is popularly known as the "Dance Symphony". In keeping with the spirit of the programme is the appearance of a very fine group of Norwegian dancers under the direction of Nils Tveit. This group (Continued on Page 5)

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

September 25, 1935.

Once again through the columns of your widely-read paper I wish to welcome the students of the University as they return to their academic work, or for the first time come to join our fellowship.

Dollar wheat is the outward sign that material conditions in Canada are improving. To the situation abroad Canadians cannot be indifferent. If peace is to be maintained it must be based on justice; no other kind of peace is permanent. Seek to know all sides of the questions at issue and recognize the complexity of most international issues.

Our numbers this year will probably on the whole be about the same as last year. The registration in some faculties is greater; in others less.

Settle in at your regular work at the very beginning of the term, and carry on steadily throughout the year. This method of study will be better for your health and for your head; and the time of special test will hold no terrors for you.

There are many college and university activities which will claim your interest, and which really form part of your general education. I would crave your special support of those activities which represent the University as a whole. Maintain brightly your double loyalty—that to your college or faculty, and that to the university. The welfare of your Alma Mater is in large measure dependent on your welfare, and yours is dependent on hers.

Your friendships, your personal relations to the staff and to your fellow students are no small part of your present opportunities. Use them well and to the full.

My best wishes to you all for a year full of achievement, of interest, and of growth.

H. J. CODY, President.

The S.A.C. Finds Rooms for You But Dents and Engineers Taboo

Rooms—rooms—rooms—for the past three weeks Hugh McLaren and Harold Copp of the S.A.C. Room Service thought, talked and dreamt of them all the time.

From the ninth of September until the eighteenth the pair inspected several hundred houses—good, bad and indifferent, covering the section from Bathurst to Sherbourne. The inspection hardly over, landladies commenced telephoning to inquire where the boarders were.

Rates ranged all the way from $6.50 a week for room and board to $8.00 at a guest home or $12.50 in an exclusive pension. These were generally subject to certain conditions, such as: "No

S.P.S. men please, they break the furniture and knock off the plaster jumping down stairs: I'd prefer Foresters because they are so quiet and gentlemanly." Another dislikes dentists because two left at Christmas one year. A first year Medical man takes boarders to eke out finances, while a landlady in one district wants only Meds as she has a skeleton kicking around that she would like appreciated.

The Room Service is still in full swing, with headquarters in the West common room Hart House. Here they help some dozens of men every day to find homes, besides which they answer several times a day the freshman query "Where is Hart House?"

Visitors

FRENCH STUDENTS ATTEND

Hart House during the recent summer months has witnessed many impressive and colourful events. Garden parties, luncheons, conferences, and summer courses, formed only a part of the many activities to which Hart House can be adapted.

The summer season got under way with the Garden Party of Toronto Western Hospital which was held on Monday, June 3rd. Seven hundred and seventy-five people graced the occasion. Four hundred and ten people came to the U.C. Alumni Association dinner on June 7th, while 2,486 persons gathered round for the graduation reception and dance which followed the dinner!

One hundred and ninety-four of the outstanding schoolboy athletes gathered from Ontario were entertained at a luncheon by the Ontario Athletic Commission on Saturday, June 8th. Dr. Faulkner, Minister of Health, under whose authority the Athletic Commission comes, presided at the meeting.

Dr. and Mrs. Cody were hosts at a reception given for the delegates of the National Council of Women held here on Monday, June 10th. Among the 180 guests was Miss Winnifred Kydd, one of Canada's delegates to the League of Nations. A tour of Hart House was conducted for 150 students from the State Teachers' College, North Carolina, on June 24th.

A very colourful occasion was the luncheon held for the conferences of the Federation of Catholic Clubs of America on Sunday, July 14th. Archbishop McGuigan was present. On this occasion Dr. Cody presented the crucifix of Cardinal Newman to the Newman Club. Three hundred and nineteen persons were at the luncheon.

Banquet

The Sophomore year of University College is tendering a banquet to the Freshmen of the college on Tuesday, October first at 7 p.m. in the Great Hall. There being no hazing or rough house initiation at U.C. this banquet serves as a formal reception and promises to be an enjoyable affair. Warden Bickersteth will greet the incoming freshmen with what promises to be a most interesting welcome. Dr. Wallace, principal of the College and Professor G. S. Brett, Dean of the School of Graduate studies complete the program of guest speakers. Dr. Wallace will reply to a toast to the College proposed by Apex. Rankin, second year president. Professor Brett will speak in response to a toast to the University proposed by the First year president, who is yet to be elected.

A sumptuous chicken dinner has been arranged which will do justice to the most demanding of epicurean tastes.

By Jim Tiller

Another year, another football season and every day brings fresh rumors of great and powerful rugby squads shaping up on the distant Big Four campuses, all of which assume a strange hold on the 1935 intercollegiate championship. Queen's, who won the title from Varsity last year after a titanic struggle in the sudden death playoffs, are again the team to beat. Coached by Ted Reeve, that sparkling football strategist and inimitable sports columnist, they seem to be the toughest out of the league. They have a veteran for every position and a number of really promising younger players coming up. With so many experienced men and with such a dearth of talent, they may be expected to excel in the rugged, careful game, typical of Queen's teams in recent years.

Griffin, who was delegated for quarterback, has already been eliminated by the examiners, but Queen's will still have their stellar kicker, Johnny Munro who last year punted the Tricollour to victory, the brilliant Sonshine, whose clever ball carrying made possible the winning point in the playoffs last fall, Abe Zvonkin, the No. 1 dangerous man to opposing linemen, Wing, Krug, Barker, Barnabe, and others nearly as capable but less well known. FOUNDATIONS LAID FOR NEW BUILDINGS

New St. Michael's Unit will be Completed by Christmas

OFFICIAL OPENING DELAYED

Work on the first unit of the new buildings which are to replace the old St. Michael's College is progressing rapidly. At present the workmen are pouring the concrete for the walls. The stonework of the new building is to be in Indiana limestone. The buildings are designed in the French Gothic style and when completed the three units will enclose a quadrangle where St. Michael's College tennis courts are now situated. The buildings are to be surrounded by a heating tunnel and the heat for the entire College will be generated at the new central heating plant which is now being erected.

The new buildings will have classrooms as well as dormitories for the students. Part of the buildings will be devoted to the housing of the Library of the Medieval Institute which is one of the finest collections of Medieval literature on this continent.

The original plans for the buildings called for completion in time for the beginning of the Fall Session. However due to a change in the builders plans work was slow in getting underway and as a result the buildings will not be available for occupation until Christmas.

The first unit will be occupied as soon as completed but the formal opening will not take place until next Spring.

The tower will not be constructed until next year and the entire buildings programme will cover a space of some years, probably not reaching its completion until sometime after 1940.

Judgments and Errors

It is now fifty-five years since the first Varsity was brought forth on the campus of the University of Toronto. When that group of far-seeing, capable pioneers in the field of college journalism conceived the idea of a paper, it was in a University, devoid of co-eds, one-quarter the size of the present institution, and giving little promise of becoming the largest University in the Empire. As the University of Toronto rapidly ascended to its lofty pinnacle in the realm of scholastic endeavour, The Varsity experienced a corresponding rise in fortunes until in place of the weekly sheet which was the Varsity half a century ago, we now have a daily, second to none among the Canadian college papers.

If The Varsity is to continue as an efficient campus newspaper it must be true to the ideals of its founders. In this function we must cover a wide realm of thought. We must maintain an efficient news and sports service. While it is our policy to encourage and promote new ideas, we are not unmindful of the difficulties and gravity of our situation. Conflicting opinions are certain to arise and out of these, come not only criticism and reform, but also a certain amount of misunderstanding and objection. In order to eliminate these misunderstandings we make an appeal to the broadmindedness of our readers.

It would, of course, be possible to publish a paper with no unpleasantness whatsoever occurring, but that would be slightly similar to fishing without a hook—an enjoyable but not very effective pastime. The Varsity attempts at all times to be fair in its criticism but occasionally we may err in our judgments. But then to err is human, to forgive divine.

The Varsity extends greetings and wishes of a prosperous college year to its student public. The freshmen who are becoming acquainted with The Varsity for the first time are reminded that the columns of this paper are always open for the publication of any constructive ideas. We trust that this channel for the exchange of ideas will be patronized by the newcomers to our University.

For Students With Problems

It was Sir Francis Bacon who took all knowledge to be his province. No doubt he over-estimated his cerebral powers a trifle, but this famous statement of his might well give us food for thought at the beginning of another academic year.

We rush around in a mad endeavour to secure some elusive thing called "Education". Not knowing just exactly what we want, we take the shortest possible means to acquire what we are told we want. We have decided that we want to follow a business career, so we take up Commerce and Finance. Or we passed well in mathematics at High School, so we go in for Mathematics and Physics. Again we may not be smart in anything in particular, and decide to take up whatever is easiest in the Pass course. It is an old old story.

Today hundreds of intellectually curious young people are in the hectic midst of their first week at the University. They think they have reached the promised land, flowing with academic milk and honey, where everything good in the realm of knowledge is free for the taking. To a certain extent, of course, this is true.

For all practical purposes, however, the student will find that he is involved in a course leading to one particular end, and he will bend all his energies in the next eight months toward a concentrated rush for specialized knowledge. He will become a teacher, doctor, engineer or chemist in the shortest possible time, with the least possible effort, and will not spend any time roving in fields other than his own.

Perhaps one in a hundred of this year's crop of C. & F. freshmen will crack the cover of Aristotle's Politics, and the same proportion of Arts freshmen will take a peek at Karl Marx or Adam Smith. No one studies any English unless it is fed through an eye-dropper. How would a Medical student approach the problem presented by a dangling participle—whatever it is?

In these days of specialized education, those men who sit in the seats of the mighty at the head of our educational systems have a much greater problem before them than their predecessors of the last century. Education which is forced is valueless—is it possible for students, of their own initiative, to take an interest in matters outside of their own particular prescribed courses?

Each student must supply his own answer. And each answer will show whether we are utilizing educational facilities as a means to a commercial end, or taking full advantage of them as stepping stones to a wider and more intelligent outlook on a great and troubled world.

To Our Public

These are the days when heads of colleges, deans and professors in their addresses of welcome to the incoming students seek to impress their plastic minds with the significance of this great institution of learning. So in this, the first issue of the undergraduate newspaper, we seek to impress the plastic minds of the newcomers and the not so plastic minds of the old timers with the significance of The Varsity.

It is a common tendency of undergraduates to take The Varsity for granted. They snatch a copy to hurriedly scan the sports page, the Champus Cat, or the bulletin board, as the case may be, then toss it aside at the end of the lecture before they have exhausted half of its news content.

The constant aim of The Varsity staff is to make the paper more interesting every day. They set themselves high standards. The Varsity is a volunteer organization. The reporters receive no reward but that of the journalistic training the work gives them. The bulk of the work is done by undergraduates, few of whom are paid, who spend hours of their time, both day and night, live on a minimum of sleep, and carry in many cases a heavy honour course besides. The average reader does not stop to think how much labour has been necessary in order that his paper should be waiting for him promptly every morning. Even the night work on The Varsity is done by students.

The Varsity earnestly endeavours to be more than just a bulletin board. It is a link, the only link in a University of this size, between all the faculties. It serves as a medium for the dissemination of ideas and for the voicing of student opinion. Its correspondence columns are always open to intelligent letters on almost any subject. Obviously there are some subjects which are inadvisable to discuss in a publication of this kind. The Varsity is distinctly non-partisan and always endeavours to present both sides of the question.

We cannot live up to these standards without the co-operation of the student body. First of all, the paper must be read. We try to have something in the paper of interest to everybody so that it will be read. Secondly it must be taken seriously. Many students when asked for an opinion on a subject of interest regard it as a joke. Our purpose is serious. In a democratic university we believe that student opinion is important and The Varsity is the only medium of communicating it to everyone in the University. So we hope no one will hesitate to express an opinion if he has one to express. That is the reason why we have a newspaper. The Varsity is the undergraduate newspaper. It can only serve the undergraduates if it is read by them. Those who do read it are more completely alive to the cross-currents of University life than those who do not.

And so, since Mickey finally weakened and let us have the job, it behooves us to take a look around and see what the chances are for digging up a few Cats this season.

Letters have already been dispatched to many veteran Caterers inviting them to offer their services once again, and enticing them on with visions of vast hoards of theatre passes. A few social credit slips on Mr. Aberhart may also be available. This will bring Joab back into harness if anything will, for after being on the staff of the Whitby Gazette & Chronicle all summer he ought to jump at any kind of credit. The Yorker should know, since he too held down a job with a weekly for two months, till he decided to resign and save money. We also have hopes that Mundusvult (himself) Deiphi will reappear with a heavy burden of vacation time rhymes, that Col. Julep (son of Mint) may be back

Inconsequence

By Martin B. Loeb

Refusal by Italy of a settlement of the Ethiopian dispute as laid down by the League of Nations Committee, has from the latest reports, led to the decision of League members to invoke article fifteen of the League Covenant. This article of the League Covenant states in part, "The Council shall endeavour to effect a settlement of the dispute"—this much of the covenant has so far been invoked—a committee under the leadership of Madariaga of Spain issued settlement proposals. Article sixteen, however, is the problem which is now causing trouble. Under article fifteen the League may invoke military sanctions as a preventative measure—"If the dispute is not thus settled, the Council either unanimously or by a majority vote shall make . . . recommendations which are deemed just and proper in regard thereto." It amounts to the fact that if article fifteen is contravened, article sixteen does not necessarily follow but is rather further invoked. "Should any member of the League resort to war in disregard of its covenants—it shall ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other members of the League." with more of his inside C.O.T.C. revelations for this war feverish world; and, yes, slim though it be, we even extend the hope that Ignatz will return with his cynical satires. As for the Voluntary Contributors Section, Rustem the Persian and Heigh Nonny Mouse are warmly exhorted to follow up their last spring's debut, be they still within the moss grown borders of this venerable campus. Newcomers? The line forms at the Hall Porter's desk in Hart House, each day at noon. Come early.

As for the Yorker, his fount of inspiration dried up in the hot spell. After ascending to the heights of fame by getting mention in Teddie Reeve's column, the Lifebuoy girl has apparently been withdrawn from circulation. At least they can't say we spoiled her good name. Lifebuoy Lulu has been replaced by Lillie Delux, but not in our affections. The Lux lady is nothing to write to the Cat about. The team of Herbant, Smith and Rae having gone the way of all vaudeville acts, with Smith practicing an accent to take abroad and Herbant selling spectacles, instead of making one of himself, we can't practice our muse on them anymore. Of course Saul is still around as president of the U. C. Lit and he may offer possibilities in that capacity, even as a solo turn. The Smiths ye have always with you, and if the campus has lost Arnold C. it still has Wilfred C. But after chalking up firsts in both the courses he undertook last year, Smith Minor is probably considering taking on a third this semester, which should keep even a guy like him from straying far enough out of the Library for the Cat to get him.

CODY SOUNDS MORAL NOTE IN INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Highest Aim of Student is not to Make a Living

EXTENDS WELCOME

In his inaugural address yesterday afternoon, in Convocation Hall, Dr. Cody welcomed all those in attendance, mainly first year students.

Dr. Cody impressed on the students that they come to University in order to be educated. They do not attend merely to learn to make a living, but primarily to make a life. He stated that the universities of today are being challenged to try to make the many changes which occur in life, evolutionary, not revolutionary. Amid these many changes, the deepest things remain constant; namely God, the soul, eternal moralities, and in addition to these the marvel of learning. The process of learning is deeply significant and amazing. Whenever we learn anything, a marvel has been wrought. The story of Sir Isaac Newton and the apple is the artifice of all human learning. The eager freshmen were impressed with the fact that learning is not a mere routine, but a drama in itself.

Dr. Cody declared that students on entering university were obliged to make fresh educational adjustments, and were obliged to stand on their own feet. He then showed the difference between high school and university. In the latter the freedom of the student is trusted, and in this new life self control plays a large and dominating part. The members of the staff, contrary to popular opinion, are not hereditary critics and enemies. They are willing to help and bring out the best that is in the student.

"Students are linked with great classical traditions, freedom of thought, the religious genius of the Hebrews, the revelation of the great Teacher, the law and order introduced by Rome, the ancient mystic rites, our own culture and the future cultures," Dr. Cody said that the only promise of a better future for our country is linked to those to whom her past is dear. In the same way the university has a good name, and that name is in our hands to be kept pure and unsullied.

Dr. Cody then referred to the many changes which have been made in the staff of the University due to death, retirement, resignations, and transfers. A new chair has been established in geography in the University of Toronto. This is the first chair of that type in a Canadian university. Dr. Griffiths Taylor of the University of Chicago has been appointed to undertake the work in this new department.

The most important thing in any university is the quality of its teachers, not the buildings, or even the scientific equipment. Dr. Cody claimed that as far as undergraduate work is concerned, the duty of the staff is that of stimulating teaching. He stated that he would advise the staff not to give the same lectures year after year, word for word. Stimulation is the first great requisite. The search for wisdom is one essential feature of a university and the stimulus to search for that wisdom is even more essential.

Entry List Open For Tennis Tourney

The annual interfaculty tennis tournament for the McEachern Cup will be held on the courts of the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club, Price Street, beginning at ten a.m. Monday, September 30, play will continue throughout the remainder of the week. Entry lists for both the singles and the doubles events are now open in the Athletic office, Hart House. The lists will close at noon on Saturday and the draw will be published in all the morning papers Monday. Play will be called promptly on the hour drawn.

Dr. Cody advised the students to begin to work today and to work steadily day by day. The main objects of our study are the subjects which are prescribed. These must not be neglected. There are various social, intellectual and athletic activities in the different faculties and colleges, and through these the students are enabled to form companionships which will prove invaluable in later years, both with professors and fellow students. He advised that bodies should be kept fit for work, fit for endurance and in fact so fit that our minds can be kept clear. He advocated the "early to bed, early to rise" doctrine in this connection. Students should be interested not only in the activities of his college but also in those of the University. Friendship should be guarded very carefully, as some friendships tend to degrade while others elevate.

The correct use of speech should be practised in every subject we study, in every paper we write, and in every speech we make. Education shows most clearly in one's manner of speech. Students should think clearly and learn to think for themselves. "A higher education," said Dr. Cody, "is one of the greatest safeguards for democracy. It teaches one to stand up against the crowd if need be."

In conclusion Dr. Cody advised the students to take as much interest as possible in public affairs and in national amelioration. He cited as an example of this, the University of Chicago, which has transformed wholly the intellectual standards of the whole of the middle west of the United States.

COLLEAGUES MOURN ALLEN'S PASSING

Professor Allen Universally Known as Authority in Philology

The death occurred at Bejeurs, France, on August 21, 1935, of Professor Louis Allen of the French department of University College. He had been ailing for many years and, returning to France with his wife from a trip to Russia, he underwent an operation whence peritonitis set in which caused his death.

Mr. Allen was one of the greatest authorities in America on Romance philology and on the North American Indian languages. Born 49 years ago in Canada, he was educated at the Universities of Chicago and Illinois. He came to the University of Toronto from the University of Illinois 14 years ago and established himself here as a capable and popular professor.

"He was a delightful colleague to work with," declared Professor Jeanerret, head of the University College French staff, "and his death is a great loss to the members of the French department and to the University at large."

DENTISTRY FACULTY ATTRACTS STUDENTS FROM OTHER LANDS

Degree of Doctor not Granted to Dental Graduates in Australia

ACCEPT TORONTO DEGREE

University Dental College is Famous for Practical Training

Because of the wide international reputation commanded by the Faculty of Dentistry in this University, together with the fact that the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery is not obtainable in that country, eleven students have journeyed twelve thousand miles from Australia and are in attendance here for post graduate work. In addition, two have come from Guy's Hospital in London and one from the University of Manchester.

Commenting on this matter, Dean Secombe, told The Varsity yesterday that the enrolment of these students is an indication of the prominent position this Faculty holds in international dental opinion. Dr. Secombe said that this reputation has come gradually over a period of years, and is the result of continued research at the Faculty. Dr. Secombe denied rumours that Canadian university degrees were not to be permitted in Australia in future. Any such action, he said, would be very local, and no knowledge of it had reached him.

"The Faculty welcomes these men. We have found that they fit into the life here, and form many close friendships." They bring a new outlook and make valuable contribution to this University, was his opinion.

Mr. J. R. Ferguson, of Manchester University, said that the Faculty of Dentistry here had world-wide reputation in bridge and crown work and in ceramics. Mr. Ferguson expects to spend one year here before returning.

Date Bureau Again in Operation

Students generally, and first year students particularly, will be pleased with the announcement that the Varsity date bureau, inaugurated last year by this paper, will continue in its task of bringing together men and women who want to meet members of the other sex for dances, parties and sports.

It is realized that this week many hundreds of the students who arrive in Toronto for the first time have no friends among the opposite sex. Many others who live in Toronto have no friends among the university students. It is for the benefit of these undergraduates that the date bureau is operated. There is no reason why any student should have to pass up social events which are held at the university, simply for lack of a girl-friend or boy-friend as the case may be. And yet this happens to hundreds every year.

A coupon will be found in today's paper which must be filled out completely, and returned with the sum of ten cents per application. This registers the student in the date bureau's files, and within a few days the operator of the bureau will arrange a date. The section for preference if filled out will help the date bureau's operator to get someone as close to specifications as possible.

The Varsity hopes that no student will hesitate to make use of this service from fear that this is a hoax. It is not. It is a service which proved overwhelmingly popular last year, and brought some 350 undergraduates into friendship with one or more of the opposite sex.

It can do its work again this year if there is sufficient demand from the student body. So, if you wish the date bureau to continue in operation, send in your application now to the Date Bureau, c/o the Varsity, Hart House, Toronto.

The date bureau is operated by one person only. No one else sees the application forms. The identity of the date bureau operator will not be divulged.

OBSERVATORY OPEN TO GENERAL PUBLIC

Thorough Inspection Permitted
Every Saturday Night

MIRROR WEIGHS 5,000 LBS.

Every Saturday night since May 31st of this year, those who have a desire to gaze at the heavens have been given an opportunity to do so, for it was on that date that the David Dunlap Observatory, the gift of Mrs. Jessie Dunlap to the University of Toronto, was opened. Dr. C. A. Chant, professor of Astro-physics and director of the observatory, had always hoped that there might be more adequate means of carrying on the study of astronomy, and it was he who suggested to Mrs. Dunlap the idea of an observatory as a memorial to her husband, who was a member of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada.

The observatory consists of two buildings, an administrative building and the observatory proper, a structure made entirely of steel, where the telescope is housed. The mirror of the telescope, which is at present the second largest in the world, is 76 inches in diameter, twelve inches thick, and weighs about five thousand pounds. The observatory is never heated, as this would produce air currents which would hinder the work.

The observatory, situated about 12 miles north of the city limits, is open to the public every Saturday night. As for its connection with the University, it will chiefly be members of the staff who will use it. It is, however, an invaluable treasure to all even slightly interested in astronomy, and the names of Mrs. Dunlap and of Dr. Chant will always be remembered by those who, whether as scientist or layman, benefit from the use of the David Dunlap Observatory.

NEW TERM BRINGS STAFF REVISIONS

Dr. C. A. Chant Retires; Dr. Gilbert Jackson in Bank of England

DEAN OF ARTS ILL

The Varsity is informed of many changes in the staff of the University for the coming year. Succeeding Dr. Louis Allen of the French Department, who died suddenly while visiting in France, after a short period of study in Russia, is Mr. Haupt, from the University of Chicago.

Dr. Allen, Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Professor of Organic Chemistry is recovering from illness, but it is not expected that he will resume duties this year. Dean G. S. Brett, of the School of Graduate Studies, has undertaken Dr. Allen's duties as Dean of the Faculty of Arts.

Mr. Parsons, Professor of Mineralogy, and Mr. W. Ferguson, Professor of Accounting, are ill but are expected back within the year. Mr. G. W. Bain, head of the Chemical Engineering Department, has been granted leave of absence because of ill-health.

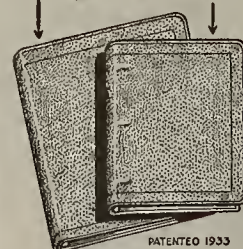

His ambition of long standing fulfilled with the erection of the new Dunlap Observatory, Dr. C. A. Chant of the Astronomy Department, has retired. He has been succeeded by Dr. R. K. Young.

Dr. W. A. Scott is now Professor of Obstetrics and Gynaecology, in place of Dr. Hendry. Professor Jacques Chapelon, eminent French mathematician, of the Mathematics and Physics Department, has resigned in favour of Dr. Richard Brauer.

Dr. Gilbert Jackson has left the Economics Department to become advisor to the Bank of England in the Dominions.

supporters have indeed many reasons for supposing the insignia of college football supremacy will remain in the Limestone City for another year.

In old McGill, a new football era is under way and the Montreal college is jubilantly optimistic of what their rugby team will do this year. Frank Shaugnessy, who coached the McGill squad for the past dozen years or more, has transferred his endeavours to the realm of baseball and the 1935 edition of McGill's pigskin gladiators will be under the direction of Joe Breen, who coached Western from the time they entered senior football up to a year ago. He will be assisted by Huddy Foster and Doug Kerr.

This year's Redmen will be unusually light with not a unit over 185 lbs. and so they are relying on fast running and trick-plays. They are said to have several very deceptive hidden-ball plays. They will be under the services of the great Don Young, who was given all-eastern rating for three consecutive years, and likewise Joe Smith, the American star from California. However, the Tricolour squad will have Herb Westman, star kicker of the 1933 team and last year with Ottawa, who is reported to be booting them as far as anyone. Doug Wigle, brother of the snap and captain, Fred Wigle, Laurie Byrne, and Tom Richert, another California star, will complete the half-line, which is reported to be dangerous all over. Johnny Riddell will probably be quarter. There are several experienced men available for front-line duties, i.e., Stockwell and Ruschin, insides; Hornig and MacArthur, middles; and Letourneau, Degnan, Hedge and Savage, outsides.

Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, said that as far as the fees were concerned he had heard of no objection in his faculty, and that the registration in first year was 12 per cent. higher. Dr. E. S. Ryerson of the faculty of Medicine, also reported a higher registration. "More bursaries have been established to help the good student who cannot afford the increase," he said, "and we are quite satisfied with the conditions as they exist now."

Dr. W. Secombe, Dean of the Faculty of Dentistry, also reported a higher registration in first year and in graduate students. However, the fees in first year Dentistry have actually been lowered, though those for the other years have been increased. "There is no movement of protest against the change in fees in Dentistry," stated Dr. Secombe, "and the additional loan fund established by the University seems to meet the situation adequately."

While statistics are not yet completed regarding the enrolment in Arts, Dr. W. T. Brown, principal of Victoria College, stated that the enrolment seemed to have gone down slightly in all years but the first. "The increase in fees has made it necessary to give more aid to students," said Dr. Brown, "but the gift of a friend has enabled us to do this. The aid we give is adjusted to the particular needs of the student, and it is not always necessary to pay their entire fees. However, it seems to be only fair that the majority who can afford it should pay for all their fees, which they were not doing before, and a protest is uncalculated for."

is rather lethargic, but this question will affect everyone."

H. W. Dewey, deputy-speaker of the Trinity Literary Institute, said that in his opinion the movement should be well supported, and that the students would stand behind it. "I think it a very worthwhile plan."

E. Ardagh, president of St. Hilda's College, waxed enthusiastic about the research which is being carried on. "I think it would be a wonderful thing," she stated. "It sounds like the very best thing for them to do. This reduction in fees has been hard lines for a great many people and I know that student opinion will be behind it." President of the Women's Undergraduate Association, Joyce Arnold said, "It all depends on what they bring up at the meeting tomorrow. We'll have to know just what they have found out about the situation before we can promise our support. But if we feel that they have sufficient grounds to present a case, we will support them."

The annual tie sale went off with a bang this year, and ties are still being sold. The salesmen were so convincing that even freshmen from the other colleges yielded and forked over $3.00, not realizing that they were wearing the wrong colours for their own college. It was not until they asked how they were going to wear the rest of the ties that they had purchased that the soft hearted, but supersalesmen U.C. Seven outstanding artists from the drama, the opera, the ballet, the radio and the music world will take part in the Auditorium Variety Series presented at the Eaton auditorium this year. The series based on the subscription plan will offer variety in a very literal sense.

The first to appear will be Cornelia Otis Skinner who will do an evening of her character sketches. Miss Skinner has appeared here before and has recently added to her popularity through the medium of radio. She will be followed by the leading exponent of Spanish dancing, La Argentina, who is also known as the "Queen of the Castanets."

The opera and films will contribute Nino Martini the Italian tenor whose picture, "Here's to Romance" will soon be released. In December comes Lauritz Melchior, a celebrated Danish singer whose interpretations of Wagner have won him fame at the Metropolitan Opera. Then comes Plátigorsky, the cellist, Trudi Schoop, the Swiss dancer with her troupe of twenty-two actor dancers. A continental favourite this will be her first tour of this continent. The concluding concert will be given in April by Miss Helen Jepson, the American soprano who made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera last season and who has also sung into the microphone.

SOCIETY IS OPENED TO RECORD HOUSE

Display of Humour Featured
Meeting of U.C. Literary Society

FRESHMEN MADE WELCOME

Many witty speeches, red and white ties, and an all time record attendance marked the opening of the U.C. Literary Society last night.

Special attention was paid to the freshmen who, it was said, were here to get the most out of the college, meaning, of course, that they should join the U.C. Literary Society.

Introduction speeches were made by the executive, Mr. Saul Rae, Mr. Shaeffer, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Stewart and Mr. Bridle.

Three very humorous speeches were then made by Dean Cochrane, Principal Wallace and Professor McAndrew. The Dean ventured, among other things, to give the story that lay behind each of those caricatures that adorn the walls of the junior common room. An outburst of enthusiasm followed each disclosure.

Following this were speeches by Mr. Macdonald of the S.A.C. and representatives of the French Club, the Dramatic Club and the S.C.M. of U.C.

Nominations were received for the office of assistant secretary of the society and the executive of first year. Elections of the latter will take place next Tuesday.

Not to be outdone by their friend and colleague Mr. Rae, Smith and Herment addressed a few words to their over-ready audience and the meeting closed with the singing of the Blue and White.

traditions of the University impressed Mary Searle, I U.C., who also thought Whitney Hall was an ideal residence. Evelyn Brown, I U.C., also said she found it very comfortable and that the food was excellent. "Though rather bewildered at first everyone was very friendly and helpful to us," was the opinion of Margaret McCombe, I U.C. and Pat Naylor, I U.C., who were pleased to find so much freedom. B. Holloway and Jean Houson, I Trinity, said they came prepared to like the University and so far have found that everything has lived up to their expectations. The only remonstrance seemed to be the delay in registering. However, registration being completed we hope that their first impressions will remain and that they will enjoy their first year at the University.

NEW HOCKEY COACH IS 'ACE' BAILEY

Former Maple Leaf Star will Guide Both

OUTLOOK IS BRIGHT

The hockey outlook at the University took on a brighter appearance during the summer with the appointment of Irvin "Ace" Bailey as coach of both junior and senior teams.

Bailey needs no introduction to the students, for his career as a member of the Toronto Maple Leafs is familiar to almost everyone. From the day when he played with Peterborough in the O.H.A. senior series until the night of the unfortunate accident in Boston which put an end to his career as a player, Bailey has always been considered one of the outstanding forwards in the game.

At the close of his playing days, Bailey entered the coaching end of the game and he has already acquired quite a reputation in this new field.

Last season his West Toronto Juniors, a team of green youngsters, made a fine showing in the strong Big Five group, and Varsity fans have every reason to hope that he will produce a couple of fighting teams for the Blue and White. He will be handicapped, as was his predecessor, by a shortage of first rank players, but if anyone can produce a winner with the material at hand, it is "Ace" Bailey, and the whole University wishes him success in his attempt to bring about a hockey revival in Queen's Park.

League, which hereby undertake immediately to subject to . . . what amounts to armed enforcement of economic boycott.

Such is briefly the position which League members found themselves in yesterday. Mussolini has in the last few days backed down from his former firm position and has talked arbitration to a slight extent. This weakening gives an opening into which Britain and her diplomatic allies, France and Soviet Russia, may throw all their weight in order to break up any strength Italy may have in international parliament.

Great Britain and her League allies have won the major skirmish. The big problem of the moment is finding a means whereby Mussolini may save the face of Fascism in Italy. Observers are very definite in stating that if Il Duce does not find some incident on which to let the synthetic emotional fervor of the Italian masses expend itself, Fascism will fall apart.

As things stand early this morning, the League of Nations, Britain's political weapon in European diplomacy, will offer Italy a settlement which will contain some concession concerning Italy's demand for control of Western Ethiopia joining Eritrea and Italian Somaliland. It will have to be enough not only to satisfy Italy's ruler as to its economic benefits but also enough to satisfy the demand of Italy's people for a victory for "greater Italy". Can this be done? Can military sanctions be used as a "big handle"? or will this new measure be forced to stand an actual test?

WORLD'S GREATEST PIANIST

Eaton Auditorium music masters series

For the second year the Music Masters series under the auspices of the Association of Women Teachers of Toronto Conservatory will be presented in Eaton Auditorium. This year it will be possible to secure reserved seats for students at a rate for the five concerts.

The series will present six of the world's great pianists. Friedman, Josef and Rosina Lhevinne, Hofmann, Myra Hess, and Jose Iturbi. Each of them are artists on the piano and each has a distinctive technique.

Ignaz Friedman is one of the great Polish pianists and ranks with three other masters from this country, Paderewski, de Pachman and Hofmann. Hofmann himself will appear later in the season, his concert will be in January.

The December concert will be given by Josef and Rosina Lhevinne. These two artists studied at the Moscow Conservatory together, graduating with gold medals. In February Myra Hess will make her appearance. Miss Hess is an outstanding English pianist and is famous for her remarkable knowledge of Bach of whose music she has made a life study.

THEATRE PRESENTS NEW FRENCH MOVIES

U.C. French Department Again
Co-operates in Theatre Programme

EACH SATURDAY MORNING

The French Department of University College are again cooperating with the management of the Hollywood Theatre in the presentation of a new series of talking pictures. As the result of the successful showing of French films last year, they will be shown as in the past on Saturday morning with two complete shows, the first at 10 a.m. and the second at 12 noon.

The pictures will deal with texts which are prescribed in the French courses at the University, and in order to foster interest the theatre is offering two scholarships of $25.00 each. The scholarships will be awarded on an examination based on the series of historical films which are being presented. The series is opening on the twelfth of October with the presentation of Dostoevsky's "Crime and Punishment" with Harry Bauer. Other films will be "La Mascotte," "Dumas," "Les Trois Mousquetaires" and two pictures featuring the work of Charles Boyer which has become known to Toronto audiences through his work in the Hollywood studios. Mr. Boyer will be seen in "L'epervier" and "La Bataille."

JEWISH SOCIETY PLANS DIVERSIFIED PROGRAMME

A widely diversified programme of Jewish cultural and Zionist activities on the campus is planned for the coming year by the recently elected executive of the Avukah Society, the only officially recognized Jewish undergraduate association. Plans have been made to include every Jewish student in the University in an active Zionist movement with definite aims and projects. The purpose of the Society is threefold—to arouse the interest of the students in Zionism; to afford out-of-town Jewish students a centre for their cultural, intellectual and social activities and to foster good will among the various denominational organizations on the campus.

Women's Sports

It's nice to get back from the holidays and find some good news waiting for you right first thing. The news was brought in by Madge Shaw, president of the University Tennis Club, and was to the effect that Varsity have an excellent chance of winning the intercollegiate tennis championship this year, and breaking Queen's two year hold on the cup. This optimistic report is based on something more substantial than the fact that the Queen's team will be much weaker due to the loss of Ruth Fishleigh, their first ranking player, for Varsity will undoubtedly have the strongest team which has represented them in years.

It is true that the team will miss Agnes Gardiner and Genevieve Logan, who have graduated, but Ellen Wilson and Madge Shaw, both members of last year's team, will again be available.

There will be a great old battle for the other two positions on the team. Jean Davey and Joyce Tenenbaum have already shown their ability, but they will receive plenty of opposition from at least three members of the freshman class. First is Claire Walsh who, on her showing in last summer's tournaments, must be ranked as the outstanding junior player in Eastern Canada. Claire has registered at Victoria and it goes without saying that she should make the team easily. Then there is Polly Shaw, Madge's younger sister, who is at U.C., and Ruby Barrett, who comes to us from the University of Saskatchewan.

Of course it is entirely likely that several other good players will come to light during the interfaculty tournament which starts on Monday, October seventh at the Toronto Tennis Club. This means that all college tournaments must be completed by the preceding Saturday, and a team of six players chosen from each college to contest the interfaculty tournament.

The Intercollegiate tournament will be held at London on October eighteenth and nineteenth. McGill will enter a team for the first time, and Toronto, Western, Queen's and McMaster will also compete.

And for the benefit of any freshmen who may think that tennis is the only sport played by Girls at Varsity, the intercollegiate basketball championship will be decided at Toronto this year, which should cause a lot of interest in the hoop game. The hockey situation is just as uncertain as it was last year, but it is a little too hot to think of that at the present time.

SENIORS ARE READY FOR INITIAL GAME

Play Balmy Beach in City Series Game Here Saturday

STRONG BACKFIELD UNIT

Under the capable supervision of Warren Stevens and Lew Newton Varsity rugby candidates have been fast rounding into shape for their city series game with Balmy Beach at the Blue bowl on this Saturday. Tuesday night the huge squad was divided into senior and intermediate divisions with Jack Dawson, stellar flying wing of former Blue teams, coaching the latter. This season Varsity will field one of the strongest backfield units ever seen in intercollegiate rugby circles. With the recent appearance of Mike

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By G. C. Vair

Greetings to the old followers of this column and the one new freshee who may hesitate long enough to skim over a line or two and glean the latest (?) sport news. At any rate, we are back with you and all ready to follow Canada's greatest fall sport. While the attendance at many sporting events has tended to slump badly in recent years football fans have tended to increase slightly in number or at least the game has gained in popularity. The fact that the Big Four have increased their schedule and that the intercollegiate have added a play-off game should substantiate the above statement. Other reasons have been forwarded and are no doubt true, in part at least, but the financial angle is ever prominent in this century.

The Blue and White open their 1935 campaign on Saturday when they meet the highly improved Balmy Beach squad in the inter-city series. In previous years four teams have tangled for the cup and a play-off was necessary but due to the breaking up of St. Mike's and Argonauts' increased schedule just two teams will do battle. The fact is to be regretted since the eastern paddlers and the western rowers have been at each other's throats from the first call for candidates early in the month and a game between them would have the fans overflowing the stadium. Certainly is odd how players switch teams in the same town. Must be nearer home!

The Balmies, having played one game and with a fast backfield behind a steady line, should rule as favourites. Nevertheless the Old Gold and Black will have to tighten up their play after reading reports from their game in the Limestone City last Saturday in which both majors were scored on fumbles. Coach Alex Ponton has adopted Ottawa Rough Riders style of play with the backs and quarterback being the only men to carry the ball.

The Varsity gridders have been taking out the kinks in two practices daily for the past two weeks and should be fit and ready for the opener. Cam Gray, shifty backfielder and the team's drop kicker, should start the season off at top speed having practiced with the Sarnia Imps for three weeks before they went west. It seems that last June was graduating time for the biggest percentage of wingmen and plungers ever to go in one summer at Varsity and consequently Lew Newton is having a busy time rounding out a new set to replace the old. Yet with the services of Greco, Holden and Oakley plus new material, we expect little trouble in this department.

Queen's and Teddy Reeve will require attention this fall since the Toronto columnist and coach has been fortunate in having a great number of last year's champions return to the fold. The Tricolour appear to be set on retaining the mug but the Blues have different ideas. Don't forget that Western and McGill are still in the league and a change of coach has put more than one team at the top of the ladder in a single season. Where did we finish four short years ago?

Coach Loudon is busy these days whipping his rowing crews into shape for the annual boat race with McGill on the Lachine canal. The gray-haired mentor intends to keep his long string of victories intact. This year Varsity will enter their 150 lb. crew in addition to their regular heavy squad. Can they finish one-two? We think so.

Valeriote, former Western and Argos star, the competition will be keener than ever. The disbanding of the St. Michael's O.R.F.U. entry meant the valuable addition of Connelly and Marks, both tricky backfielders and experts in receiving and heaving the elusive pigskin. Besides these new arrivals such proven stars as Webber, Cam Gray and Bobby Ishbiert will again be the rearguard for the Blue and White.

Bobby Coulter sustained a broken thumb in practice Tuesday night and will be on the sidelines for a time but his place will be capably filled by "Whitey" Miller, fast moving quarterback who spent the 1934 season under the guidance of Lew Hayman.

The team suffered another rude jolt when Ken Harris was declared ineligible and thus leaves a hole in the none too strong line. However, Newton is giving the boys plenty of pointers and they will no doubt provide some powerful opposition once the whistle goes. "Slash" Oakley at inside is a new man from Assumption and has the reputation of being able to stand up under fire. Gus Greco, stand-out plunger of last season, has returned, but the potentialities of the remaining linemen are as yet rather an uncertain quantity since few have been in senior company.

Jack Holden will again be found at his outside position along with Red Burke of last year's eastern Canadian mythical all-stars. Lynch and Buck will alternate at outside. The flying wing position vacated by Dawson is being strongly contended for by Bill Bodrug and Cassan.

TWO VARSITY TEAMS IN ROWING CLASSIC

Intercollegiate Championship will be Decided at Lachine

McGILL UNKNOWN QUANTITY

On Saturday, October 5th, cheering thousands will line the banks of the two-mile course of the historic Lachine Canal at Montreal to watch three mighty crews battle for the Intercollegiate rowing supremacy of Canada.

This annual classic, hitherto limited to two crews, one from Varsity and one from McGill, will have added interest this year, since Coach Loudon of Varsity is entering his 150-pound as well as his heavy crew. Since the first Intercollegiate race in 1924, McGill has won twice, namely in 1924 and 1925, while Varsity has won the succeeding eight races.

This year the situation is more complicated not only because of the entry of a second Varsity crew, but because the McGill crew is an "unknown quantity." The ranks of the red and white scullers were so weakened by graduations last June, that recently they 'phoned to ask if they might use two men from the Lachine Rowing Club. Professor Loudon promptly replied: "You can use policemen as long as you get a crew together."

The Varsity Heavy Crew made a fine showing at the Canadian Henley

PROVINCIAL ACTION CRITICIZED IN RESTRICTING COLLEGE GRANTS

General Feeling Favourable Toward Activities of Committee

DENTS DON'T MIND

General approval of the work of the Ad Hoc committee in uniting the faculty and the students in a protest against the reduction of the government grant to the University was revealed by a survey of student opinion conducted by The Varsity yesterday.

Representatives from practically every faculty on the campus were interviewed. Some few were apathetic, believing that nothing the students could do would accomplish anything. The majority however agreed that the committee was a good idea if it actually carried on to the end and was not satisfied with mere talk. Even those not personally affected by the increase in fees believed that a protest should be raised and that all the students should support it for the benefit of the student body as a whole.

"We should be granted parliamentary representation as are the British Universities," said G. A. Boyd, II Trinity. "Then student protest against this and similar measures could be effectively registered and would carry weight in the proper quarters."

No disapproval of the University was expressed, it being quite accepted that no other course was possible under the circumstances of the grant being reduced.

Some faculties are more seriously affected than others. Physiotherapy, a small course, feels the increase considerably, according to Miss A. Nicholl. Social Science, on the other hand, is not particularly affected. Miss Davis in Dentistry thought the students in her course would not complain much because they know their course is an expensive one and are prepared for high fees. Medicine, Miss Barbara Watts stated, would quite definitely back the movement for everyone feels the increase. Another medical student thought

Tablet in Hall Commemorates
Work of Noted Architect

GOTHIC AUTHORITY

Last autumn immediately following the death of Mr. Henry Sproatt, architect in the well-known firm of Sproatt and Rolph, the Board of Stewards of Hart House took action in order to make some fitting gesture to preserve the memory of this man whose architectural skill is embodied in the structure of Hart House. The result of the efforts of the Board of Stewards is the tablet now in evidence in the front hall of the House. The simple but effective wording of the tablet reads: "To the memory of Henry Sproatt, an honorary Doctor of this University, sometime President of the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts, and a Fellow of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, who was born in 1866 and died in 1934. His skill as a master of the Gothic form is woven into the fabric of this House."

Seventeenth century Gothic lettering is employed, giving effective form to the thought of the memorial. The Board of Stewards felt that this simply worded stone was a tribute which would have pleased the unerring sense of beauty combined with simplicity, which marked the creations of Doctor Sproatt. The cost of the tablet is being shared by Hart House and the Massey Foundation.

CHAPEL RENOVATED AND BEAUTIFIED

Murals to be Painted on Wall by a Noted Artist,
Will Ogilvie

The Hart House Chapel has recently undergone some improvements. The furnishings and equipment of this sacred edifice are gradually being adjusted to blend in with the harmony and purpose of this beautiful room. The benches which were considered too large and awkward are being replaced by chairs. The east end of the Chapel and the reading desk have been lowered. The walls have been panelled in oak. Further improvements will be undertaken this winter.

Mr. Will Ogilvie, one of Canada's foremost younger artists will be occupied this winter in doing a mural along the south wall above the panelling. Mr. Ogilvie will also decorate the wall immediately above the chancel. The murals will be after the style of William Blake. The programme of improvement which the chapel is now undergoing is expected to be completed sometime next spring.

Vic Frosh Pull a Dirty Trick Sophs Are Still Tomato-sick

Bushels and bushels of over-ripe tomatoes and goodness knows how much flour turned the warlike gentlemen of 1st and 2nd years Victoria into ghastly white and bloody figures at the official initiation fight on the Vic field yesterday afternoon. Spectators laughed and dodged tomatoes, and the gayly be-decked freshmenes thrilled and shrieked as their masculine classmates walked all over the hopelessly outnumbered Sophomores.

The lowly frosh, unforgivably big and burly, pulled the best freshman stunt seen for years when they had a truck drive up with their ammunition just before the fight started. This gave them a moral advantage which they soon lost when the desperate Sophs poured several buckets of flour over their heads as they strained against the pushball.

However the freshmen won both tilts in most convincing fashion and enlivened the proceedings by giving individual members of 3T8, giving particular attention to the youngest of the Sissons brothers. But they were somewhat startled by a very diminutive 2nd year man.

Referee Bill Little had several narrow escapes from flying tomatoes but escaped unscathed, and rang his cowbell with complete abandon. The frosh added insult to injury when they fought the Sophs at even odds as regards numbers and emerged victorious, thus winning undying honour for 3T9.

Even Thomas Hardy Considered Improper

"Jude the Obscure" Removed After Professor's Complaint

There has been some discussion in the local newspapers about the recent books of Morley Callaghan, Toronto author and a graduate of this University. According to the author, his books can not be obtained at the public libraries, although Dr. Locke, the chief librarian, denies this.

When W. S. Wallace of our own library was interviewed by The Varsity on this subject, he stated that Mr. Callaghan's books are in circulation in the library of the University. "There are some books taken out of general circulation and put under lock and key," stated Mr. Wallace. "This may be done for various reasons, and not necessarily because of the content of the books. Some works are locked up because of their rarity, value, or the fineness of their binding. Others," Mr. Wallace went on to say, "are taken out of circulation because of complaints made to us." In this connection Mr. Wallace told of an incident that occurred during his predecessor's time. A professor asked that Thomas Hardy's "Jude, the Obscure" be taken out of circulation. In the course of time the professor withdrew his complaint, explaining that since he had read some of our contemporary works he had decided that "Jude, the Obscure" might just as well be back in general circulation.

Mr. Wallace was careful to assure The Varsity that actually no books are banned. Even the ones out of general circulation may be obtained by students if they have a good reason for wanting them. Some books, especially those of medical and legal nature are banned by law, and are obtainable only upon presentation of special certificates.

HART HOUSE GLEE CLUB HAS INITIAL PRACTISE

Conductor Has Obtained Some New Arrangements from England

The Hart House Glee Club held their first meeting for this term in the Music Room, Hart House, yesterday afternoon. The president, Mr. W. K. W. Baldwin, conducted the meeting.

Most significant was the fact that what has been known as the Men's Glee Club of the University of Toronto is now Hart House Glee Club and only members of the House are eligible for club membership.

Mr. C. Peaker, Mus.Bac, who conducted the club last year, was welcomed back. He briefly outlined the proposed year's programme which will include preparing some fine numbers for part singing, which he procured in England last summer.

Following the business part of the meeting there was a short practice, and an opportunity for those present to enrol as members.

The club plans to put on a Friday afternoon concert in December and possibly a Sunday evening concert next spring as they did last year.

Increased Schedule Prevents Argonauts from Entering City Series

STRONG BLUE BACKFIELD

Tomorrow afternoon the Big Blue team will open the 1935 football season when they encounter Balmy Beach in the one and only game for the Reg. De Gruchy Memorial Cup, emblematic of the city championship. Formerly there were four teams in the hunt for the trophy but St. Mike's are no longer playing and Argos, playing an increased schedule, cannot afford the time.

Downtown sports writers are calling the Balmies to win, but they scarcely can unless they show a marked improvement over their performance against Queen's last Saturday in a game featured by fumbles and misplays on both sides. Headed by Ab Box, who punted Argos to a Dominion championship two years ago, and Hempey, star immigrant from Montreal, the East-enders can certainly boast a formidable line-up including Pope, Doug Waugh, formerly with Queen's, and Borgoyne, a former Varsity star, who is playing quarter.

Yesterday afternoon, Warren Stevens' charges held a closed practice in the Stadium, and it may be taken for granted that this year Varsity will be represented by a team that can go places hard and fast. The front line may not be as strong as it was last season but the backfield is certain to be a six-nimble threat to any team. Big Bob Isbister is booting them higher and farther than ever and along with Webster and Gray provides a half-line of proven ability. In addition there is Valeriot of Western and Argo fame, who is trying out for a place on the backfield, and Connelly and Marks, the former St. Mike's stars. The last-named can pass the ball with rare precision and may be often called upon to do so.

It appears now that Bobby Coulter's thumb was not broken last Tuesday as was first thought and he may be in the game tomorrow. But if he shouldn't "Whitely" Miller will replace him at quarter. Al Williams will snarl the ball for Varsity, supported on either side by

S.C.M. Corner

The Student Christian Movement of Canada brought Dr. Wilhelm Pauck, of Chicago Theological Seminary to Canada as morning speaker for the Central Area Conference at Lake Couchiching, September 11th-20th. Dr. Pauck is probably now known to many more Toronto students than the seventy five who were at the Conference, as he has been spending the last two days in Toronto and has met a number of student groups.

Dr. Pauck was born in Germany and studied in the Universities of Berlin and Göttingen. He has been on this side of the water for a number of years, but this is his first visit to Canada. He is Professor of Church History and Historical Theology in Chicago Theological Seminary.

The theme of the Conference, upon which Dr. Pauck gave his addresses, was "The Validity of Christianity for the Modern Student and Present-Day Society". The stimulating quality of his addresses and their comprehensiveness formed an extremely good background for the group discussions.

The evening addresses were on the world situation and included an address on "The Function of a University" by Dr. Wallace; one on "Analysis of the World Situation" by Mr. Riddell; an evening on "Political Aspects" including short addresses by Mrs. Vlastos, Mr. Frye, Mr. Riddell and Dr. Thompson.

Will We Fight? If So, Whom?

The ominous and persistent rumblings of war issuing from that now famous but recently unknown sunbaked desert in equatorial Africa threatens at any time to again release the fury and resulting horror which inflicted the greatest tragedy of all time on the earlier part of this century.

Should that threatened holocaust materialize Canadians may again be faced with the problem of deciding just what sacrifices they are prepared to make and what they are making them for. That decision would be much better made now than later. While this may be difficult at present we can at least acquaint ourselves with the facts of the case. This would render us much more capable of adequately solving our problem than were we to attempt to arrive at a solution after the impending disaster and all its confusion was upon us.

Canadians today are just as patriotic as ever before. But their patriotism demands that they be thoroughly acquainted with the situation before they decide on any action which may involve the loss of Canadian blood on a foreign soil.

The situation in Africa cannot be lightly regarded. The most recent announcement from the danger zone to the effect that war is a near certainty is alarming. No less alarming but more startling is the announcement that who will fight whom is not at all certain. Information of this nature is not likely to fan the patriotic ardour of Canadians to the degree where they are ready and anxious to rush headlong into any conflict, regardless of the consequences. Canadians would to a man defend Canada against an attack, but they have evolved from the stage where they would volunteer for military service in a foreign country against an enemy chosen by something similar to the flip of a coin.

Dictatorship For Canadians

October 14th, 1935, is a date pregnant with significance to Canada. For the first time in her history, no less than six groups are contending for supremacy in the handling of her affairs Conservative, Liberal, Co-operative Commonwealth Federationist, Reconstructionist, Social Creditor and Communist struggle for the prize.

Who will win?

Answer: Canada will lose. It is too bad that these six figures who cry of each other, "Vote for him and thou shalt surely reap the tares of dictatorship," have flunked dismally in their Recent European History. What do the stories of Il Duce Mussolini, Der Fuehrer Hitler, Pierre Laval, the late King Alexander reveal? Without exception they reveal that in a representative democratic state, dictatorship does not come by the orderly process of the ballot box. Dictatorship arises when, in a time of national tension or emergency, the orderly process of the ballot box fails to provide vital leadership and unity of command. Then comes the opportunity for some courageous spirit, who has the strength to lead, the personality to command a following, either to seize or to be given the helm. Tired of the dissensions and vacillations that have produced nothing but misery in their ranks, the masses of the people turn to this new guiding star to lead them from their trouble.

There is no political figure in sight on the Canadian scene with the dynamic ruthlessness of Hitler or Mussolini, and it is doubtful if Canadian conditions are right for such autocratic leadership. But there is also no political group strong enough, as was the Democratic party in United States in 1932 and '34, to give any one man an overwhelming executive power by constitutional means.

Canada is putting her order in for a dictatorship. Unless two or more of these six bulls who are butting their heads into the ring in the most fantastic free-for-all that Canada has ever seen, can settle their differences and team up, we are on the way to a chaos exactly parallel to the muddle in which France found herself for fifteen years after the war, when elections and new cabinets were the order of the month or even the week, when sometimes a dozen and a half factions tore at each other's throats and the country called the government an ass. Of such are the birth-pangs of dictators.

Weigh Your Load

Now is the time when we are shouldering our work for the coming year. Some of us know from experience the dangers of overtaxing our capacity. The percentage of those who are unsuccessful in their year's work varies but little from year to year. Among the number you will always find those who failed because they attempted too much. The result invariably leads to discouragement and lack of faith in one's own ability. Analysis may show that thoughtlessness was more to blame than inability.

Standards are high in this University and every course involves plenty of hard work. In addition to that, social and athletic activities make demands. It is in dealing with these that we overload. Everything attempted takes more time than it was expected to take. Membership in a club or enrolment on a team is highly desirable. Membership in several clubs or enrolment on several teams is highly disastrous.

It is a matter of regret that we lack a means of checking up on capacity and load early in the term. There should be a "truck drive over scales" scheme whereby an official could weigh our load and suggest a maximum. But there isn't. It's up to each student to determine his own burden. Those of the first year especially, would be well advised to avoid loading themselves too heavy. It doesn't pay. A little more than enough is by far too much.

A Complete If Small World

For the next seven or eight months the University practically becomes our world. It provides all the requirements for a well rounded life, especially for the out-of-town students. They send an occasional letter home, or elsewhere. They receive a few letters, (possibly more than they write) from home, or elsewhere. They scan the "News of the World in Brief", as it appears in The Varsity. Apart from that, for the majority, there is little contact with the outside world.

People wonder why students disappear during the college year as if into a shell. They fail to realize that the student finds everything here. We are all essentially the same. We all crave means of expressing ourselves. But the means which we select for self-expression are varied. If one is a worshipper of Mars, he may join the C.O.T.C. If he admires the dove of peace he may join the Pacifist Movement. Between the extremes lie scores of organizations through which a satisfying means of expression may be found. If no organization exists, students are free to form one to suit their needs. On this account new clubs are constantly being formed. The result is that while we are here, our attention is almost entirely absorbed by duties, interests and friendships. Our little world is complete.

Members of the senior class at the University of Oregon have appointed "cops" to see that the freshmen are not treated too brutally.

First, in gym.—Let's go and play train!
Second—Whaty you mean, play train?
First—Run around the track.

The University of Oxford has discovered that one of its students is working his way through college by acting as attendant in a beauty parlour. The enterprising undergraduate is said to have acquired much knowledge which is not obtainable at Oxford.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Promenade Concert

Last night's Promenade Symphony Concert was devoted to the dance music of well known composers and assisted by a Norwegian Folk Dance Group under the direction of Nils Tveit. Mr. Stewart began with the Fifth and the Third Hungarian Dances by Brahms and then turned to Beethoven's Seventh Symphony to complete the first half of the programme. After the intermission the orchestra played the Valse Triste of Sibelius and Borodin's Dances Polovtsiennes from Prince Igor. In general the programme was pleasant but the selection of numbers was not as appealing as usual. The most outstanding selection was the Valse Triste, the interpretation of which was well in keeping with the story which is associated with the music. So popular with the audience was this number that it had to be repeated, before Mr. Stewart could proceed with the programme.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crockower

Tomorrow afternoon you and you and you will be given an opportunity of starting right in on the greatest sport of the fall season, namely grandstand-quarterbacking. The occasion will be the one and only game for the Reg De Gruchy Memorial Cup between Balmy Beach and Varsity. We're repeating all this for the benefit of the freshmen who weren't persuaded to buy a copy of yesterday's edition. The game, among other things, should serve as a sort of a reunion for a good many of the contestants as several of the East Enders have at one time or another been proud possessors of a Blue and White jersey. We imagine that Coach Alex Ponton of the Beachers will have a hard job getting some of his charges to run in the proper direction and similarly the Blues will have to convince Upper and the other ex-Blues not to join the college huddle. Should be quite a task shouldn't it?

Before we continue we want to admit that we know very little about either team as yet as we've only watched the Blues in one practice effort and haven't seen the Balmies at all. Consequently all we can do is pass on what we've heard and read. Ponton will parade a crew which has had a good deal of drilling and which has had a tough game down in Kingston. The Blues, on the other hand, will be making their debut for the season. The Easterners are rated the favourites and we think justly so. Furthermore, we believe that the Beach squad will emerge victorious. This, however, should not change the fact that the game will be well worth seeing. From what we have seen of Marks and company the Beachers are going to have their hands full for sixty minutes. Hughie Marks is still throwing the old oval around with rare abandon and if Cam Gray and Joe Connolly get their hands on some of his splendid passes the Old Gold and Black tacklers will surely have a busy afternoon. Young Bobby Coulter will watch the game from the side-lines due to a sprained thumb. The master-minding will be done by Whitey Miller. As a last word—let's not miss the game. Let's give our lads some real encouragement from the opening whistle. How about it?

* * *

Among other things we noted at yesterday's private practice session was that our old friend Shnoz Dawson has turned master-mind. The popular ex-flying-wing it seems, is scheduled to coach the Seconds. The Blue juniors have definitely been entered in the T.R.U. series along with Mimico, Parkdale Grads, Balmy Beach, Eastsides, Westsides and Belmonts. This group should provide plenty of action.

* * *

For the lazy fellows at the University we've discovered a new(?) way of getting P.T. exemptions. Why not join the band and in addition get a swell uniform? There are other inducements too, such as trips to all out-of-town games, free admission to all Blue home games and a host of other things. Applications should be made out immediately as the uniforms will soon be distributed.

THE

By E. S. W.

There is no time like the present to begin the little pep talks that appear in this column from time to time. We are directing our attention to the freshmen in particular. We want to see a large number of you out there fighting like fends for your college or faculty teams. If you make an inter-collegiate team, it's all the better. You will have a lot of fun either way, and will get to know a great many people. So pick out your sport, and prepare to do or die for dear old Whoosis.

* * *

The tennis tournaments which start next week will give everyone a chance to get into the spirit of things. These should start on Monday for sure, so that they may be played off by the end of the week. The freshmen from St. Hilda's have responded nobly, and we expect that Vic and U.C. will do the same.

* * *

The interfaculty golf tournament, which is sponsored by University College, will be one of the major events of next week. It will be held at the Ladies' Golf and Tennis Club, on Friday, October 4. The club is about four miles outside the city limits, on the Yonge Street highway. The tournament will start at 9.30 a.m., and there will be prizes for the best gross, net, driving, approaching, and putting. U.C. presented all the prizes last year, but this year St. Hilda's has offered to contribute one. Helen Dougan is in charge, and if you want any further information, phone her at Hu. 0524. She and Jean Atkinson, the Women's Athletic Director at U.C., are trying to

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

The piece de resistance, Beethoven's Dance Symphony, gave an opportunity for the stringed section to display their ability. A very pleasing effect was gained by the cellos in the Allegretto movement.

The assisting artists, a group of Norwegian dancers, presented three folk dances of that country. This presentation while showing an earnest desire to interpret Scandinavian traditions, did not have the necessary grace and finish. The dances, variations on the May Pole theme, displayed the characteristic Norwegian trait of combining dexterity and clumsiness.

son; an address on Peace by Mr. Arnold Smith; an address on "Missions" by Miss Wong; an address by Dr. Line on "The Church". The emphasis of the Conference moved definitely to the social problem, as evidenced both by the temper of the addresses and discussions, and by the student forum which was held. Many of those who were at the Conference will have a much clearer idea of the meaning of the social task and of the tasks of the S.C.M. in this connection. A second student forum held near the end of the Conference indicated, however, that in many cases the background of the Conference thinking on the social question was vague and that the religious basis for social action was not clear. In his concluding address Dr. Pauck emphasized the different tasks of religious communities through the ages and the place of the social emphasis was more clearly seen.

One of the features of the Conference which has not been mentioned was the folk dancing which was led by Mr. and Mrs. John Madsen of Toronto. Many students will know Mr. and Mrs. Madsen and appreciate what it meant to have them at the Conference.

The influence of the Conference on the activities of the S.C.M. in the coming year will be rather more than usual in the opinion of the writer, as the Conference leadership and personnel was particularly stimulating this year. Dr. Pauck is to be thanked particularly for his contribution.

HOUSE IS DEMOLISHED TO PARK STAFF CARS

St. George Street Eye-Sore Shortly to be Beautified

Colonel Le Pan, Superintendent of Buildings for the University, yesterday cleared up the mystery about the vacant lot next to the Women's Union on St. George St. The house which formerly occupied the site, was considered by University authorities as being too expensive to rehabilitate, and therefore its demolition was decided upon to provide a parking space for staff cars. Previous to this, the restricted area around Convocation Hall was the only area to accommodate staff cars, and an increased accommodation has been needed for some time. Although at the moment the space is an eye-sore on St. George St., arrangements may be made in the future to beautify the site.

Wycliffe Growing Old to Dream 'Twas I thought a C.C.F. Scheme

Last night as the crowds swept out of the Symphonic Arena, they were greeted by an amazing spectacle—an unusual piece of electioneering. The C.C.F. had stumped the city from Sunnyside to Victoria Park. That we knew. But this seemed to be the limit. This was going after the working class with a vengeance. Pushing forward to catch a glimpse of our favourite C.C.F.ers we saw—the Wycliffe frosh. Dressed in reverse with wisps of mislin floating around their heads, the frosh were going through their paces. "Paces" consisted of demonstrating the spiritual solemnity of the future guardians of the Church.

Then swinging into a martial tune which sounded vaguely like "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" they turned down turnstile lane that leads to Wycliffe College. They saw a lonely boy with a lonely girl who had evidently lost their way. They trailed them swiftly, at the same time shouting at the top of their voices; and with blood-thirsty mien, turned onto the trembling couple and fell flat on their faces (their own). Even Highly Salacious in Ethiopia never bowed the knee more eloquently. Coats still backwards and the curtained neckties and headress still in place (in places) they trooped sentimentally down the lane crooning "When I Grow Too Old to Dream"—a touching tune, that brought tears to the eyes of more than one observer. It contrasted favourably we could only think, with the strains of the Prince Igor which had scarcely died away. We turned our footsteps away reflecting sadly on the dignity of man how little lower than angels. . . .

AMBITION OF YEARS REALIZED; BLUES WIN DE GRUCHY CUP

WIDE DEVELOPMENTS FOR PEACE LEAGUE ARE ANTICIPATED

Universities Contacted from Every Province in Canada

FASCISM CONDEMNED

Woodsworth Favours Economic Boycott — Condemns Sanctions

Expectations of nation-wide development within the coming year for the Student Peace Movement were voiced today in an interview given by Mr. Kenneth Woodsworth, the leader of the Movement at Varsity.

Contacts have been made at Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Western, Queen's, McGill, and Dalhousie, and units are already set up at Queen's and Western. Included in the plans of the Varsity unit are participation in the proposed Pan-American Peace Conference to be held in South America, and in the Eastern Canada Conference, the latter to include the units from Western to Dalhousie.

Plans for the immediate future are indefinite, but preparations are under way for an imposing Armistice Day celebration, in which the Student Christian Movement is expected to co-

STUDENT MASS MEETING TO PROTEST HIGH FEES

Proportion of Cut in Ontario Budget Borne by Varsity Thought Unfair

FACULTY VIEWPOINT GIVEN

Committee of Five to Probe Highly Mooted Bursary System

As a result of the report given by Harold Acker, a member of the Canadian Youth Council working in collaboration with the newly formed Ad Hoc Committee, at a meeting Friday afternoon in the Women's Union, it has been decided to call a mass meeting of students to protest the reduction of the government grant resulting in increased fees.

With Ken Woodsworth acting as chairman the meeting opened at 4.15 p.m. and after a short resume of the history of the investigation into the situation, Harold Acker read the report. In drawing up the report, use was made of provincial accounts, the President's report, Mr. Hepburn's budget address and various other sources.

The basic decision, that the reduction in grant and increase in fees was unwarranted was embodied in three points: first, the provincial grant has been cut more than the provincial cut in the budget warrants; secondly, the provincial grant to University cut more than provincial grant in education warrants; finally, the cost in administration has risen relative to the cost of the University grants.

After the report was read Paul Bridle, chairman of the original Ad Hoc Committee, told the audience the University's point of view. According to President Cody, although the cut was nearly $100,000, thus making the increase in fees appear out of proportion, in reality it was $200,000 owing to the fact that the last year's deficit and the allocation to the museum made

BOOK EXCHANGE SALES FLOURISH

Books Guaranteed Against Loss — No Trouble Up to Date

CLOSES OCTOBER 5

Mr. Ross D. Crosby, manager of the S.C.M. Book Exchange, reports that business is better than ever before and that sales to date show a considerable increase over last year.

The Exchange is located on the second floor of Hart House and exists for the purpose of assisting mutually profitable book sales between undergraduates. Books on every subject on the University Calendar from Geology to Theology will be found there. Students of all courses are invited to bring their old text books, which are offered at the student's prices. The S.C.M. absolutely guarantees to return either the books or money. For this service the S.C.M. retains ten per cent. of the sale price.

Last year over $160 worth of books were stolen, which loss was sustained by the Exchange. Changes in methods have been made, and no trouble of this sort has been met so far. The Exchange closes on October 5, and the main volume of business is expected during the coming week.

ABERHART'S SCHEME WILL NOT WORK STATES PLUMPTRE

Would Decrease Purchasing Power Rather Than Increase It

SCORES TURNOVER TAX

Neither Banks nor Ottawa Would Give Credit is Belief

"I am quite sure it is impossible to put into effect the various financial proposals contained in the pamphlet which Aberhart issued before the Alberta elections," said Mr. A. F. W. Plumtre, noted writer on money and banking and member of the Economics staff of the University, when interviewed by The Varsity. He made it clear that the whole Aberhart scheme of social credit would result in a decrease, rather than an increase, in the purchasing power of the people.

When asked whether the proposed dividend, in itself, was practicable, Mr. Plumtre pointed out that though from a theoretical point of view the dividend could be paid out of increased taxation yet the enormous amount of administrative work which would be required would be an insurmountable obstacle in the way of an efficient and economical handling of the dividend vouchers and records. He pointed out that the main difference between the Douglas and Aberhart systems of Social Credit is that the former plans to create credit, which is a form of money, in a continuous stream and to distribute it in order to overcome the shortage of purchasing power, whereas the latter would overcome the shortage by distributing social credit dividends covered by money raised through taxation.

"Aberhart's proposal," Mr. Plumtre pointed out, "involves a heavy 'turn-over tax', i.e., a tax on every transaction."

DID CANADA CAUSE THE NEXT WAR?

Canadians Opposed Italian Plan to Redistribute Resources

ARTICLE BY ESCOTT REID

The latest issue of the Saturday Night contains the provocative article: "Did Canada Cause the Next War?" The author is Mr. Escott Reid of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs. Mr. Reid presents an angle of the present tense situation in Europe that is unknown or glossed over by most Canadians, reaching his sensational conclusion in three logical stages.

First, explains the international Affairs director, Italy needs room for expansion; has needed it for the past decade; and will need it even more in the future. With emigration closed to her the peninsula must industrialize her surplus population. Barren of resources, she must import from abroad. But that requires foreign currency; and Italy's three chief sources of foreign currency—emigrant remittances, tourist traffic and manufactured exports—have faded lamentably. Italy's need for colonies, then, is inevitable. Mussolini's campaign for more babies is only a side factor, and has in any case, been unsuccessful, as Italian birth statistics show.

Secondly, Mr. Reid contends, Italy has four alternatives to war—"shoot Mussolini; birth control; hunger-all-round; and international economic co-operation." The first three are shown to be either futile or impossible. The fourth alone is practicable; but—and

FINAL SCORE 11-1

Ab Box Absent from Line-up Beaches Helpless After Initial Score

By G. C. Vair

Playing a fast, open style of football for the first three quarters Varsity Blues defeated Alex. Ponton's highly touted Beaches 11-1 at the Varsity Stadium Saturday to take the Reg. DeGruchy cup. The collegians completely demoralized the eastern collection of stars when they chalked up a try and a convert early in the second quarter after a thirty-five yard forward, Marks to Connelly, took them to the Beach's five-yard line and Valerie carried it over in two short plunges, Coulter converting.

The game, played under perfect weather conditions, was featured by sparkling end runs, forward passes and the inevitable fumbles, typical of pre-season tilts. The backfielders were called on to do the greater part of the ball carrying and in this department the Blues showed to their best advantage. The visitors opened the scoring early

British Idealism Strengthens League

In the middle of the hodge-podge of diplomatic bickering now being witnessed at Geneva, one of the brightest and most ennobling sights is Britain's stand for peace and the League itself.

In a mechanized world, idealism is a rare quality and a display of a great nation risking her own national security for the ideal that is the League of Nations is a high mark in world history.

If Italy should conquer Ethiopia the African fiasco would not end there. Any successful violation of the covenant of the League will only induce weakness and final collapse of the world's one co-operative effort to maintain peace.

Britain, as the cynic sees her, is merely taking the lead at Geneva to maintain the Empire intact—to retain the lands gained by imperialistic conquest. But that seems secondary.

Britain's brilliant leadership in the drive for peace during the past two weeks is more than self-interest. It is definitely for the world itself—it is for peace.

Without Anthony Eden and Sir Samuel Hoare Italy would never have wavered in her determination to war against Ethiopia. With Britain and France aligned definitely against her, Italy had reconsidered the issue. Perhaps there will still be war in Africa and even war in Europe but British efforts to prevent a conflict have been noble and civilized.

Funny If Not Effective

There is an element in democracy that has been somewhat overlooked by the zealous exponents of the theory of political freedom. In short it is the mirth and amusement, provoked unintentionally enough, by political men as they stump the country for their chosen party.

The present election campaign provides a field day for the citizen with an interest in Canadian affairs and a humorous bent of mind. A reasonable amount of humor in politics prevents them from becoming too pedagogical—it saves politics for the masses.

Now Premier Bennett told a respectable west coast audience the other night that the ragged, vagabond On-to-Ottawa marchers had intended to oust him from office in the capital and flutter the emblem of Soviet Russia from the turrets of the Peace Tower.

The eloquent plea for a stable Canadian government was ennobling but Canadians who knew the relief camp situation chuckled wholeheartedly at the fears of Mr. Bennett.

Then Liberal leader King stood firmly on an Edmonton platform and told Albertans the Social Crediters were being subsidized by the Tory party. Political leaders are outdoing themselves in making wide generalizations and drawing conclusions which amaze and then amuse Canadian voters.

With the exception of our own Premier Hepburn, political leaders in this campaign do not try to be funny, but many of them are showing themselves to be born comics. This campaign is providing more contradictions, more ridiculous charges, counter-charges and ludicrous situations than any recent provincial contest.

The amount of constructive thinking and speaking by our contemporary politicians gets less and less as the campaign degenerates into an inevitable dog fight. Raising wild charges and the communist bogey on political platforms is not going to aid in solving Canada's problems. Nevertheless the political circus we are now witnessing illustrates the mirth-provoking tendency in Canadian democracy. It produces an interest—if only a humorous interest—in the election.

Amazing posters pleading for a "chance for youth" and a united Canada, etc., etc. Travelling vaudeville shows, three ring circuses and dazzling choruses should follow to make the picture complete.

Radio orators may monopolize the air, ward heelers and stooges may annoy and common sense may be at a minimum but Canadian citizens are bound to be amused, humored and probably delighted by the queer antics of our politicians as October 14 approaches.

One Way To Look At It

Initiations have seemed for some time past, more particularly since that unfortunate incident at Alberta University two years ago, to be gradually going out of fashion. The sophomores of University College announced this year that a formal reception would be accorded the freshmen instead of any rough house initiation. They are to be commended for their intelligence. A new day of enlightenment glimmers on the horizon.

But hazing has not entirely left this campus, witness the flour and tomato fight related in Friday's Varsity. Nor can one walk along St. George Street of an evening without meeting hordes of sophomores escorting hapless frosh in unseemly attire.

From McMaster comes word that after being suspended last year, initiations have been reintroduced with a vengeance, and by the women too! The purpose of initiations is, so it is said, "to eradicate any sense of dignity or pride the freshmen may have had upon entering the University." It has always seemed to us that the crying need of this generation was to have a little dignity inspired in it not eradicated from it. What we admire most about the old English universities is the air of dignity and hoary tradition that hovers about them. The true student approaches his university with awe and dignity. It is lamentable that the actions of a few misguided youths should be allowed to shatter this illusion.

The fact that the University tries to impress upon the incoming students is that they are no longer boys and girls, but men and women. That is the essential difference between high school and university. Here we are taught from the first to shoulder our own responsibilities, to think for ourselves; we are grown-up. So it is grown-ups, not children, who engineer these initiation fights and bed races!

Besides being undignified and infantile, initiations are in many cases unkind. The freshmen are new to the University, frequently they are new to the city. Many of them have never lived away from home before. What a much more charitable action it is to do as the University College sophomores are doing, to welcome the freshman as a guest than to drop him in Rosedale in the middle of the night to find his way home through the labyrinth in his pyjamas. It is invariably the best student, the most intelligent man who is most injured by such idiotic proceedings.

We have never been able to discover anyone who heartily approved of initiations except sophomores, and they only for the brief period during which they are sophomores.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The Varsity staff extends to the Jewish students on the campus best wishes for a happy and successful New Year.

Italy, France, England and Ethiopia probably would be shocked if they'd read Arthur Brisbane and found out what they're really thinking.—Oklahoma Daily.

Imported western-style clothing worn by college students throughout South China is to be abolished by the Canton Government.

Instructor, checking list: "Is your name down?" Student: "No, sir, it's Smith."

September 30, reads the date line, with only fourteen more shopping days before Xmas. October 14 will be Xmas Day for the party that does the best vote shopping between now and then. The latest local development in the federal campaign is the denunciation by the Lord's Day Alliance of C.C.F. candidates holding Sunday meetings. Whether they will lay similar charges against the York Bible Class remains to be seen. Certainly they can't object on the grounds that a political meeting is an amusement, or Mr. Hepburn would have taxed them long ago.

It is unfortunate that the Dominion elections come so early in the University term, for otherwise the campus party clubs would have had a glorious opportunity of testing their political opinions. (No, this time you make the pun and we'll groan.) We feel especially sorry for the Macdonald-Cartier Club, who gave us two free meals last winter, because if they don't stage a revival before October 14 they probably never will.

It seems that if the election returns no party with more than fifty per cent. of the seats to their credit, Mr. Bennett will remain Prime Minister even though the Liberals have more representatives than the Conservatives. This should prove embarrassing for everybody in Ottawa, including the Governor General whose job it might be to sort out the whole mess, and Lord Bessborough seems to have timed his departure rather nicely. John Buchan, on the other hand, should welcome being plunged into such a complicated political situation, fairly seething with intrigue. Who knows, perhaps the result may be the Great Canadian Novel.

It is not often that the choice for Governor General has been so unanimously popular among all classes, and it seems probable that Lord Tweedsmuir will adequately fill the position of honour and trust being vacated by Lord Bessborough. But can his son play Romeo?

—The Muddy Yorker.

DID CANADA CAUSE THE NEXT WAR?

Here Canada comes in—such economic co-operation was earnestly recommended to the League of Nations in 1920 by the Italian delegation. The plan involved a redistribution of the world's economic assets. The Canadian delegation (consisting of Sir George Foster, C. J. Doherty and N. W. Rowell), was alarmed, and vigorously vetoed the suggestion. The United States would be permanently alienated from the League by such procedure, they said. Canada, too, desired no interference with the disposition of her raw materials. So under her leadership, the League threw overboard the only alternative to inevitable war. Economic nationalism has increased apace during the succeeding years, and the reversal of that policy is at present an extremely remote contingency. War seems the only way out. And for the occurrence of that war—the Next War—Canada must take her share of the blame.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE

By E. S. W.

All the college tennis tournaments are getting under way today. Vic has an entry list of twenty-eight, which is not quite as big as that of last year. On the other hand, in U.C. fifteen of the twenty-five entrants are in their first year. The U.C. tournament is being played off on the courts of the Metropolitan Church, at Church and Sinter Streets. The first round starts at nine o'clock this morning and the matches will continue to be played there until Friday.

St. Michael's are not having much luck with their tournament. There are very few entries, either from Loretto's or St. Joseph's. However, there are several of their last year's team back, and they should have a fairly experienced squad of players. St. Hilda's have thirty-two would-be Mrs. Moody's, and will stage their struggles on the St. Hilda's courts behind the residence.

Madge Shaw, president of the Women's University Tennis Club, reports that so far she has heard nothing from the Nurses as to whether they will enter a team in the interfaculty tournament. The Nurses, although few in numbers, have always shown plenty of enthusiasm in matters of sport, and we would like to see that spirit kept up this year. O.C.E. are planning to enter a team for competition, but so far we have not heard about their own faculty tournament.

In closing, may we remind you that in order to play in interfaculty tournaments, you must go to Dr. Gordon's and have your heart tested. There is always a big rush at the last minute, so it might be a good idea to go early this week, and practise running up and down stairs.

Varsity Tennis Begins To-day

The University of Toronto interfaculty tennis tournament commences today at the Toronto Tennis Club. The four top seeded players are A. H. Crowson, the defending champion, W. P. Piggott, A. Y. Eaton and Jack Tomlinson. Forty-two entries have been received for the singles and today's play will continue until the second round is completed. The doubles tournament is scheduled to start later in the week.

Prospects are bright for a much stronger intercollegiate team this year and with Dr. Art Ham as coach the championships may well return to Toronto.

10 a.m.—Cavanaugh vs McGivern; Amos vs Morrison; Jacob vs Taylor; Kent vs Stewart; Jordan vs Eager; Slattery vs Eaton; Tomlinson vs Fair; Lundy vs Crossley; Pilsworth vs Carter; Service vs Scheffer; Goodspeed vs Charles; Acheson vs Nichols; Brunke vs Laing; Shultis vs Macnaughton.

11 a.m.—Crowson vs Greer; McArthur vs Ball; Owrarn vs Gibson; Phillips vs Campbell; Rae vs Johnston; Bateman vs Spence; Beverly vs Sheffield; McKay vs Piggott.

Officials of O.C.E. express the opinion that the decreased registration is the direct result of better business conditions throughout the province. Many students in past years have attended the institution to fill in time until work could be obtained. It is felt that most of these have now found positions elsewhere, and only the most interested students remain to complete their course at the Graduate School.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Geo. C. Vair

As Winchell would say, orchids to Warren Stevens and his senior gridders for bringing the Reg DeGruchy Memorial Cup to Hart House for the first time since it was inaugurated in 1930. After reading for weeks about the team that was being built in the east end to beat Sarnia and rumors that "Varsity's line is weak", it was nice of the students to romp on to victory in their initial appearance of the season. The passing of Marks and Connelly leaves nothing to be desired while the latter teams up with Coulter in the backfield as if they had been playing together for years. Isbister turned in a very creditable performance, getting good distance on his kicks and hitting the line hard and often. Cam Gray was forced to warm the bench all day because of a badly bruised ankle but will be in the game against Western.

'Tis said that the reason for Balmy's disorganized play beginning in the second quarter Saturday was due to the presence of a number of quarterbacks in every huddle. Remember they lost a down early in that quarter for going beyond the time limit. If such is the case Coach Ponton will have his hands full eliminating this trouble before the boys meet Sarnia next week. One of the first rules is no talking in the huddles except by the man who is running the team.

* * *

Rugby players around Harbord Collegiate are still talking about the canvas uniforms that the Parkdale gridders are wearing this season. They say it is like trying to hold on to an eel unless you get them clean around the ankles.

* * *

Sarnia Imperials continued their winning ways when they ran wild over the Mustangs in London 26-1. The collegians held them to a field goal and a try in the first half but the Oilers opened up after the rest period to score three tries, one when Beach picked up a blocked kick and two via the aerial route. At the same time McGill smothered R.M.C. 35-0. Joe Breen must have something down there we have not heard about to run up a score like that even though they were playing against an intermediate squad.

* * *

Last Saturday college rugby across the line got its initial send-off and upsets were the feature of the day. Alabama, last year's Rose Bowl champions, got off on the wrong foot when Howard, a small college in Birmingham, held them to a 7-7 score. Illinois and Wisconsin, both top heavy favourites, came out on the short end, while Notre Dame, trying its former position at the top, defeated Kansas by a big score.

necessary a treasury allowance of $100,000. This was withdrawn and thus the increase in fees just balances the entire cut.

Moreover, the grant was cut $400,000 during 1932-33, necessitating drastic cuts in staffs and in salaries, and also in research expenditures which have greatly handicapped the University.

The Universities were the last to be touched, grants to other educational institutions being cut $1,250,000 first.

According to Mr. Macdonald of the S.A.C. they have an adequate loan fund for third and fourth year students in addition to running a part-time employment bureau. The different colleges have bursary systems and there is the War Memorial Fund to draw upon. S.P.S. has an adequate loan fund but many medical men are forced to apply to the S.A.C.

As a result of the discussion following the different reports it was decided that the investigation should be carried on especially with regard to the bursary system, while a committee of five in addition to Mr. Bridle and Mr. Acker, was appointed to arrange for the mass meeting to be held shortly.

The new committee consists of Paul Bridle, secretary of the University College Literary and Athletic Society, D. R. H. MacDonald, President of the Victoria College Union; Harold Acker, Miss Jessie Johnson of Victoria College; Jim Romeyn, President of the University Student Christian Movement, Fannie Schwartz, Women's News Editor of The Varsity, and H. operate. Educational work concerning the factors leading to and the dangers of war will continue to be carried on, and prominent in this regard is the proposed organization of the Peace Movement in the high schools. In as much as Fascism leads to war, it will be the endeavour of these units to educate Canadian students as to the true meaning and implications of Fascism.

Questioned regarding the Italo-Ethiopian situation, Mr. Woodsworth expressed himself as being decidedly opposed to the Italian attitude. The Peace Movement will support the League as long as the latter continues to support a definite peace policy, but not if it functions as the tool of the imperialism of its leading components.

"A thorough application of economic sanctions would make war impossible for any length of time," he declared. Canada would be justified in supporting economic sanctions, but not in sending Canadian soldiers to fight in Ethiopia. This opinion holds regardless of the policy pursued by Great Britain. Canada should decide her own policy."

in the initial stanza after Lipsett had intercepted a Varsity forward and then moved the yardsticks on two plunges. Munro booted the single. Minutes later the Blues were in a perfect scoring position when a Marks-Connelly pass put them on the Beach's 15 yard line only to lose possession after three plunges.

Without the services of Ab Box, who carries the signals, kicks, passes and carries the ball, the Paddlers seemed in a quandary as to what to do next and only threatened the Varsity line once in the remaining part of the game. On that occasion Coulter received Upp's kick 10 yards behind his line, trapped the onrushing tacklers and flicked the pigskin to Connelly, who was grassed on his own 25 yard line. It was one of the best plays of the game.

The Blues boosted their score when Coulter and Connelly ripped off 30 yards on an extension followed by a 20 yard run by Coulter and a long hooey by Isbister.

The third quarter found Varsity still pressing the bewildered Beaches and when Holden scooped up a loose ball they were again hot for points which could not be denied. Miller advanced them 15 yards on a pass to Burke; Valciote and Isbister combined for seven and then Miller fooled the guessers with a fake kick to add another 15. Two bucks failed and Miller booted a perfect placement to make it 10-1.

With 15 minutes left the Blues were in the driver's seat and played careful football to hold the Old Gold and Blue in their own end of the field, being satisfied with a single from Isbister's toe.

Porter saved two more points when he ran out from behind the posts. Lipsett was the most effective ball carrier for the losers, while Munro, Burgoyne and Reid also turned in good games. For the Blues the backfield more than lived up to advance notices while with Holden, Oakley and Burke tackling and playing well defensively few mistakes were registered along the line.

ABERHART'S SCHEME SCORED BY PLUMPTRE

in order to appropriate to the government the unearned increment or unjustifiable price spread which he believes to exist. Mr. Plumtre emphatically stated that "It is clear that the community's purchasing power is not increased by one dollar by raising $120,000,000 in a 'turnover tax' and distributing it in the form of social credit dividends. In addition to this it is probable that any attempt to organize the system of taxation and dividends would involve an increasingly costly and a more cumbersome civil service."

Mr. Plumtre criticized severely the "turnover tax" as a means of redistributing wealth, and stated that while a heavy income tax takes unspent money and turns it into spendable money, the "turnover tax" would raise costs for the middlemen and thus increase prices for the consumers. An increase in the cost of living would result which would at least offset the increased purchasing power occasioned by the proposed dividends.

In reply to a question whether any constitutional difficulties would be met by Premier Aberhart Mr. Plumtre stated that if any attempts were made to tax goods from other provinces and in effect to set up a tariff, or if any attempts were made to issue currency the clauses of the British North America Act would undoubtedly be invoked by the Dominion Government. With regard to minor matters Mr. Plumtre did not expect the Dominion to interfere even though some of the provincial measures might be unconstitutional.

In parting Mr. Plumtre was asked whether the banks were likely to oppose actively the putting into effect of the Aberhart scheme. He replied: "I do not think that the banks would undertake to handle social credit unless guaranteed by the Dominion Government—and I do not think that the Dominion Government would."

TEACHERS' HEALTH SUBJECT OF PROBE

Examinations to be Held Under Auspices of Health Board

LONG SERVICE ENSURED

Candidates for the Ontario College of Education are now compelled to undergo a health examination conducted by a board of examiners recently appointed by the Department of Health. The Varsity was informed yesterday by Dr. J. G. Althouse, Dean of the College. In former years certificates were accepted from any qualified practitioner in Ontario.

The change, Dr. Althouse said, was designed to bring about a standard test, so that each student might have the same chance for admission or rejection. Also, it is hoped that through it the department may be assured that long years of service may be rendered by graduates, with a minimum of teachers placed on pension at an early age, due to ill-health.

Asked whether the examination had been made purposely rigid for the purpose of eliminating many of the candidates, Dr. Althouse said that such was not the intention. Whether it had done so he could not say until the results of the examination are in his hands.

The Varsity learned from other sources that many of the candidates are experiencing difficulty with the health examination, particularly the test for tuberculosis. One candidate claimed that a large percentage of the applicants had registered positive to that disease in one of the tests. But he said that it was not necessarily a serious indication, as the more definite test is yet to follow.

INITIATIONS EARN CAMPUS SUPPORT

Are Helpful if not Extreme Students Say of Ancient Rites

SOMETIMES TOO ROUGH

The general feeling around the campus seems to be in sympathy with the views expressed in yesterday's editorial on the initiation ceremonies. According to the editorial initiations are gradually going out of fashion and the few that remain in vogue frequently give University students a reputation for childishness and even cruelty.

Freddie Chapman, secretary of the Women's Undergraduate Association, said that she thought University life would be better without initiations, and that the institution would better carry out its purpose without them. "I feel that it creates jealousy and ill-feeling. And it really is antiquated. In some cases, of course, the results are favourable in creating a happier atmosphere, in such an institution as S.P.S. But in most cases it is too rough."

According to Aileen Hancock, president of Amesley Hall Student Government Association, initiations have their own place and function to fulfil, but they sometimes are too disorderly. In residence it is more helpful than out of residence and it seems to make the freshmen stick together against the sophomores and gives them more of a class spirit.

In the opinion of W. H. Broughall, Speaker for the Trinity College Literary Institute, initiations are more or less harmless and could possibly be (Continued on Page 4)

REGISTRATION IN ARTS REMAINS UNCHANGED

Meds Show Big Increase as do Remaining Faculties

Attendance figures are up again this year at the University of Toronto. With Arts the same at 975 enrolments to date, the other faculties seem to be gaining in attraction. 171 budding young doctors have joined our ranks only to be outdone by the scientists who number a full 272. Other courses are Household Science, 12; Forestry, 10; Dentistry, 33; Social Science, 45; Nursing, 10; Occupational Therapy, 21; and Physiotherapy, 21.

On the whole, the numbers seem to show a strong leaning away from Arts, with its now mythical enrolments of over a thousand, to the more technical pursuits, the professions and above all, the sciences.

NORWEGIAN SUMMER FOR TORONTO MAN

Undergraduate Wanderer Tells of Nordic Government and Girls

WOMEN NOT EROTIC

"The girls of Norway are darned good-looking, swim like fish, like like soldiers, are husky built, use no powder or paint and are too athletic to be erotic; in short they are marvellous in every way—but they dress atrociously," said Olaf Sorensen (H.U.C.) in an interview with The Varsity in which he told of the pulchritudinous women, of the radical government parties, of the even more radical student organizations and of the complete freedom of speech, of thought and of the press, which exist in Norway.

Mr. Sorensen was born in China 23 years ago and comes of an old Norwegian family which has lived in Christendom since 1690. Except for one year which he spent in East York Collegiate he received all his pre-University training abroad. Having spent the past summer in Norway, the summer before that in China, having crossed Canada via freight and having for one summer been in charge of a church Mr. Sorensen was able to recount a great variety of unique facts and experiences.

Political opinions in Norway, Mr. Sorensen pointed out, have traditionally been radical. Having until as recently as 1905 been fighting off the domination, first of Denmark and then of Sweden, the inhabitants of the country long ago became, and have remained, leftists. Norway's present relations with these two countries, Mr. Sorensen (Continued on Page 4)

Have you joined the ranks of the happy college students? Have you found just the person you came to college to meet? If so, you are fortunate. But what of those many others who have few acquaintances and no way of finding more? Well, there is THE DATE BUREAU.

THE DATE BUREAU is an institution begun on the campus last year by The Varsity to promote a greater abundance of friendliness and contentment among the students. It is in no way a publicity stunt. We are very sincere, and we extend an invitation to all and sundry to accept this opportunity of realizing the most in college life.

All you have to do, and you, and you, is to fill out the Date Bureau form and mail with ten cents to cover administrative costs, to the Date Bureau, c/o The Varsity, Hart House, and the one person who has been chosen to look after the bureau will do the rest. Everything will be kept in strict secrecy.

STUDENT ROOMS CARRIBEAN SEA DURING SUMMER

Bert Barnes Roams Southward as Waiter on Tanker During Summer

HIT BY HURRICANE

Visits City Raided by Morgan and Wrecked by Sailors Making Whoopie

After two trips to South America this summer as waiter on an oil tanker without seeing a drop of oil, Bert Barnes returned this week for his final year at University College telling how he weathered a Caribbean Sea hurricane and did not spill one plate of soup.

Leaving in May following the examinations, Barnes sailed from Montreal on the Victrola for Cartagena, Colombia, where he sweltered with the thermometer at 110 degrees while crude oil was being pumped into the tanks. "They piped the oil 300 miles from the inland wells. It flowed to the sea by gravitation and was piped from the shore to the tanker. During my two trips to the south we carried thousands of barrels of oil but it was all in tanks and pipes. I never saw what the stuff looked like," he said.

Last summer Barnes roamed the China coast in a lumber boat out of Victoria, B.C., and next summer he will likely wander over Europe seeking new countries and peoples before he settles down to a business career.

Sailing north at the end of August on his second trip, Barnes said a hurricane swept a 60-foot sea over the tanker while terrific winds hurled the vessel from its course. The wandering student slept through the night while the ship wallowed off Cuba in the grip of the gale. The rest of the crew were forward ready to don their life belts (Continued on Page 4)

LIGHTNING SALES OF WOMEN'S BOOKS AT TEXT EXCHANGE

The sale at the women's book exchange according to Miss A. E. M. Parkes, assistant secretary treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council, has been very successful this year. The students made a grand rush for the used books, especially the first week of school. It seems that no book is ever left on the shelves to get musty and dirty because only those that are listed in the catalogue are accepted.

The books are being sold almost as quickly as they are brought down which ought to be some inspiration for the late comers who have books that they would like to get rid of. Miss Parkes advises everyone to hurry and bring any books they want to sell especially any copies of the third edition of Woodworth's Psychology or Representative Poetry. These last two books are in great demand and it seems that the supply is small.

STUDENT RELIEF NOT CONSIDERED

Difficulty in Meeting New Fees to be Met by Increase in Bursaries

VICTORIA CITEO

No such system of student help as that of the newly inaugurated National Youth Administration which by means of a federal grant takes care of American high school and college students who are on the relief rolls by giving them an average of $15 a month in return for part time services is considered here.

According to Mr. Fennell, Registrar of the University, difficulty in meeting the increased fees will be partially relieved by the increased number of bursaries which are being given. "The funds are provided by the governor from the consolidated revenue of the University," Mr. Fennell said. "No definite amount is assigned, but the bursaries have been increased, not only (Continued on Page 4)

UNDERHILL SPEAKS

The University C.C.F. Club had its first meeting of the school year at Wymilwood last night. Gordon Jack was re-elected president, and Jerry McCutcheon, vice president, Dorothy Winnett, secretary, and Betty Bealey was made treasurer.

Professor Underhill of the History department undertook to describe to the enthusiastic audience the main difficulties of our present economic system, and the way in which the several parties are attempting to meet these problems. The speaker pointed out that two new factors have arisen that have made our present condition more acute. The frontier, salvation of past generations, is now closed, and this has occurred already (Continued on Page 4)

Crowson, Eaton and Piggott Find No Opposition in Early Rounds

PIGGOTT FAVOURED

George Johnston, New Brunswick Star, Enters at Last Minute

With all the seeded players breezing through the opening rounds, the Interfaculty Tennis Tournament got under way yesterday at the Toronto Tennis Club. Playing under anything but favourable conditions, the veterans of last year's team, Crowson, Eaton and Piggott, encountered no difficulty in their progress towards the semi-finals.

On the basis of his play this summer, Bill Piggott seems to be the man to beat for the McEachern Cup. But before he can regain possession of the trophy which he lost to Crowson last year, the Hamilton star will have to display all his court artistry. Crowson, top seeded, has the tougher half of the draw with Al Eaton between him and a berth in the finals. Of the rest of the field, only one surprise was registered when George Johnston, number one in New Brunswick, popped up: He will play Saul Rae today.

YALE SETS FINALS EVERY TWO YEARS

New Examination System Is More Like Toronto's, Says Faculty

MORGAN LIKES TUTORIALS

That Yale University, in substituting the two-yearly system of examinations for the old yearly one, approximates more closely than before the system at our own University, seems to be the consensus of opinion among the members of the faculty interviewed by The Varsity.

In certain courses here at the University of Toronto there are no final examinations in the third year. This applies to Moderns students studying abroad, to Law students, where the standing of those concerned depends on departmental arrangements, and to certain courses in Chemistry.

The opinion of Miss Biss of the Economics department is that it is preferable that the students be examined on his accumulated knowledge rather than just a part of it, as is the case with frequent examinations, was a generally favoured view.

In the opinion of Mr. L. T. Morgan, assistant professor of Economics, the policy which has worked well at Oxford and Cambridge, merits a trial here. Mr. Morgan denounced the present system as unfair, in that it passes a student's grading on his ability to display a knowledge in two and a half hours of a whole year's work. However, he pointed out that in a University as large as our own, it is difficult to get a more satisfactory method. "If you substitute the system of examinations every two years," he declared, (Continued on Page 4)

Watch the War In Comfort

Historians in the past have customarily referred to the scene of action in an armed conflict as the theatre of war. Just what tragic truth this phrase contains has never before been realized to the extent which it is about to be realized should Italy and Ethiopia cease sparring for an opening and commence hostilities in earnest.

In the fantastic civilization in which we live, the slightest whim of the customer for his money's worth of entertainment has always brought results. The customer has indicated his desire to see a war. He is too far advanced in civilization to desire to feel the rigors of such a struggle, but the deep seated, morbid curiosity which enslaves men today attracts them irresistibly to the witnessing of an event which gives promise of paying such gory dividends. Our civilization makes this possible through the sound pictures.

Always having the interests of the public at heart, where it will be of economical benefit to do so, newsreel companies are vying with each other in their efforts to reproduce actual motion pictures of the impending struggle. Unlimited preparations are being made to create an atmosphere of reality about the photos which are to be shown on the screens. The crack of the rifle fire will be mingled with the agonized groans of the wounded and dying to which we may be prepared to listen while spending leisure hours in the theatre, feeling abused because we have no room to stretch our legs.

Paramount and Fox Movietone News at present have their men situated in Africa where almost immediate hostilities are assured. The camera crews are organized and equipped something similar to the military units. They will travel in armoured trucks which will be well decorated with neutrality resolutions. The best men in the companies have been drafted for this service. When and if the war starts there will be a wild scramble on the part of these camera men to get their photos of blood and violent deaths on the screens of Canada and America. From then on the theatre-going public may expect to have the red spectacle presented to them in a more efficient manner and amid more attractive surroundings than the Romans ever dreamed of, during what we are pleased to refer to as their pagan holidays.

Decrease In O.C.E. Students

The most encouraging item of news carried by yesterday's Varsity was that stating the decreased registration at the Ontario College of Education. The article in question expressed the optimistic opinion that the cause was better business conditions throughout the province. 'Tis a consummation devoutly to be wished for.

But whether or not the smaller enrolment at O.C.E. indicates that the depression is finally lifting, it is a hopeful sign. It does show that O.C.E. is ceasing to be a clearing house for all those University graduates who failed to find openings in their chosen professions. Presumably a far larger percentage of those entering this year are doing so because they really desire to be teachers than was the case last year or the year before.

The result is beneficial all around. The numbers of the contestants in the annual race to obtain the pitifully few positions available will be decreased. Those who are left ought to be better teachers. And there will not be so many of those unfortunates who having taken a year's pedagogical training feel they should make use of it but who having failed once or twice to obtain a position find themselves hopelessly on the shelf. Of the 470 who graduated in 1934 approximately one-quarter are now teaching school.

Another happy result of this year's decrease is that the "born-teachers", those whose vocation definitely lies in that profession will not be discouraged at the outset. The more nearly the demand equals the supply the greater will be the qualifications of our future teachers.

Social Credit An Experiment

The recent success of Social Credit in Alberta reflects the extreme trends of the Western farming communities. In a way it takes its stand behind the Progressive and Laborite governments of Wisconsin and Minnesota and with the official C.C.F. opposition in British Columbia and Saskatchewan. The reason for these movements is that farmers suffer more in times of depression than any distributing or manufacturing group.

Recent economic research discloses the fact that prices of raw materials fluctuate more severely than prices of finished commodities; and that the higher the stage of manufacture, the steadier prices become. This principle is borne out, for instance, in Professor Innis's survey of Canada's fur-trade in times of good trade and bad. It is vindicated by the terrible plight of Nova Scotia's fishermen; by the slump in lumbering in Northern Ontario; by the steep drop in the prices of copper and silver; and above all, by the phenomenal crash of wheat prices in the first years of the depression. So it is that the farmers are driven to flirt with radical ideas in times of depression. This tendency has led to the adoption of producers' and consumers' co-operatives in the West, to state-owned grain elevators, to Progressive and Semi-Socialist governments in certain Western states and provinces, and finally to Social Credit in Alberta.

Of course, Social Credit is not really radical—certainly not the Aberhart brand. It does not seek to redistribute wealth in a more equitable fashion. It is not revolutionary. It is as anxious about provincial and national credit as the old-line parties. But it is a change, and the farmers of the West have struck out blindly for change. The most logical direction for change would obviously be towards socialism. But the word socialism is taboo in Canada. Hence the name C.C.F. for Canada's official Socialist party. Social Credit was sufficiently discredited by orthodox economists to be dangerously alluring, and yet had no taint of Marxist philosophy. And so Alberta plunged headlong into an unknown sea.

In a recent interview Professor Plumtre explained the fallacy of the Aberhart scheme for increasing purchasing power. The flaw is the taxation of ordinary producers to finance the credits. If the taxation were directed at the rich, Social Credit might become the lever for forcing a healthy redistribution of wealth, which would cause idle funds to be spent on necessities. Or if limited inflation were gradually substituted for taxation to provide the credits, purchasing power might be thereby increased. But indulgence in inflation is patently ultra vires the provincial parliament. As to the policy of inflation, in any case, there are many things to be said, and most of them condemnatory.

Aberhart will no doubt go through with his scheme. The twenty-five dollar bonus will be worth to the recipient at least the relief he was receiving before. Alberta's credit will probably remain sound. And little will have been accomplished.

One important result, however, may come out of the scheme. If an unorthodox system like Social Credit can invade a community and leave it unharmed, it will tend to vindicate the existence of economic heresies in practical politics. Or its downfall, which Mr. Gilbert Layton of the Saturday Night confidently prognosticates, will serve to discredit the Douglas Movement in this country, in England, and wherever else it has gained a foothold.

Things are looking up. A few regulars are straggling back, tho' with their new nommes de plume you may not recognize them instantly, and one of our (two) voluntary subscribers of last season turned up in the mail today, as well. Rust'em still refrains from revealing his identity even to us, but you'll hear from him in a day or two, nevertheless. Enough of this vague mastering of the ceremonies,—we give you one lagoon.

FRESHMAN LAMENT

We came to University

The twenty-third of September,
And prayed the Sophs would leave us be

At least until November.

They scoffed at our young innocence
Of all their social graces
They sneered at us for being dense
And put us through our paces.

A tie we donned of brilliant hue
Which cost us several dollars,
Though we were many, they but few
They cut it to our collars.

While we in humble spirit bowed
They sang of Alma Mater,
And when our manly hearts were cowed
They led us out to slaughter.

We came to University

The twenty-third September.
We hoped to get a grand degree
That people would remember.

Our right hand paid tuition fees,
Our left dished out the extras
For Hart House, Lib's, S.A.C.;
Till we were ambidextrous.

We wander 'round in search of books,
Whose casts are out of reason,
The Sophs keep us on tenterhooks,
And plague us all the season.

But let us cheer our downcast soul
With dreams of retribution
Another year there will enrol
New Frosh for execution.

C—C

That for the male of the species frosh. Tomorrow will see the Freshettes serenaded by Asaph, an appreciative youth who has long been waiting to Herald the arrival of this year's detachment.

Let's Go Places

Leo Tolstoy's volume, Anna Karenina, a literary production which for years has graced the best people's libraries, but which suffered a decline in popularity at approximately the dawn of the jazz age, is being revived in the current production at Loew's. Despite the fact that Tolstoy might have some difficulty in recognizing his brain child, Anna Karenina is really a good show.

Greta Garbo and Frederick March, great actors individually, comprise an exceptionally good team when playing together. Freddie Bartholomew, as the son of Anna Karenina, was exceptionally good. It was his acting and influence which saved the show for the tragedy which it was supposed to be. The tragedy resulted from the indiscreet blending by Anna of the friendship of her husband and a captain of cavalry, in the Russian Imperial Guard.

The travel talk, which vividly portrayed Pitcairns Island, a southern sea retreat of the muttonous English crew of his majesty's ship Bounty, was a very enjoyable interjection, chiefly because of the splendid photographic scenes it produced.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Latest reports from the Lillian Massey are that swimming will not start before next week. However, the aquatic art will then be an optical as well as a physical pleasure. Painters are now at work redecorating the pool and its surroundings. When our reporter was there, the men were singing lustily, but she couldn't make out whether they were vocalizing classic opera or the latest jazz.

We assume that Billy Cochrane will be back in charge of the swimming. She has always been most kind in helping the girls, whether they be beginners or fairly well advanced (in style, not in years). The life-saving classes have not always been as well-attended as they might be, and we would like to see a few more girls trying for this certificate this year.

Don't forget to sign up for the golf tournament, which is being held this Friday at the Ladies' Golf and Tennis Club. You don't have to be an Ada Mackenzie to enter, and certainly a day in the country with good company and a good lunch would be a pleasant break from lectures. U.C. deserves a bouquet for their initiative in sponsoring this event.

We would like to draw your attention to the fact that the students' season tickets for all Varsity home games in rugby and hockey, are on sale for women students in Room 82, University College, today and Wednesday, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. These tickets offer very good value, and we think that you will find them a good investment.

The tennis tournaments are going ahead right merrily. The weather isn't all it might be, but don't let this prevent you from being a spectator. Some of the games will be worth watching.

New Features at the Lantern Tea Room This Year

Have you been over to the Lantern, 5 Wilcocks St., yet to have your tea-cup read? If not, join the crowd that is going there, to-day, and hear what your tea-cup means by an expert, one who knows all about it. This is just one of the many features Mrs. Nichols has planned for your enjoyment. And then you can play bridge in the afternoon, after lunch, or in the evening after dinner. Cards are supplied free of charge and a special part of the inner dining room has been screened off for bridge playing. Make up a party to-day and drop in for a game. You will be made to feel at home.

Everyone says that the meals are the best value yet.
Full course lunch only 25 cents.
Breakfast from 15 cents and full course dinner 25 and 35 cents.
Try the Lantern to-day. Your friends will all be there.

Iniercollegiate Golf

The trials for the U. of T. Intercollegiate Golf Team will be held at the end of this week. The team going to Montreal this year where the Intercollegiate Championship will be decided on October 11th and 12th. There are two cups at stake, the McColl Cup for the individual championship and the Rutman Cup for team competition between Toronto and McGill.

All those interested are asked to report at the Athletic Office or get in touch with Stan Biggs, Ki. 3667 or Bill Sutton at Ki. 8991. Watch The Varsity for further announcements.

JUNIOR GRIDDERS FACE SEASON

FORMER VETERANS BACK

Both the intermediate and junior Blue football teams are fast rounding into shape. The juniors will again be coached by Don Graham who will be ably assisted by Ken Harris. The Seconds will benefit from the combined efforts of Warren Stevens, Lou Newton and Dawson.

Several of last year's squad will again be found in the intermediate lineup. The Seconds are especially strong in the quarterback division. "Whitey" Miller will again take charge of the teams manoeuvres. He will be ably assisted by Barry Gray, a former quarterback on two Dominion Junior Championship squads. Gray also plays a smart game at outside wing and has an educated toe when it comes to kicking placements. The halfback duties will be taken care of by Paddy Tafts, a smart passer and plunger, and Ripley, Borelin and Mustard. Powell, Buck and Woods will look after the tackling. Reserve strength will be missed along the line. At present McLaughlin, Bridle, Sirdevan and Kuntz are slated to fill the middle and inside wing berths. Eliot Jacobs will again be found at the snapback position. Ted Jarvis, ex-Balm Beach griddler is expected to do a good job at the flying wing position.

The Juniors will have Usitas of Runnymede and Thompson of Oakwood calling the signals. Al Isbister, brother of Bob of senior kicking fame, Don Mumford of last years squad, and Wave Owen of U.T.S., will hold down the backfield positions with Bull, Houston and Appleby showing good possibilities. Moore, formerly of Pickering College, Peinwick of U.T.S., McGregor and Gordon of Upper Canada College and Bond of Niagara Falls will likely be found along the line. Walsh of St. Mike's, Mather and Robinson of Pickering College, Casserly and Holman of Malveru and Grand and Young of U.T.S. have the inside track for the outside wing berths.

Tactful freshmen at Baylor University, on being interviewed on why they chose that particular school, replied, "I came to Baylor because of the good sophomores here."—Daily Texan.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crocker

And now bring on those Mustangs! With the help of the Purple and White squad Warren Stevens' Blues will officially inaugurate the intercollegiate football season in Toronto on Saturday afternoon. The college schedule will probably display a brilliant brand of ball this season as all four squads are slated to take to the air in an effort to bring home the prize laurels. The advent of two new coaches in the four-team group will undoubtedly provide new interest, new players and all the other things which go along with the new arrival's attempt at making good. At any rate, it seems that we're in for a great season of college football.

Most of us, here at Toronto, will be looking at the future with a far brighter view of things after last Saturday's explosive victory at the expense of Balm Beach. After watching that "weak line" myth being slowly and surely exploded as the minutes ticked by one can't help but wonder where the downtown sports experts got their information on the condition of Varsity's line. Those of us who witnessed Saturday's game were definitely convinced that the Blue line will do, and do very well too, thank you.

As we sat and watched the Connelly-Coulter combination go to town on Saturday we were reminded of another great combination. Three years ago, Bobby Coulter combined with Art Upper, who is now on the Beach roster, to run Varsity into a Dominion Junior Rugby Championship and unless we miss our guess the same Bobby Coulter, teamed up with Joe Connelly, will race the Blue and White into another intercollegiate championship. Bob Isbister's booting and the wonderful throwing of Hughie Marks will undoubtedly be a prime factor in the Blue offensive this year but it seems to us that if Connelly and Coulter run back to last Saturday's form Coach Stevens will have very very few anxious moments on the bench this year.

With the completion of the opening rounds of the interfaculty tennis tournament at the Toronto Tennis Club yesterday no upsets have as yet been registered. A surprising and welcome entry was that of George Johnston, one of New Brunswick's aces. Bill Piggott, who is rated the favourite was the only player to advance into the fourth round and seems well on his way to the title and the McEachren trophy. Crowson, the defending champion, will play a third-round match at ten o'clock this morning. With Dr. Art Ham enlisted as coach the Blue and White tennis hopes have soared to a new high and it is expected that Hart House will this year house the intercollegiate tennis trophy.

At this stage of the game the intermediate and junior prospects are always very vague. The Seconds, it seems, will again have a better-than-average club with many of last year's squad back in harness and Coach Dawson, should he succeed in passing on some of his fighting spirit to his men will no doubt be heard from on Saturday when he leads his charges against O.A.C. at Guelph. Don Graham, the junior mentor, has as usual, a large group of untied material among which one may find Al Isbister, brother of Varsity's kicking star.

Although it is generally conceded to be bad and risky business to tread on the toes of one's journalistic betters we can't help but feel a little peeved as a result of Ted Reeve's article in The Evening Telegram last Friday. It seems to us that the witty columnist and coach has as yet a great deal to learn about the University of Toronto and its affiliated colleges, learned as he is in most other subjects. At any rate it doesn't pay to let one's fears break out into lines of biting sarcasm. We would advise Mr. Reeve to add to his store of knowledge of the U. of T. as quickly as possible.

STERLING TRACK TEAM HEADED FOR SUCCESS

Seasoned Cinder Burners
Plus New Recruits
Shape Well

Notwithstanding the vacancies made last year by graduation and the attack of that demon, non-eligibility, on this year's track and field team, the man at the helm, Coach Phillips, says this edition of the Varsity track tribe has prospects of a highly prosperous year.

Among the veterans who will be sorely missed are: A. W. Munroe of O.C.E., who won the high jump in '34 and is present holder of the high jump record, 5 ft. 9 and 5-8 ins.; R. G. Westchuser (Ap. Sc.), holder of the discus record which he made in '34 by throwing the discus 127 ft. 10 ins.; J. W. Magladery (Meds), one mile run star and record holders, who has gone to England on a Rhodes scholarship; Maguire (Meds), intercollegiate long jump champion; Hogg (S.P.S.), cross-country champion and Campbell, a point winner.

However, Coach Phillips feels that he has the necessary material to replace these lost men. He is confident that his new talent will "go places" and trample over opponents. In the present set-up he has Conway, running the half mile; Westhart, a former University of Maine runner; and for sprinting, Caldwell (Meds), Asheville (S.P.S.), Harris (Meds). Quarter milers are lacking, however, Sandwell looks promising. Rankin and Forrest are the milers, and the three miles assignment will be handled by Rankin, Forrest, Kibblewhite, and Heather. Bob Cooper of Victoria heads the list of long jumpers. To add to this brilliant aggregation Jim Worrall, McGill star and British Empire hurdler, may that a Loyola University freshman found that he couldn't write as fast as his biology professor could talk. He proceeded to bring a stenographer to class with him, and with all the precision of the business man who catches up on his sleep in his downtown office, cooled his heels on a desk while the stenographer took the lecture notes in shorthand.—Daily Texan.

A University of Syracuse professor has been conducting experiments to determine the reactions of a person to certain procedure. In one experiment he blindfolded a co-ed, attached a number of recording instruments to her, and kissed her. You know, it's terrible how these professors refuse to reveal the results of their experiments to the reading public.—Daily Texan.

Two new students at Abilene Christian College believe in following instructions to the letter. They had been told that at a certain hour each night a bell would be rung notifying them that it was "Quiet Hour". When the bell rang they were very quiet for one hour. Neither said anything; each moved but slightly. When the hour was up, one broke the silence by saying, "And now I'm sleepy." So they went to bed instead of making the noise they had planned after the close of "Quiet Hour".—Daily Texan.

The latest story on fee-paying comes from the University of Kansas. A boy at the desk was trying to sell the University Daily Kansas, student newspaper, to a girl in the registration line. He repeated the word, "Kansan", several times. The girl shook her head, replying, "No, Missourian."—Daily Texan.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

made into a really helpful activity providing they were subjected to the use of common sense. He also thought that in many cases they could be and have been a detriment to the college student in general. In these cases he expressed the opinion that the reason for the detrimental result was because common sense had not been used. In such cases Mr. Broughall felt that he would definitely support a movement to abolish initiations from the campus. Last year initiations hit a happy medium in his opinion as compared to the few years previous when, he thought, they were not properly organized in the best interests of the student. "Sensibly governed initiations could be a means of promoting a real spirit into the students and could be a way of activating an harmonious campus life," he said.

"Compared with the Norwegian Social Democrat Party," Mr. Sorensen stated, "the C.C.F. is a group of right-wing Tories." So complete is the power of the party that a "scab" is considered a social outcast and has no chance whatsoever of being reinstated in his position once it comes under the control of the trade unions.

In reply to a question whether nationalist organizations had made any headway in Norway Mr. Sorensen emphatically asserted, "There is absolutely no danger of Fascist or Nazi domination in either the near or distant future." Asked whether anti-Semitism, in itself, was prevalent in the country, Mr. Sorensen proudly stated, "There is very, very little racial enmity in Norway, and attempts by such men as Major Quisling to create it are grotesque, ludicrous, fantastic, and are recognized as such by the inhabitants of the country."

Mr. Sorensen is himself a philosopher and an ardent Zionist and has been asked to join and has joined, the Avukah Society, the Jewish-Zionist organization of the campus. "I am very glad, being a Christian, to have an opportunity to discuss Zionism with the Jewish students in this University and to aid the Avukah Society in fulfilling its programme of promulgating the ideals of Zionism and in fostering good will amongst the various denominational organizations on the campus."

at S.P.S., who was a junior engineer on the Victrola.

Cartagena in Bolivia was the city John Morgan of pirate fame, raided and sacked during the days of Spain's glory in the Caribbean. Barnes said, "There is only a native village there now and their main occupation is bootlegging liquor, parrots, monkeys and ant eaters to the sailors on the oil tankers. None of the crews are allowed to land in Cartagena now because sailors lifted the lid off the town a few years ago during a couple of wild days ashore," he said.

On the second trip Barnes sailed again from Montreal, this time for Carapadro and Maturin Barge in Venezuela. Maturin Barge is not a town, Barnes explained, but an old vessel, formerly used to take naphtha to Europe, but now moored off the coast as a reservoir tank for the inland oil fields. Oil is brought from the fields, stored in the old ship to await the tankers from Montreal.

Barnes has studied pass Spanish at University College for two years and here at Maturin Barge he summoned all his Spanish knowledge and tried to converse with a Spanish captain of the Barge. "I was getting along fine when the captain grimed and started speaking perfect English. He had been to school in Trinidad and we were real pals during my two days there," he said.

Barnes is treasurer of fourth year at University College and a member of Phi Kappa Sigma.

most simultaneously with the world crisis or depression of 1929. Another point that needs serious consideration, Professor Underhill explained, is the attitude held by Canadians that their foreign market is inexhaustible. Wheat, one of Canada's chief exports, is being over-produced, and the making of wood-pulp, another chief industry, is dependent to a large extent on the capacity of the world to consume it.

In our present difficulties certain classes and sections have been hit more than others, the speaker contended. The farmers, the working class, and the little professional man especially have been put in a "peculiarly defenceless condition".

In conclusion Professor Underhill pointed out that of all the parties the C.C.F. was the most willing to face the situation honestly, and suggested that its policies be considered seriously by the audience.

After the address Mr. Joliffe, a former Rhodes scholar, gave a short speech in which he tried to impress upon the listeners the need for their co-operation in order to bring about a socialistic programme.

STUDENT RELIEF SYSTEM NOT PRACTICABLE HERE

in Arts, but in the professional faculties and in the Graduate school." Dr. Wallace, Principal of University College, estimated that the amount of last year's bursaries would be not more than three quarters of this year's.

The practicability of students doing part time work in the University is rather doubtful, even if jobs were available. "Students who work pay a big price," said Dr. Wallace. "If you have to, you have to, but it means a definitely inferior college course."

Victoria, whose funds depend on private grants, is the only college where bursaries are given in return for part-time work. "We endeavour to fit our bursaries to the needs of the student," said Dr. Brown, principal of Victoria. "In the granting of bursaries, the individual case is considered, and in certain cases work is not deemed advisable." Victoria bursary holders do office, secretarial or library work, and in some cases work in the residence. Dr. Brown explained that they want to avoid that interference with studies which seems to characterize the part-time employment given students in the American colleges.

Including students from Emmanuel College there were 75 bursary holders working at the Victoria library last year. The Varsity was informed by Miss Peggy Ray, assistant to the librarian. They are required to put in 100 hours of work, part of which is spent in training. Library officials recognize the difficulty in organizing such a system, but it is necessary, since the appropriations are not large. Miss Ray felt that outside of the immense amount of work it means for library officials, such a system was most advantageous since it does away with any feeling of false pride on the part of the student in accepting help from the University. "Library work is scientific," stated Dr. Wallace, University librarian. "To a certain extent we make use of student help as a messenger service, but untrained student help is unsatisfactory in such a large library." Dr. Wallace pointed out that it was more economical to use trained assistants, since student help was not permanent, and entails a constant repetition of a completely new staff.

University officials feel that there is little work that the undergraduate can do in the University itself. Mr. Macdonald of the S.A.C. felt that it made little difference whether the work was in the University or outside. "Everyone who was registered with us last year was referred to some job," he said.

Mr. T. Extension Courses Offer Wide Variety

In less than a week's time with the commencement of the extension courses, the attendance of the University will be swelled to nearly twice its present size.

The subjects are varied, ranging from Heating and Refrigeration to Journalism. Among the new courses offered this year is the series of lectures in Physics to be offered in the McLennan Laboratory beginning Friday, October 4th at 8 p.m., and continuing weekly until December. The first lecture will be given by Professor H. A. McHaggart on "Colour". The series while it will deal with the various subjects from first principles, is intended to appeal to advanced science students and teachers of secondary schools.

KINGSTON DOCTOR FINDS CANCER CAN BE CURED

Financial Difficulties Great

Flows In

"Banting discovered insulin, Connell discovered Ensol," will likely slide off the tongues of future generations as glibly as "Bell discovered the telephone," does today. But who is Connell and what is Ensol, you ask?—here's the story.

Five years ago Dr. H. C. Connell, a 35-year-old eye, ear, and nose specialist, of Kingston, Ontario, forsook his practice to carry on research in the ceaseless struggle to find a cure for cancer. From his test tubes has come forth a strange new chemical compound which he has christened "Ensol". It hardly seems possible, yet his discovery will be the basis of a method of treatment which may lead to a solution of the cancer problem. For the second time in leading world medical research of recent years, a Canadian has come to the fore.

Dr. Connell gave up a very profitable medical practice in order that he might devote his time to a study possessing incalculable possibilities, yet seemingly insurmountable obstacles. It was in a small, poorly ventilated attic in Queen's University Medical Building that Ensol was born, and shortly afterwards Dr. Connell and his assistants removed to Kingston General Hospital to see how their "find" would stand up under tests. The results have been amazing—certain patients entering the hospital bed-ridden were able to walk out unassisted.

As news spread of the results of Connell's treatments, money for experiments

Banquet Addressed by Dean
Brett, Mr. Bickersteth, Principal Wallace

Yesterday evening Hart House was the scene of the season's first major social affair, the U.C. Soph-Frosh Banquet. The Great Hall, with its tables decorated in red and white, and with tall candles in the centre of each, was well filled.

After a few remarks by the chairman, Mr. Rae, the new president of the frosh, A. G. Ranken, proposed his toast to U.C. He extended his best wishes to the newcomers, and then outlined a history of the college from its inception.

Dr. Wallace followed with a little advice to freshmen to have some definite aim in all their work, and to decide on some goal for later life.

The warden of Hart House, Mr. Bickersteth, invited the students up to see the House under his able guidance, and urged them to keep up the spirit of friendship which has always prevailed.

The final speaker of the evening was Dean Brett who traced a history of learning from the colleges of old to our day.

With a word from the president of the first year, Bill Bowen, and a concluding remark by Mr. Rae, the Soph-Frosh Banquet for 1935 was at an end.

U.C. Takes Up Social Credit Major Douglas Cries "You Said It"

Hear Ye, hear ye. The U.C. Parliamentary Club will hold its opening session, amidst scenes of great pomp and splendour, on Thursday, October 10, at three o'clock, in the U.C. Common room. Clad in robes of state, the Speaker of the House, the Rt. Hon. Mervin Minsky, will sit as Lord of all he surveys and see to it that parliamentary procedure is strictly observed. Freshmen would be well-advised to observe this inspiring spectacle.

The governor-general, His Eminence Lord Hoo-Rae of Cheers, will lend his august presence to the assembly.

The cabinet, which is solid and highly-polished this year, has been working strenuously for weeks to prepare the program and matters of international importance will be discussed in the usual serious manner. The two most important topics which will be considered are "The Present Crisis and Canada's Policy," and "Social Credit".

Incidentally, no less a personage than the famous Major Douglas, founder of the Social Credit movement, will be present to explain the intricacies of his theories.

DEALS WITH APOSTLES

Due to the important place that Ethiopia has held in the eyes of the world for the past few weeks, it may be of interest to note the publishing for the first time of a fragment of an Ethiopian book, which has been in the possession of the University of Toronto for the past twenty-one years.

This small parchment of Ethiopic literature was acquired by Col. A. N. Wilson in the Abyssinian campaign of 1867 after the British victory at Magdala. The manuscript was sent to Professor J. F. McCurdy by the son of Col. Wilson, by whom it was transferred.

FRESHETTES OF U.C. CHOOSE EXECUTIVE

The elections for the University College First Year Women's executive took place yesterday morning, and the following were the successful candidates for office who will guide the destinies of 379 until next May: President, Polly Shaw; secretary, Mary Carter; treasurer, Dorelle Macellari; social service director, Alice Elshout.

The consensus of opinion among the women of the first year seems to be that it is very difficult to vote for officers so early in the year, when they scarcely know who are their classmates, and have not as yet had the opportunity to know each other sufficiently well or for whom they are voting.

Northern Hospitality and Long

Interesting

From Edmonton to Aklavik and the Klondike, completely encircling the Yukon, Canada's great Arctic territory, was the journey of Professor Irene M. Biss, Miss Biss, who lectures in economics at the University, made a six weeks' tour of Canada's far north this summer, partly for amusement and more especially for research.

Leaving Edmonton June 20 she flew north along the Athabasca River to Ft. Chipewyan on Lake Athabasca. Thence two airplane routes branched out; one led to Beaver Lodge across the lake where the latest gold discoveries in Canada are being rapidly developed. To the north, boats ply the Slave River, but the service is naturally slow and fitful. Miss Biss boarded a mail plane that took her straight north to Cameron Bay on Bear Lake, within thirty miles of the Arctic Circle. En route the plane—a seaplane, as are all those in the north—landed at frequent intervals. At Fort Resolution on Slave Lake, the economist met an English-Canadian novelist gathering materials for his forthcoming book on the heroic north.

Cameron Bay is famous for its silver mines and its pitchblende mines which have been operating since 1931. Pitchblende is the substance from which radium is extracted; and about eighty tons of it are handled daily. "Of course, eight tons of raw pitchblende," added Miss Biss, "yield only a gram or so of pure radium. The concentrated ore

Mussolini "On the Spot"

Will the fall of Mussolini be the grand finale to Italo-Ethiopian front-page drama?

Several astute Parisian journalists and a special writer in the New York Daily News state the overthrow of Benito Mussolini looms now as a very definite possibility as the statesmen of Europe weigh him in the balance and find him wanting.

His handling of the Italo-Ethiopian crisis cost him dearly.

Because of his gang-boss attitude and diplomatic blunders the sympathy of virtually the entire world has swung to helpless, barbarian Ethiopia.

He faces a hostile world opinion while the Paris press indicates his political opponents in Italy are gaining strength.

Il Duce is in a precarious position. Should he refrain from devouring his scheduled prey in Africa his prestige in Rome will diminish; should he invade Ethiopia, the sanctions of the League of Nations will be invoked against him with the British lion crouching threateningly at Suez and Gibraltar. In the vernacular of gangland, Mussolini is "on the spot".

The Daily News introduces a villain into the plot in the person of bewhiskered General Balbo, the Italian aviator who led the squadron of planes which flew the Atlantic over a year ago. Says the News: "It is possible intrigues are under way for Benito Mussolini's overthrow, possibly by General Italo Balbo, now governor-general of Libya. Balbo has succeeded in diverting thousands of troops from East Africa to that desert province."

Help the Settlement

Among the many aspects of our varied University life is the opportunity afforded by the University Settlement to students who wish to do social service work. It is an opportunity all too frequently overlooked by reason of the quiet and unostentatious but none the less commendable manner in which the work is carried on.

The Settlement, although supported by the Federation for Community Service, has been closely connected with the University since its beginning in 1910. The President of the University and many professors are on its Board of Directors. It has a regular staff but each year student volunteers have rendered valuable assistance. Each college elects or appoints several representatives who interest their fellow students in those who have largely been denied the kind of life obtainable at a University.

Activities for this year officially began at the Settlement yesterday. Nearly a thousand men, women and children will participate in the study groups and other activities this winter. Music, art, sewing, handicraft and carpentry are some of the classes conducted by the Settlement. A nursery school for small children and libraries for older children and mothers are also maintained, as well as several clubs for young men and a children's theatre.

The benefit derived from the Settlement is as great for the workers as for those among whom they work. Whatever one is interested in—social science, the problem of unemployment, languages (the Settlement is attended by 28 nationalities), dramatics, sport—a place may be found at the Settlement in which this interest may be used for the good of one's fellow-man.

Social service work is an education in itself. At the Settlement one has an opportunity to study the effect of our present social and economic system on the great mass of our population.

The University Settlement also solves the problems of those students who feel they would like to have a part-time job yet who are not in need of any remuneration. They may indulge their desire to do something useful in this work and leave the few available paid jobs to those who depend upon them for their livelihood. Girls who are fond of children will find unlimited opportunity for working with them—teaching them, playing with them, helping them.

This work is commended to everyone who has a few hours a week to spare and particularly to first year students. The time to get interested in anything is right at the start.

"The Hon. Member From U. of T."

Less than two weeks hence Canadians will go to the polls to decide which political party will guide Canada during the succeeding four to five years. The importance of this choice looms large at the present time. Seldom if ever has the outlook on the political horizon been more obscure and unsettled than it is today. More than ever, people are concerned with the future of the country and the result is a manifest interest in politics which has been lacking for decades. And this is as it should be. It indicates a tendency on the part of the public to do a little thinking on their own, rather than let themselves be persuaded that a certain party is the more desirable merely because it offers that particular individual a job or a corresponding advantage.

Now thinking is supposed to be one of the practices in which the modern undergraduate indulges. Thinking along political lines is, therefore, expected of him. But what are his chances of being able to make his influence felt on October 14? For a large percentage the chances are not so good.

In the University of Toronto more than half of the students come from out of town. If the home town happens to be within a radius of 30 miles and transportation provided, there is a possibility of a certain number of out of town students being able to register their votes on the election date. Beyond that distance the number who will vote will be negligible. This is certainly an undesirable situation.

Certainly some provision should be made for students attending the University from distant centres. They are interested in the political future of Canada. They are more intimately concerned with the future than the men established in business at present. On the business conditions at their graduation depends their chances of obtaining employment of a desirable nature.

The suggestion has been made more than once that the University of Toronto send a member to the House of Commons. This has disadvantages as well as advantages. Certainly the number of voters at the University would exceed that of some of the ridings in Canada. One constituency in North Western Canada has 1,800 voters. The University would have well over 4,000 voters. We are not being arrogant when we say that they would be better qualified to select a representative than some other electorates. What then can be done about these voters? There appears to be only two possible solutions which will satisfy.

The University must have a representative of its own, or the University be allowed to vote as a body in the riding in which it is situated. It is a flagrant abuse to hold an election within the school term and not do one or the other.

Students at the University of Oklahoma have recently opened a nursery training school, in which children of from two years to four and one-half years of age are cared for by attractive young coeds. Excellent practice, indeed.—Southern California Trojan.

What now seems okay-doke to you
May be what you will later rue;
Nor think because HE seems so nice
He's not a man of secret vice;
Beware the boy with long eyelashes,
The villain no longer wears moustaches.
With Engineers be on your guard,
With Medicals be twice as hard;
To dates by proxy give the air
And choose a man with savoir-faire;
We recommend a man of parts—
You guessed it—he's the man in Arts.

We haven't met you yet at all,
We've only seen you in the hall;
But should a circumstance arise
By which through our most artful guise
We chance to meet, just flash a smile
And stop and talk to us awhile.

You'll soon forget your High School days

But not, we hope, your girlish ways;
"Standing with reluctant feet
Where the brook and river meet,"
You're so maidly hesitant,
And m— mm— how innocent,
We will surely fall for you,
Fall for every one of you.

Asaph.

The Editor,

Dear Sir:

Monday's editorial columns contained a very naive article entitled "British Idealism Strengthens the League". Were naivete the only fault of that article there would be no reason for this reply. But there is far more involved.

May I comment first of all on British Idealism. The writer of Monday's editorial speaks as follows: "Britain, as the cynic sees her, is merely taking the lead at Geneva—to retain the lands gained by imperialistic conquest. But that seems secondary." He gives no reasons why this is secondary but goes on to say: "Britain's brilliant leadership in the drive for peace—is more than self-interest. It is definitely for the world itself—it is for peace." About five years ago Japan carried out in Manchuria a campaign very similar to that being executed by Italy today. In spite of the demands of the peoples of the world; in spite of the appeals for a unity of action among other nations in defence of China, Japan was successful. Where was British Idealism? It was conspicuous by its absence. The reason is clear. Britain's imperialistic claims in Manchuria were not important enough to risk even a breach with her old ally Japan, much less so to support the covenant of the League—that, in spite of the Lytton report.

I would ask the writer of Monday's article to examine carefully, and objectively the role of Britain in the League. By objectively I mean that he should not be misled by the high-sounding words of British diplomats; but that he should observe their actual conduct. Having done that he will find, I think, that British Idealism shows a sorry front. Yet now when Britain finally is ready to support the League why should we not rejoice? I am afraid I am a cynic; or perhaps just a common sense individual. It comes too clearly to my mind that British capitalists have very important interests in the Upper Nile region. I remember that British imperialism has carved out for itself an empire in Africa; and it has never shown itself ready to surrender any of it without bitter opposition. (Continued on Page 4)

George Johnston, Ranking New Brunswick Player, Is Dark Horse

WILL MEET PIGGOTT

At the end of yesterday's play in the Interfaculty Tennis Tournament four lesser lights were left in the struggle for possession of the McEachern Cup along with the seeded players, Crowson, Piggott, Eaton and Tomlinson. George Johnston, the ranking New Brunswick player who made his appearance Monday is still the dark horse of the meet. While he is not expected to beat Bill Piggott in the quarter-finals today he will provide the first opposition the Hamilton star has encountered to date.

The standard of play in the second and third rounds was not particularly brilliant but there were some very even matches. These took place amongst the intermediate players and while only one went to three sets they were mostly hard fought games. Now that the field has narrowed down to the eights the featured players will be called upon to provide the best exhibitions that they can provide. In view of this the officers of the Tennis Club would like to point out that any students who are interested in the game can view the matches without any charge. They are being held at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club on Price Street. Today will see the quarter finals of the singles and the first round of the doubles played.

CUBS AND TIGERS OPEN WORLD SERIES TODAY IN DETROIT

Best Pitchers, Rowe for Detroit and Warneke for Chicago to Wage Combat

CUBS FAVORED TO WIN

Tigers Have Older Players but Youth of Cubs no Handicap

Today, in Detroit, America's greatest annual sporting classic makes its 1935 debut—the World Series is on! The world, of course, as you are probably aware, is not completely involved; just the baseball representatives of two large American cities, Detroit and Chicago. Yet from the moment the Detroit Tigers face the Chicago Cubs in a struggle which is scheduled to go five games, and, in the event of tie-scores, even six or seven, for ninety per cent. of the people in United States and Canada, the other events in world affairs pale to insignificance. For after all, who are Mussolini or Haile Selassie that they should receive mention in any newspaper carrying the names of such immortals of the diamond as "School-boy" Rowe and Lonnie Warneke.

These latter gentlemen, pitchers by trade, are slated to pit their skill against each other in today's opener. Both have fine records. Rowe is a veritable idol in Detroit and Warneke holds just about the same spot in the hearts of Chicagoans. Those "in the know" think Warneke the superior performer of the two and largely for this reason call the Cubs to be "one up and four to go" tonight.

The Tigers have dominated in the American League since early this summer and way back in July Detroiters took it for granted that their team would win the League pennant and the

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Geo. C. Vair

Yesterday afternoon we got by the guardian of the closed practice at the Stadium. Take it from this observer Stevens doesn't seem to bank much on the trimming the Blues handed Balmy Beach. Looking at yesterday's workout one would think that Varsity had lost. There was no coaxing but there was plenty of action—inciting orders handed out. The Varsity mentor meant improvement to the extent of getting into the fray himself and showing the lads how it should be done. He still knows how, too.

From the looks of things Saturday's battle is going to have the fans on the edge of their seats all the way. Joe Connelly was snaring passes from all angles and the misses were very few as the former St. Mike's star ripped up the turf. Cam Gray was back in uniform and will be ready to go in his first grid battle of the season. The medico says Hughie Marks will be in shape for the tilt but Stevens is apparently taking no chances since we noticed Coulter, Miller, and Ripley tossing the oval around.

Last year Medicine lost out to the bridge building boys on College Street in the Mulock Cup final and we saw plenty of greenbacks reluctantly change hands. It is said that the Medicals are out for revenge and they have made a good start when Rosso, Argo backfielder, was brought around to give the boys a few pointers. However, it is a long road and more than one faculty has its eyes on the mug.

Ernie Ray, hard hitting defenceman on past senior hockey squads, is shortly departing northwards to don a Sudbury uniform. With his team-mate, Al Campbell, in Osgoode, Ace Bailey is going to have to round out a new rearguard.

The 150 lb. scullers got a tough break when their stroke, Jack Cameron, was taken down with an attack of the flu and forced them to cancel their trip to Montreal. The heavies, who have been fighting against bad water in the bay and absentee oarsmen, will have to go hard in their remaining practices in order to be able to keep in front on Saturday.

Any students who wish to get good value for their money and see at least thirty sporting events should snap up a $3.50 student book. Yes, this year it is four bits cheaper even though a tax "for relief purposes only" is collected. Get it this week and enjoy treating yourself to free rugby games for the next few months.

A little bird lit in the large left auditory lobe of the Sports Editor yesterday and whispered a tale of woe supposed to have come from a campus luminary who had lofty aspirations directed toward the addition to his qualifications of a much coveted scholarship by means of catching a place on one of Varsity's second teams. It seems the draw faced the said opponent with an unknown freshman who was surprisingly better at the game than the confident luminary and eliminated him without undue effort. Well, just one of life's ups and downs! But this time, down!

GOLF TEAM TRIALS THURSDAY MORNING

Preliminary Round at Weston Club; Return of Lathrop Strengthens Varsity

MCGILL IS STRONG

The trials for the University golf team will take place on Thursday morning, October 3, at Weston Golf Club. The Varsity club-wielders and divot-diggers will start off at 9.30 and play one round of 18 holes. The full privileges of the club are extended to those participating in the morning round. Unfortunately Weston is not available for an afternoon round, but the twelve low scorers will play a second round over Lamont Golf Course on Friday morning. Six men will be picked from these twelve to take the trip to Montreal and play in the Intercollegiate Championship on October 11 and 12. There is no green fee attached to either of Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. these rounds, but an entry fee of one dollar per person will be charged.

Whiting Lathrop, a member of the 1933 team, is back with us again, and much is expected from this hard-hitting star from Welland. From advance notices, McGill have a strong team this year, and a great tussle will probably ensue down in Montreal.

MISFORTUNE DOGS 150 ROWING CREW

"Tack" Squad, after Months of Hard Work, Lose Out Twice on Flukes

That dreaded phantom, ill-fortune, is still exerting its malign influence on the Varsity 150-pound rowing crew. This summer after two months of hard training, any hopes which the "tack-weights" entertained of winning their class at the Canadian Henley Regatta were rudely shattered when it was found a few days prior to the big event that one member of the crew could not possibly make weight, and consequently these boys had to sit in the grandstand and cheer the Heavy crew on to victory. Now, again, on the eve of the great intercollegiate classic in Montreal, where they were planning to pit their might against the Heavy Crews of both Varsity and McGill, they are forced to disband, as their stalwart stroke, Jack Cameron, has been taken ill with influenza.

The hopes of the Blue and White now rest on the Heavy Crew, but any anxiety which is felt for the retaining of the historic "barber pole" can be dispelled, because the University is being represented by one of the best crews ever to be assembled in a Varsity shell.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

We have been asked to draw the attention of all U.C. women athletes to the tea that is being given for them this afternoon in the Women's Union. Jean Atkinson is arranging the affair. All those who are at all interested in athletics are invited to attend, and it is hoped that a large number of freshettes will be present. This is an entirely new method of working up enthusiasm, but we think it admirable, for U.C. is such a large college that a series of small meetings does not always result in co-ordination.

Arrangements for the golf tournament are being completed with great efficiency by Jean Atkinson and Helen Dougan. So far they have received thirty entries, of which about 25 are from U.C. girls. How about a little more enthusiasm from the other colleges? Surely all the golf devotees did not graduate. There was quite a large turnout last year of girls not in U.C. and we know for a fact that there is at least one good golf player among the Nurses.

Those who do more biking than hitting in the grand old game will be glad to know that there is definitely going to be a consolation prize. Dr. Benson has kindly consented to present the prizes, two of which will be contributed by Vic and St. Hilda's. Eighteen holes will be played in the morning, and the driving, putting, and approaching will take place after lunch. Further good news is that tea, as well as lunch and green fee, will be included in the one dollar entry fee.

The Basketball Executive held a meeting on Monday, and made plans for the coming season. Practices will probably begin next week, and the games in about three weeks' time. U.C. will have three teams this year, and Vic two, as usual. Nurses and Meds are each entering one and St. Hilda's may have two teams, which will be something in the way of an experiment. The Saints had plenty of good fresh material last year, which they were unable to use, and they are hoping to develop it this year into a smart second squad.

tion. The parallel between Manchuria and Ethiopia is too close, too recent. British Idealism seems to me to play little part in either picture; except as a guise for subtle political manoeuvres.

The writer of the editorial, however, has put his finger on a matter which is vital to every British man and woman. What should our attitude be as regards the League? May I say here that we should on no account support British Imperialism. The high-sounding speeches of men who are only the tools of a capitalist, imperialist diplomacy must not betray us into a foolish disregard of the forces motivating those speeches. At the moment it is to the advantage of certain interests to support the League. We, the peoples of the world, must support the ideal of world peace, which we have attempted to embody in the League of Nations.

But we should be ever on the watch lest we be betrayed into supporting a tool in the hands of unscrupulous imperialists. The ideal of the League which we support has been betrayed by the British capitalist government in the past. It behooves us to beware of talk of British Idealism.

Do you remember the slogans which were used to drive our fathers into the last war? "Save the world for democracy". Our fathers believed in democracy. They went to war and died in the belief that they were fighting for that ideal. We know now that they were betrayed by the hypocrites of imperialistic conflict. Today those same forces are joining battle—a battle which we are called upon to fight. We will not be betrayed by the slogan, "Save the world for democracy".

A new one must be found. Is "Defend the League of Nations" the new slogan? There is no one of us who can be foolish enough not to see the treachery possible here. The peoples of the world must band together in sober understanding of the deadly peril which confronts them. No naive faith in the Idealism of a piratical imperialism must lead to their slaughter.

Yours truly,
Ken Woodsworth,
4th Year Vic.

There is a distinct shortage of women in residence, and men who have automobiles, according to the bureau operator. is shipped to Port Hope, Ont., where the radium is extracted.

Retracing her aerial footsteps to Fort Resolution, Miss Biss made her way across to Fort Simpson on the Mackenzie River, and down the vast Mackenzie delta to Aklavik at the mouth. The Mackenzie delta Miss Biss described as "a mingled waste of water and marsh extending for miles." Even here, however, well within the Arctic circle, the stunted spruce trees continued to grow. The journey never emerged from the tree-belt.

Thence, in the path of the old gold rushers, the plane ascended the Rat River to the treacherous pass which halted most of the '90ers, in quest of Klondike gold, and down the Porcupine to its junction with the Yukon. The voyage up the Yukon to Dawson City was the only extended inland boat-trip that Miss Biss made in all her travels. Dawson City she found to be a mere shell of its old lusty self, when it boasted 40,000 miners and shopkeepers. Since that time, gold production in the Yukon has been mechanized, and the demand for numerous prospectors and miners has vanished.

Miss Biss was impressed by the hospitality of the frozen northerners; by the warm climate—"you would hardly dream you were near the Arctic circle"—and by the lack of night-time, which sometimes interfered with her sleep, though it proved useful for daylight reading at one a.m. There are many tourists on the Yukon, she noted, chiefly Americans from California, taking the trip to and from Dawson. Yukoners complain of their neglect by Canadian tourists. On the Mackenzie, what travellers there were seemed generally to be on business.

A novel device for fishing was the fishwheel, used on the Yukon to catch the salmon in which the river abounds. The swift current rotates the wheel; and the muddy water prevents the unfortunate fish from seeing where they are going; and they are scooped up by the hundreds in nets. The chief mesh of the country is caribou, and oranges and other fruit are worth their

The aeroplane service, which Miss Biss found very efficient, is operated by two private companies. "It is not too much to say," she stated, "that aeroplanes have opened up most of the north country and made mining on an extensive scale possible. Attendance was large, approximating 300 persons. Owing to a misprint in yesterday's Varsity, a contingent of University College students were uninvited guests.

Refreshments and informal singing around the piano concluded the evening's programme.

ENG. AND HIST. CLUB ANNOUNCES PROJECTS

Mr. Claude Bissell, president of the English and History Club outlined the club's projects for the coming year at a meeting in the Women's Union yesterday afternoon. A joint meeting with the U.C. Players' Guild has been proposed and there will be discussions on academic subjects as well as historical and literary problems of the present day. The College Representatives elected were Mr. Eric McCann, University College; Miss Dorothy Wincott, Victoria; Miss Ursula Bennett, Trinity and Mr. M. J. Shea, St. Michael's.

The Tigers, that is most of them, played in last year's Series against the Cardinals, and although they did not win, they are more experienced than the Cubs. Most of the players on the Chicago team are mere kids in their early twenties. Frankie Frisch, mentor of the St. Louis Cards claims that youth is no disadvantage: "I played in seven World Series and I know that the first one was a romp."

Anyway on the opening day of ticket sale, all reserve seats were sold in two hours, some for as high as $75 and $100, and there'll be a dozen customers for every rush seat today. The few pages deal chiefly with the acts of the apostles as found in the New Testament, and it represents a type that is rare in Ethiopian literature and gives any student an opportunity better to understand the character of the Ethiopian peoples, at this time when we have become so interested in them.

CUBS AND TIGERS OPEN WORLD SERIES TODAY

right to meet the National League Champion.

In contrast, the Cubs were in third and fourth position most of the season and it was not until the Giants and Cardinals went into a nose dive towards the end of August that they became monarchs of the National throne, and managed to keep their crowns till the end.

The Tigers, that is most of them, played in last year's Series against the Cardinals, and although they did not win, they are more experienced than the Cubs. Most of the players on the Chicago team are mere kids in their early twenties. Frankie Frisch, mentor of the St. Louis Cards claims that youth is no disadvantage: "I played in seven World Series and I know that the first one was a romp."

Anyway on the opening day of ticket sale, all reserve seats were sold in two hours, some for as high as $75 and $100, and there'll be a dozen customers for every rush seat today. An unseen audience of millions will have their radios tuned in and they're going to hear some baseball that even grandfather, aged 90, will sit up and listen to.

So Long Until To-morrow!

11.45 p.m. . . . The phone on the news desk rings! STOP THE PRESS!!! (That's easy. It doesn't start till seven in the morning.) "Varsity offus, Murgatroyd speaking. . . yeah, whaddya want . . . Can't getcher story till tomorrow eh? . . . Ochay."

The news machine of a daily newspaper swings into action.

There are less glamorous times in the routine of a daily newspaper (I'll say there are!) but dull moments on The Varsity are few. A definition of "few" . . . No great proficiency in writing required (never mind that stuff eh!) All we ask is a desire to write. . . And believe you us how you'll need it!

Guess that'll hold 'em.

KINGSTON DOCTOR FINOS CANCER CURE

perimentation began to flow in, but in the first two or three years, when he was but an obscure scientist, finances were not so readily obtainable and he claims that it was a "lucky break" that happened to have sufficient funds available to carry on the work during that period.

Even before the "Ensol Era", Dr. Connell's career was far from drab. A graduate of Queen's Medical School in 1917, he served with the Canadian Medical Corps in Russia during the World War. In 1920 he returned from Russia only to shortly afterwards again travel to Europe, this time to take post-graduate work at London, Edinburgh and Vienna, before returning to set up a practice in Kingston.

Except for his assistants, Dr. Connell has been alone in his endeavours. Modest gentleman that he is, he states that any credit for the discovery of "Ensol" should go to them.

His first intentions were to find a secretion hostile to cataracts, then the idea came to him that an element naturally hostile to a cataract would likewise be hostile to cancer. Ensol is proving that his calculations were sound.

The Ensol Treatment is as yet only in the experimental stages, but having attracted such attention already, its future will be followed with avid interest.

If Dr. Connell succeeds in finding a sure cure for cancer, one of mankind's most horrible and deadly arch-enemies, he will in all truth be a benefactor with few peers in all civilization's history. The prayers of suffering thousands and their sympathizers are with him.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Addis Ababa—Nearly 250,000 Ethiopian warriors were reported on the march last night, 160,000 of them toward the Italian colonial frontier, in anticipation of a general mobilization today. Emperor Haile Selassie decided upon the mobilization after dispatching a protest to Geneva charging Italy has already invaded his kingdom with 50,000 troops.

Rome—Twenty million Italians, caught up by patriotic fervor to a fever heat, staged the greatest mobilization in history, screaming determination to conquer Ethiopia and hang the black emperor, Haile Selassie, in his central square.

Paris—France decided to stand with Great Britain in support of the League of Nations' effort to prevent Italian aggression against Ethiopia.

London—Key members of the cabinet met last night to consider measures in case of possible emergencies arising out of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict. A cabinet session yesterday gave full power to them to "take all necessary steps that the situation demands." Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin is expected to reply today to Mussolini's defiant speech.

Woodstock—Elizabeth Anne Tilford was convicted tonight by a Supreme Court jury of the poison murder of her husband.

ST. MIKE'S FROSH WELL INITIATED

Rugby Game Ends in a Shoe-Polish Fight; Singing and Tap-Dancing

COPPERS ANNOY SPEAKERS

Yesterday was Freshmen Day at St. Mike's. The Frosh covered themselves with mud and glory in the afternoon, taking the Sophs by a 12-0 score in a fast and hard rugby game. However, the Sophs had their revenge in the last quarter of the game—smearing their opponents from head to foot with black shoe polish.

In the evening a reception was held in the East Common Room of Hart House, attended by 400 St. Mike's students. Songs, speeches and dances were in order; upper classmen followed the old tradition—flinging pennies at Charlie Drum, Frosh president, during his oration, but did not succeed in upsetting him.

Among the speakers of the evening were J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, who spoke on the scope of the University; Father McCormick, superior of the college, against hazing Freshmen; and Mr. Pat O'Byrne, on the "primitive idiosyncrasies" of the Freshmen.

The high spots of the occasion were tap dancing, the Freshmen singing and the speech of Mr. Drum. Music was furnished by the College orchestra.

A shoe polish battle was planned to take place in Queen's Park after the reception, but was called off because of the excellent spirit of co-operation of the "Freshies", which far exceeded that of last year's brood.

POLITICAL ASPIRANTS OF FOUR PARTIES HEARD BY STUDENTS

Liberals, Reconstructionists, C.C.F.s and Communists Represented

CONSERVATIVE ABSENT

Last night at the Women's Union students of the University of Toronto were given the unique opportunity of listening to candidates of the Liberal, Reconstruction, C.C.F. and Communist parties outline the programmes of their respective parties. The Conservative speaker was unable to make an appearance.

Mr. Joliffe, C.C.F. candidate, who spoke first, stated that the aim of his party was to institute Socialism in Canada. He charged the Liberal, Conservative and Reconstruction parties with being committed to preserve the tottering capitalistic system, and declared that their efforts at social reform were only alleviative measures which do not remove the root of our present ills.

Mr. Duncan, the speaker for the Liberal party, declared that the aim of his party was a rational economy, low tariff and balance between industry and production. He asserted that, as a left (Continued on Page 4)

GIFTED YOUNG ARTISTS AID FROM ORCHESTRA

Saida Gerrard with Studio Group, George Lambert Featured

The Promenade Symphony Concert in Varsity Arena tonight will present Saida Gerrard, young Canadian danseuse and her studio group and George Lambert, young English baritone, together with an orchestral program including works by Mendelssohn, Cesar Franck and Luigiini.

Mr. Lambert will sing the Aria—To the Evening Star from Tannhauser by Wagner.

Miss Gerrard will be assisted by Sylvia Fistel, Thelma Manheim, Pearl Tenenbaum and Minna Skale in a dance of Negro Spirituals. During this presentation, Mr. Lambert will chant a Negro Spiritual.

The orchestral program opens with the overture Ruy Blas by Mendelssohn, a work that was written and rehearsed in less than a week. Next is the Cesar Franck Symphony in D minor, a work that was completed in 1889 and first performed at the Paris Conservatoire on February 17th of that year. The final number is Ballet Egyptian by Alexandre Luigiini, who wrote numerous ballets and also composed symphonic music.

EXTENSION COURSE EXTENDS CURRICULA

New Cultural Courses Added; Classes in Journalism Prove Popular

TUITION INEXPENSIVE

The interest of Torontonians in a variety of subjects ranging from Aesthetics to Lipreading is evidenced by their being included amongst the new subjects offered by the Extension Department of the University of Toronto. These subjects have been included as a result of requests made to the various lecturers. Interest in current world problems is typified by the introduction of such courses as Modern International Relations, Monetary Theory and a course in Economics dealing with present day labour problems. Interest in literature is signified by the introduction of three new courses dealing with the drama, and novels. A class in one of these subjects is formed when forty students have enrolled. The tuition is very inexpensive, five dollars for some courses and ten for others.

The type of students who attend these evening classes are mainly business or professional people. They attend the lectures usually purely through interest in the subject as a hobby rather than through any desire for vocational training. The range of interest is one of the most attractive features of this Department whose activities form an interesting note upon the pursuits and interests of the citizens of Toronto.

Mr. W. R. Read, third year Medical student says it is "a good idea to give the young men of Canada a chance for a change."

Mr. W. B. McGruther, third year B. and M. student, also favours the idea of representation, but feels that a member for the University would not be feasible. "Why could not the students vote a week early in a special Varsity poll, and their votes sent to their individual ridings?" he asked.

Flannel Nighties Thought Passe Are Still in Use, So Co-eds Say

Nighties—those long, flowing costumes popular in the Victorian era—are actually worn by some University of Toronto co-eds, a canvass of the women's residences last night indicated.

And even if the co-ed does not wear the ubiquitous nightie, she spends at least 12 hours a day in pyjamas—that is if she does not go out of the residence during the evening.

An advertisement for "dainty things" in the college paper stating that college women spend one-quarter of their time in pyjamas sent local newshawks hot on the trail of the night-attire enthusiasts.

It was revealed co-eds in Whitney Hall, St. Hilda's and Annesley Hall pyjamas the most convenient garb to study in during the evening. Assuming they sleep eight hours each day, it was estimated the University gal is in pyjamas for 12 hours a day on the average. Imagine college women, noted for their style and taste, lounging in floppy attire for half their existence—but 'tis a fact.

Mulock House admitted at least three of the inhabitants wore the nightie of the mauve decade when they retired. Falconer House and Cody too, revealing the intimate facts of the house, said there were some members who shunned the modern pyjamas for the ancient feminine regalia.

Nighties, for the most part, are flannellette while pyjamas run the gamut of styles and colours. "The ones I have on at present are bright tomato, trimmed with lace," a charming co-ed at Cody House chimed over the phone.

Colours run to red and blue, the co-eds said, and even Chinese satin ones, adorned with dragons and such, are seen in the halls of our women's residences. "The colour depends on the mood and the temperament of the wearer. Bright corduroy are popular for the lounging outfits worn in the evening," a St. Hilda's co-ed said.

But the nightie problem was the moot question. "It's mighty chilly to get up in," commented a St. Hilda's girl, referring to the nightie. "One is guarded against all emergencies when wearing pyjamas—such as fires and things when immediate dash to the street is imperative," she said.

It's mostly silk and satin pyjamas they sleep in, the co-eds say. Flannellette pyjamas are too hard to wash. But the nighties are flannellette—definitely.

Night caps are passe in all residences—even Mulock House, which reported the greatest number of nightie fans—and those things called sleepers worn by very small children are NOT worn by co-eds. "What do you think this place is—a nursery?" an Annesley Hall student retorted.

Don't be a reporter—it's tough to ask a college gal if she wears a nightie.

Public opinion amongst students at the University of Toronto strongly endorsed the stand taken by the college paper in an editorial yesterday that the University be represented in the House of Commons as a separate constituency or else facilities provided to enable out-of-town students to vote in the city, a survey taken last night revealed.

Students from practically every faculty, a member of the Institute of International Affairs, officials of colleges and faculty members commented diversely concerning the important question which has assumed special significance in view of the forthcoming federal election a week from next Monday.

Approached at random on the campus yesterday students of all colleges took a distinct interest in the controversy, backing the suggestion concerning student franchise with only a few dissenting opinions.

Third year, fourth year, and post-graduate students interviewed by The Varsity yesterday all expressed their opinion that University students should have some sort of representation in elections.

Mr. W. R. Read, third year Medical student says it is "a good idea to give the young men of Canada a chance for a change."

Mr. W. B. McGruther, third year B. and M. student, also favours the idea of representation, but feels that a member for the University would not be feasible. "Why could not the students vote a week early in a special Varsity poll, and their votes sent to their individual ridings?" he asked.

Telephone Numbers

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared for the press and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

Net Artists Advance To Semi-final Round

Play Closely Contested in Most of Yesterday's Matches

CROWSON WINS HANOILY

The four seeded players in the inter-faculty tennis tournament were successful yesterday in gaining their places in the semi-final round. With the exception of the match played between Harris Crowson, the defending champion and H. A. Phillips, in which the former won without much difficulty, the play was very closely contested.

Bill Piggott, the number two seeded player, while he triumphed over George Johnston of New Brunswick, was forced to play the tennis of which he is capable of producing. This match was the best as far as the quality of play is concerned and Johnston distinguished himself in defeat. One shot from his racket, a cross court volley off the forehand from the back court, which he made while retreating from the net was one of the neatest plays shown yet in the tournament.

YEAR'S WORK PLANNED BY CONSERVATIVE CLUB

Prominent Speaker Assured for Coming Luncheon Meeting

At a small but enthusiastic meeting of young Conservatives held last night in Hart House, plans of attack for the coming year were discussed and new members welcomed and introduced. The most important item on the program was discussion of a luncheon meeting of the club to be held early next week in Hart House. A prominent member of the party will be obtained to address the gathering; it was hoped that Denton Massey, the Conservative organizer for the province would be available, but failing that, the members were assured that an interesting and forceful speaker would be secured, possibly Col. G. R. Geary, K.C., the new Minister of Justice, or Louis Singer, K.C., former M.P.P.

Debates Committee Plans Coming Year

First Hart House debate will take place on Wednesday, October 30, it was announced at the meeting of the debates committee last night. The motion for debate has not definitely been chosen but it was stated that the Italo-Ethiopian crisis would be discussed with emphasis possibly upon the question of sanctions.

No guest speaker has been obtained as yet, the committee reported, but Dr. Stanley Russell and B. K. Sandwell, Editor of the Saturday Night, are two possibilities who will be approached. It was emphasized, however, that the debate would be predominantly an undergraduate affair.

ARTISTIC MODELER OF FISHER COACH ATTENDING S.P.S.

Dave Tennant, Winner of $5,000 Scholarship in Engineering

COMES FROM WESTERN

Dave Tennant, with red hair and a green tie, is a freshman this year at S.P.S., carrying a $5,000 scholarship he won by building miniature coaches. His award was first prize in the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild competition to be used for the advancement of his engineering knowledge.

Last year he spent at the University of Western Ontario taking a special general course. This year he said his engineering course here is proving much more satisfactory despite the fact he is going through the trials and tribulations of a freshman for the second time.

Tennant comes from London, Ont., where he constructed his scholarship winning model of an ancient royal coach at his home. The construction was a complete replica to the finest detail and was adjudged the winner from a large field of contestants.

The Fisher Craftsman's Guild, Tennant explained, is really the idea of Mr. Fisher himself, who has had a life-long interest in things mechanical. Every year a competition in model coach-building is instituted with lavish prizes in order to stimulate an interest in handicraft amongst boys of teen age.

WILL TEACH CRAFTS AT ART GALLERY

Room and Instructor Available for Any University Group

PRACTICAL FORM OF ART

In an attempt to develop a truly worthy American folk-art movement a school of universal handicrafts has been established in New York. This movement towards a greater use of the hand in creative art is closely akin to that practiced by groups in the Art Gallery. Here, The Varsity learned from Mr. Arthur Lismer, are great opportunities for undergraduates to become acquainted with art from a practical point of view.

Last year there were two groups of students from Victoria College who went to the Art Gallery not to study art or its history in the bald sense but to learn how to express their innate creative ability. Instruction was given to them in any branch of handwork in which they were interested, including sketching, modelling, stage designing, and textiles. It is interesting to note that out of the enthusiasm displayed by the men there has been formed the Sketch Club and Sketch Room of Hart House. This year there again will be available a room and instructor for use of a University group. Mr. Lismer would welcome any group who so desired to express their creative instinct in their leisure time.

"The movement toward hand work is indicative of a growing interest in what the individual can and will do himself. In this time of changes politically and economically, there is the tendency to revert to the handicrafts. This is well illustrated in Ireland and in Russia where the peasant or labouring class has turned to some form of (Continued on Page 4)

Has Alberta Social Credit?

The much discussed problem of Social Credit which is today one of the most important problems in Canadian politics, as evidenced by the overwhelming victory of Aberhart Social Credit in Alberta, has for the past few days been receiving considerable attention in the columns of The Varsity. The question has arisen as to the official attitude of Douglas Social Credit to the Aberhart system. The letter printed below should clarify this point.

Dear Sir:

It is only natural that the conclusive victory of the Social Credit Party of William Aberhart in Alberta should focus attention on the economic theories which bear the same name.

The more responsible sections of the press have been at pains to differentiate between the theories of Major Douglas, the founder of Social Credit, and the plan of Mr. Aberhart as outlined in his radio addresses and in the little blue "Manual". On the other hand, in some quarters where Douglas-Social Credit is cordially hated and feared, an attempt has been made to identify the two schools with the hope that, in the event of a debacle in Alberta following the introduction of the Social Credit system of Mr. Aberhart, Douglas Social Credit itself would be discredited and the most potent threat to the financial monopoly in Canada would thus be greatly weakened.

It is unnecessary to discuss the differences of the two systems at any length. As far as orthodox Douglas supporters are concerned the matter has been clearly dealt with in the letter Major Douglas wrote to Attorney General Lyburn before he left Alberta last spring. Two quotations from this letter will show the orthodox Douglas viewpoint regarding the technical features of the Aberhart scheme.

Speaking of Mr. Aberhart's "Just Price", Douglas says:

"... so far from such a proposal increasing purchasing power, it is a form of taxation which in all probability decreases purchasing power by raising prices."

And at another part of the letter he writes:

"Generally speaking it would appear on the face of it that Mr. Aberhart has not grasped that Social Credit involves the creation of additional purchasing power, either by the reduction of prices below cost, for the purpose of enabling the consumer to obtain more goods for a given amount of money in his possession, while the financial deficit thus caused is made up to the producer in fresh credit, or by additional sufficient purchasing power which is not passed through the costing system and therefore does not increase prices, in the form of a national dividend, or probably by both these methods together."

It may be wondered why, in view of this vital difference, the Social Credit advocates in Canada should view the victory in Alberta with so much satisfaction. The reason is that there is the strong hope that Mr. Aberhart, having been given a mandate to abolish poverty in Alberta, will call upon the man with the best technical solution for this problem—Major C. H. Douglas. This is the course which he announced he would take, and Social Credit supporters are looking for him to keep his promise in this regard. If he does so it is the beginning of the end of the biggest racket in the world—banking. All discussion about the constitutional difficulties of introducing the Aberhart ideas is futile for a "sound money" Federal Government, regardless of the political label, (and all the present parties are in reality quite orthodox financially) would be only too pleased to allow him enough rope to hang himself. But to have Douglas advising Alberta to press for the power to abolish poverty (if the Federal Government denies that power) is a much more serious matter in the eyes of the Money Monopoly.

Yours sincerely,

C. N. KERSLAKE,

Editor: Canada's National Social Credit Journal.
(Hon. Dominion Secretary pro. tem, Douglas Credit League of Canada.)

We Want School Spirit

More than ever we hear the complaints today of a lack of what is very indefinitely defined as "School spirit". Certainly there has been a falling off of interest of the student body in the activities about the University. And this is a regrettable thing.

There may be several reasons for this lack of enthusiasm displayed by the students. The coldly logical and indifferent position they assume is in no small part due to the conditions which have surrounded many undergraduates in the past few years. The depression has stripped much of the glamour from many forms of entertainment which were formerly thought desirable. The depression has also produced a somewhat cautious although on the whole more reliable, type of student who has no illusions regarding the promised land beyond the graduation exercises where intellectual and financial milk and honey flow freely. In this type of student it is difficult to arouse anything akin to the enthusiasm which was present in the undergraduates of a decade ago who spent a brief and hilarious term at the University and then were received into the business world with open arms.

This apathy is very unfortunate. The student who goes to the University and graduates having done nothing more than attend lectures and "plug" has, in our opinion, overlooked the greatest gift which an educational institution can bestow on one. This gift, we would define as the ability to enjoy the other gifts which benevolent governments and parents have bestowed upon us. True, some students are inclined to err in the wrong direction. This is also unfortunate but at least leaves the student with pleasant recollections of his undergraduate days.

Being enthusiastic over anything is usually a healthy sign. This point is worth remembering as the football season is about to open. For sixty years the University has annually fielded a football team. During that time there has been a rise and fall in the attendance at the games. High attendances have never been a sign of low academic standards. It is a very desirable thing that the students show some enthusiasm regarding this, the acme of intercollegiate competition.

While we do not suggest standing out in the rain cheering ourselves hoarse while our teams slither around in the mud, as a means of showing our loyalty to our University, we do think it would be a good sign.

Publicity Hinders Research

Giving place only to war news, the announcement of a cure for cancer covered the front pages of yesterday's newspapers. Any progress made in combating this dread disease is a cause for rejoicing and it is right that the world should know about it.

But too much publicity can sometimes do great harm. Dr. Connell himself has been careful to make it clear that his discovery must not be described as a "cure". He believes that he is on the right track and that his new compound may prove the solution of the cancer problem. But much experimentation and research still remains to be carried out and with the traditional caution of the medical profession he is wary of arousing false hopes.

Naturally every cancer sufferer is eager to take advantage of the new discovery but it is to be feared that such a deluge of patients as he has received and will receive in the immediate future cannot but hinder Dr. Connell in his work. He will, it is true, be given an opportunity to test his discovery but the number of his patients will be out of all proportion to his facilities for caring for them.

This is in no sense a criticism of Dr. Connell. He is doing everything in his power to perfect his treatment. But it is a criticism of the journalistic tendency to sensationalism. The world will watch Dr. Connell's work with interest but it will be to the benefit of the public as well as Dr. Connell if no false impression of finality is spread about through his discovery being "played up" too much.

Let us hope and trust that Dr. Connell will be attended by success in his efforts to vanquish the scourge of humanity.

Liberty never died from direct attack. Liberty dies from the encroachment and disregard of its safeguards.—Herbert Hoover.

Uncle!

This muffled cry of surrender is forced from our lips only because the limit of human endurance has been reached. With very little comment, and silently assuming the full responsibility of our deeds, in the last two days we have passed on to you the poetic efforts of friends Iago and Asaph, both concerning themselves with the new Class of 319. We might have withheld these had we ever dreamt that they would prove the inspiration of still another Freshman dissertation. However, with serious doubts as to our own sanity, we give you the work of this new contributor, about whose insanity we have no doubts.

When one considers architecture,
Nothing seems so futile quite;
And yet, at times, it seems all right.

Such notions finally prompted me

And, having risen, I can see
One poem lead to many more.

Did I say "poem", sirs, at first?
I should have said "immortal verse".
This one, which may appear the worst
You've seen, might still be worse,

As I shall prove anon—
'Tis little better than a curse.
And now may I go on?

Let architects and laundrymen
And other misbegotten fellows
Be set above all other men
And evermore, and yet again
Forever, eat marshmallows.

While petty pompous potentates
Are sizzled on Tartaric gates
To ponder on the righteous Fates
Who so abhorred bald regal pates
As to impale each noble torso
Securely there and ever more so.

Inconsequence

By Harold M. Sommerstein

The other day we said to a friend of ours, "I lent you a dollar last Thursday, how about paying it back to me?" He replied, "True, you lent me a dollar last Thursday, but you refused to lend me two dollars last Friday, therefore you owe me a dollar." A quite illogical argument, is it not?

Yet it is this very same argument which critics of the League of Nations use. They balance the great deal that the League has failed to accomplish against the comparatively little that it has actually accomplished and render judgment against the League. But this is not only illogical, it is dangerously insane.

The League has stopped certain, albeit relatively unimportant wars; the mandates system and the protection of minorities have been partly effective; the technical co-operation and the social and humanitarian activities have met with overwhelming success—what the League has accomplished cannot be belittled in any way by what it has failed to accomplish. If there were no League, nothing would have been accomplished. So long as the League continues to achieve anything at all, no matter how unimportant it may be, towards the realization of international and interracial peace and good will it justifies its existence, and deserves the support of every intelligent human being.

We favour the League because we believe that something is better than nothing. Others oppose it because they want either everything or nothing. They call themselves pacifists, they want "peace at any price", but in reality they advocate a bloodier slaughter than ever the so-called capitalist imperialists are alleged to have provoked.

The naivete of the writer of Monday's editorial on "British Idealism Strengthens the League" is surpassed and far surpassed, by that of yesterday's Correspondent. The League of Nations is composed mainly of capitalist countries. If they should succeed in maintaining peace, hopes of a world revolution would (fortunately) be blasted. A successful League means an unsuccessful Comintern. This yesterday's Correspondent knows. This, perhaps, is why he opposes the League.

The lengthy letters of men who attempt to turn public opinion against the League should not betray us into a foolish disregard of their real purpose.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George Vair

Now that the Blues have the Reg. de Gruchy cup tucked away in their possession the latest rumours emanating from a downtown daily states that the Argo club are "on the itch" to get in a game and "settle" the issue. How it could be arranged and why the Scullers might have made such a belated opinion is beyond us. The possibilities of such an encounter are very remote since both teams have a heavy schedule before them. This week the Double Blue will have enough trouble to keep on top of their own league since Andy Mullan and Tommy Burns will be absent without thinking of chances they passed up earlier in the season.

Reports from McGill boast of a greater football squad with plenty of the old fight mixed with the necessary portion of grey matter. Anyhow the team reads well in an article regarding Saturday's 35-0 affair when they trampled R.M.C. underfoot, which has just come in from the eastern university. Evidently Coach O'Brien has decided to forget that forward passes are in vogue and has concentrated on end runs, plunges and cut-in plays. Anton, a regular half and Byrne, a substitute, combined to show that the idea was O.K. when they combined to carry the ball 40 yards in 5 consecutive plunges. Yes, they were playing an intermediate team but the Cadets are never softies at any time. Don Hedges is said to have fitted in well at flying wing, Don Young's permanent berth for several seasons.

Coach Storen must have his Mustangs working out in the middle of the night for all the information that has leaked out concerning his squad, but don't let that 26-0 game with Sarnia sear you into believing that the London boys are definitely the weak sister this fall. Storen has the reputation for getting the boys to work for him and trick plays and the aerial route are his best ground gainers, which should make the opener a game to watch. The former St. Mike's mentor has some good material, including Box, Sherk and Veroni of last year's club to work with, besides the fact that a change in coach has sent many a losing team to the front, so don't let the grandstand quarterbacks kid you that it is just a push over.

It seems that Dizzy Dean, ace pitcher of the St. Louis Cards, is in danger of losing his reputation as a baseball prophet. When quizzed regarding the World Series he stated that he didn't believe the Chicagoans would win more than one game in the series since a team could not continue getting the breaks in a World's Series game similar to those which carried them to a new record of consecutive victories. The Grimm men can't have heard the great Dean's prediction for they promptly snatched the first game 3-0 in the Motor City and thereby put a substantial dent in Mr. Dean's ideas. He had better stick to pitching.

After days of indecision the McGill club have decided that the race will go on Saturday, as previously announced, but only as an exhibition match. This means that the traditional "barber pole" will remain in Toronto for another season. The Redmen have run into a dearth of rowing material this year and have been forced to recruit a crew composed partially of graduate shell experts. Unfortunately rowing, one of the cleanest athletic pastimes, has never been regarded as a major sport in Canada but it is certainly to be regretted when a university the size of McGill cannot muster a crew of oarsmen from its male students.

The student tickets are now on sale. There is little need to draw to the attention of the student body the advisability of purchasing these season tickets. This year the tickets are $3.50 a book and admit the holder to every athletic event on the campus. Incidentally this includes approximately thirty-five games, which makes the cost one dime per game. The newly assessed amusement tax is included in the initial outlay so students need not worry further about paying a nickel or whatever it may be at every game attended. Another factor in their favour is that the student section is without doubt one of the best at the stadium.

The information on which we based a comment regarding a local athlete in yesterday's column has been found to be inaccurate. We regret that this error has occurred and regret also any injury resulting to the party's reputation and hope for a continued friendly relationship between the person involved and The Varsity.

U.C. LADY ATHLETES INAUGURATE SEASON

Golf and Tennis Tournaments Are Progressing Favourably

The Women's Athletic Society of University College held the first tea of its kind, yesterday at the Women's Union. The president, Miss Jean Atkinson, addressed a very encouraging turn-out, among which freshies were predominant. Miss Atkinson complimented the girls on the large number of players who had turned out for the golf tournament. Some of the tennis aspirants, however, were late in signing up and as a result had to be excluded from the competition. Both tournaments are progressing very well. The hockey teams, of course, do not begin to practise until after Christmas.

The coaches for the University College basketball teams have already been chosen. Louise Crouch, and Wilma Hazlett are to coach the seniors, Lorna Reid the juniors, and Quitta Mennell the freshies. Basketball notices are to be posted in the University College cloakroom and practises are to start next week.

FACULTY RUGBYISTS PRACTISING HARD

Mulock Cup Aspirants Hard at Work; Freshmen in Evidence

SEVERAL STRONG TEAMS

Hard battering line plunges, swift extension runs, and forward passing, all in their as yet verdant state of completion, are featuring the nightly workouts on the various interfaculty campus. Within the shadow of Hart House clock sharp crips signals rent the air as interfaculty squads go through the motions of football attack, shrilling, shrieking whistles stop plays and a general hubbub reigns over the back campus as signals are gone over and plays drawn up.

The general hustle and bustle of harried freshmen formerly dashing to lectures, is transmitted onto the campus where they join the kindly and all-knowing sophs in another form of exhilaration. Here they can vent their spleen to the utmost when they bring down opposing lineemen. Wreathed in the aureole of football greatness, with anticipatory dreams of some day transferring their rugby lore to the Varsity Big Blue squad these toiling gridmen drill incessantly with the one big purpose at hand and that of capturing the Mulock Cup, emblematic of interfaculty supremacy—a great aim, 'tis true.

Of all rugby series the Mulock Cup stands out as the one in which great exhibitions of how football should or should not be played. In many cases football as played may be just in the embryo stage but certainly there is no lack of enthusiasm as the different faculties line up and play. Symbolical with interfaculty football it is learned that the Engineers from S.P.S. are always in there with a scrappy club, while the vaunted Meds and Dents are always willing to give pains and aches to those with Mulock Cup aspirations. Again behind the stadium we find Trinity, and at little Vic the Scarlet and Gold of Victoria with similar designs of their own. As it has been pointed out all faculties are determined to make a bid for interfaculty supremacy, not to mention Forestry faculty with a team of approximately fourteen strong, many of whom compete for the entire sixty minute session; and across the park after a lapse of a few years St. Mike's are in the process of building up a squad worthy of the "fighting Irish" tradition and so it goes on. With the referee's opening whistle until the final ebbs and flows in November the teams battle on and on for interfaculty supremacy, with ever recurring upsets playing an all important factor in the final acquisition of the Mulock Cup.

HIGH HOPES HELD FOR RUGGER SQUAD

Team Compares Favourably with Varsity Intercollegiate Champs of Last Year

THREE TEAMS ENTERED

The Varsity English Rugby team, under the capable direction of Coach J. Bowles, shapes up as the team to win this year. With Captain Magner, Coglan, Egan, Elliott, Kyle and Proust of last year's champions and reinforced by seasoned men from the second team, Varsity presents a squad which in practice displays good team work, which augurs well for the coming season. The coach was so pleased with the present aggregation, that he compared them favourably with Varsity's intercollegiate champions of last year, who were ranked with the best English rugby teams in Eastern Canada. Inaugurated in 1923 as an intercollegiate sport, the game has grown in prominence and also in popularity. Varsity won the championship the first three years of competition, 1923-26. No champion was declared in 1926-27 due to a tie. For the next six years 1927-33 McGill were unbeatable. Varsity, however, broke their winning streak in 1933-34 and ran their string to two consecutive wins last year.

Three teams are entered: Queen's, McGill and Varsity, each team playing but two games. Two wins are necessary to annex the championship and Varsity intends to do that little thing on October 26 when Queen's come here and on November 2 with the Redmen of Montreal as their prospective victims.

Varsity students will be able to see the team in action on Saturday, Oct. 5 at 3 o'clock on the back campus when they oppose the Wanderers, a highly rated team locally, in a pre-season fixture.

VICTORIA DRAMATIC CLUB PRESENTS ORIGINAL PLAY

Three One-Act Plays will be Presented at Hart House Early Next Month

A highlight of the open meeting of Victoria Dramatic Club at Wymilwood last night was the presentation of two one-act comedies, one of which, "Mr. Miggles", was written by a member of the club, George Johnston. The two parts were taken by Betty Boylen and the author. The other play, "The Constant Lover", was acted by Margaret Davies and Bob McRae.

It was announced that three one-act plays, "Drouth" by Armstrong, "Undecurrent" by Ehler, and "East of Eden" by Morley, will be presented at Hart House early next month. The choice of play for the main production will be announced sometime next week, and try-outs for it and for the one-act plays will begin immediately.

VARSITY SECONDS MEET D.A.C. IN RUGBY TILT

Junior Blues Squad Encounters Much Lauded Parkdale Grads

Tomorrow afternoon will see the opening of the intercollegiate intermediate rugby schedule in Guelph where the Varsity Seconds will engage the O.A.C. squad in what promises to be a closely fought contest.

Coaches Newton and Dawson put the team prospects through a strenuous practice behind locked doors last night and the boys came through with flying colours. Although the Agriculturists have always produced a strong contender, the Varsity team, which will be selected tonight, will take a lot of beating.

The junior team, which is entered in the T.R.U. Junior Series, will also be chosen after tonight's practice. They have been hard at work and should make a serious bid for the championship. In Thompson and Al Ebister, whose brother Bob is with the seniors, they have a pair of first quality kicking halfbacks. Usitas, who is a former Runnymede star, is shaping up well as quarterback and will bear watching.

The junior schedule opens tomorrow when the Blues meet the highly touted Parkdale Grads and should result in an interesting game to watch.

Full Staff Meeting

A meeting of the combined men's and women's staffs of The Varsity will be held in the Women's Union today at 4.30 p.m. Tea will be served. Attendance is necessary.

ZEALOUS ROOTERS MEET IN HART HOUSE

Lusty-Lunged Male Students Learn Cheers and Yells of U. of T.

PLAN SPECIAL STUNT

A genuine attempt to encourage more enthusiasm on the part of Varsity rooters at rugby games has been carried out with success. A meeting held yesterday in Hart House under the direction of H. R. McLaren, Dentistry, drew a large attendance, which might explain the tremendous clamour which emanated from the East Common Room about 1.30 p.m. and lasted until 2 p.m. Mr. McLaren is highly optimistic about his experiment and feels confident that results will show on Saturday.

"We are having another meeting tomorrow and if the same display of enthusiasm is evidenced, then we'll split the sky the day after tomorrow," he stated. He hopes to hold rehearsals at least once before every home game.

"There will be a surprise in store for the spectators on Saturday. At half-time we are pulling a stunt, new, different, and out of the ordinary, which is bound to convulse the student body. It will be the biggest thing ever conceived. In addition an extraordinary effect is being achieved by combining the songs 'Toronto Varsity' and 'Blue and White' with the assistance of the band. More new yells will be introduced by the cheering team of Blum and Mondo."

Mr. McLaren has requested that students continue to send in new songs, yells, and parodies on the old songs, which, if passed by the selection committee, will be adopted for general use.

DENTAL FRESHMEN WELCOMED AT BANQUET

Dental frosh were officially welcomed to the University at their annual banquet at the Royal York last night. The toast master, Mr. W. M. Twible, proposed the toast to the "King". Toasts to the University and the Faculty of Dentistry were proposed by Mr. A. H. Leckie and Mr. B. P. Kearney. The first year president, Mr. Holbrook, gave the toast to "the class of 4T0". Following the toasts a freshman skit was presented. The main address of the evening was given by Dr. R. S. Woollett. The program concluded with the presentation of awards to the field day winners.

Student Tickets

The Students' Administrative Council is this year sponsoring the sale of student tickets for athletic events. These tickets, selling at a very modest price, will admit the University sports fans to all Varsity and Argonaut home rugby games in Varsity Stadium, to all hockey matches at Varsity Arena, and track meets in Hart House gymnasium, including the Mulock Cup and Jennings Cup finals.

Students who avail themselves of this opportunity to witness all the outstanding home athletic contests in the University calendar will obtain the best seats available, located in the main cheering section, where they may lend their teams greatest support.

GERMANY UNLIKELY TO SUPPORT ITALY SAYS G. LENSCHOW

German Student Studying Here Says Country Antagonistic to Italian Plans

ND AGGRESSIVE PLANS

England an Ideal to German Youth; English Culture Admired

By Ross Munro

Gerhard Lenschow, German storm trooper and student from Kiel University, who is doing graduate work at the economics department here this year, sat in his room at 73 St. George Street yesterday and talked of European politics and his homeland's admiration for England.

"Germany is closer to England today than any time in her history," Lenschow said. "Students and citizens respect England. It is an ideal to the German youth. We admire the English gentleman and English culture and although we are not trying to emulate Britain she is an example to us."

Lenschow felt German public opinion was antagonistic towards Italy's imperialistic aims in Africa and he was emphatic in his belief there would not be a German-Italian alliance.

"Germany would like her colonies back and I believe she will eventually ask the League for some colonial concessions, but she will never go to war for them," he said.

Lenschow indicated Hitlerism aimed at a united Germany of peaceful, happy people. He disparaged talk of aggressive plans on the part of the fatherland. "Germany will not go to war as an aggressor," the storm trooper said. Hitler in the last two years has done much for Germany. The students are happier; they sing more and are more contented. Germany is a changed country since the rise of Hitler."

Lenschow speaks three languages—English well—and attended three other universities besides Kiel. This is his first trip to Canada and he is going to do special work on the problems of governmental regulation of marketing and business organization in the dominion.

The German student stated he spent six months in a government labour camp in his homeland for which he was paid less than 20 cents a day. He was engaged in reforestation work in east Germany.

"There is no militarism in these camps outside of the necessary discipline. The government has instituted them for three reasons—to build up the physique of the nation's youth, to socialize German society by having all young men from every strata of society meet on common ground, and thirdly to carry out necessary public works in the country," he said.

U.C. FRESHIES INITIATED

University College Freshettes were initiated at an impressive ceremony conducted by the seniors in the Women's Union last night. Groups of Freshies entertained the students with a series of skits, which were of such excellence that the judges in deciding the winning group were forced to make a compromise. The two groups who drew a tie were captained by Peggy Snider and Olive Popplewell, whose presentations were "Flat Tire" and "Lockinvar" respectively.

LOCKHART URGES STUDENT PACIFISM

Student Christian Movement Discusses Present War Situation

ISSUES MUST BE FACED

Speaking on the subject, "What if War breaks out tomorrow?", Wilfred Lockhart, men's S.C.M. secretary for Toronto, made a strong appeal for pacifism before the members of the U.C. Student Christian Movement last evening. Ken Foulds, president of the men's executive of the S.C.M. of U.C., presided at the meeting, which took the form of a supper party in Hart House.

In his introductory remarks, Mr. Lockhart pointed out that the possibility of a world conflict was not remote. With Italy taking her present stand on the Ethiopian situation, and with Britain and the League of Nations determined to apply sanctions, both economic and military, it would take just a spark to set the whole world ablaze once more. As part of the Empire, said the speaker, we are automatically at war as soon as Great Britain is, and technically open to invasion. What would be the student's reaction in such a case?

In stating his case for a refusal to take up arms, the speaker asked the question, "Is war the effective way to accomplish what it is supposed to?" As he saw the situation today, men and countries are living closer together, more dependent upon one another than ever before, and yet all nations were trying to block this drawing together by trade barriers, and armaments, hence a clash was inevitable under the circumstances.

NEWMAN CLUB TO HOLD RECEPTION AND DANCE FOR CATHOLIC STUDENTS

The social activities at Newman Club will begin officially for the year tomorrow afternoon at 5 p.m. with a freshman's reception and tea dance.

All the Catholic students of the University are cordially invited to attend and a special invitation is issued to the freshmen and freshettes to come as guests of honour. An opportunity will be afforded them to meet the members, to be shown through the house and the chapel, and to see for themselves what a fine complement the club can be to their University work.

Newman Hall, located on the northeast corner of St. George Street and Hoskin Ave. (opposite Whitney Hall), is the religious, intellectual, and social centre for the Catholic students of the University and its activities are guided by the newly appointed resident chaplain, Rev. Basil Doyle, C.S.P., late of St. Peter's Church, Toronto.

MEANDERING MUSTANGS MEET BLUES IN FIRST BATTLE OF SEASON

Western Squad Well-Drilled No Brilliant Stars, but Work well as Team

By Roderick Hungerford

Sports Editor, Western Gazette (Special to The Varsity)

When one first examines the material which constitutes the 1935 Mustang football team one is inclined to prophesy a repetition of last year's disastrous campaign.

Let us compare this squad with that of Varsity. For instance we have no kicker to match the brilliance of big Bob Isbister. We have no such forward-passing combination as Marks and Connelly. Also our line could hardly compare with the one which showed up so well against Balmy Beach last Saturday.

On the other hand we do boast of a well-drilled, well-conditioned team with strategy as their by-word. In Captain Frank Veroni we have a leader who knows all the tricks of the game. He leads a team this year which has more spirited fight than any other product of Western since 1931, when the University of Western Ontario annexed the intercollegiate title.

The Purple and White team has plenty of plays and innumerable methods of attack at their disposal. Coach Storen and his assistant Coach Metras have rounded out a squad which although lacking any brilliant stars plays excellently as a group.

As a last word Coach Storen says that "we may even beat Varsity" and he should know.

Crowson and Piggott Still in Tourney

Eaton and Tomlinson Were Eliminated Yesterday in Bad Weather

By Norman Phillips

Harris Crowson, the defending champion in the Interfaculty Tennis Singles, yesterday established himself as favourite to retain the title as the result of a straight set victory over Alan Eaton, 6-2, 6-1, 6-3. At the same time Bill Piggott, the second seeded player, gave a very dismal display in entering the final round with a win from Jack Tomlinson in five sets, 4-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

The first match was featured by the disappointing showing of Eaton. It had been expected that he, as a result of the experience gained in his travels, might possibly upset Crowson. But the latter proved his worth as an interfaculty champion. At no time did Eaton threaten and even if the weather conditions are taken into account, it is impossible to discount the fact that Eaton, in three sets, held his own service on only two occasions. Crowson, while he lacks the polish of some players, uses his head and that is probably the secret of his success.

The other semi-final, that between Tomlinson and Piggott, was remarkable in that the Hamilton star played the last half of the match without using his renowned forehand. Between the wind and his opponent, Piggott lost control of this weapon and was forced to rely on cut balls off the forehand.

Jack Tomlinson in his showing yesterday ensured himself of a place on the intercollegiate seniors. His most remarkable feat in the semi-finals was to win the first fourteen consecutive points played thus running up a lead (Continued on Page 3)

Marks, Connelly Combination Double Threat to Western in Home Game

By Jim Tiller

Warren Stevens and his boys in blue, will be home to William Storen and his Meandering Mustangs at the Varsity Stadium tomorrow afternoon. About 2.15 p.m. the Mustangs will trot out on the field and run through a short signal practice, to be soon followed by the Varsity Blues who will be given a tremendous ovation by the 15,000 frantic, frigid fans jamming the stadium from the side-lines to the brim of the bowl. Promptly at 2.30 p.m. the referee will blow his whistle and the lid will burst off the 1935 intercollegiate football season with a reverberating roar which will echo and re-echo until snow lies in November.

Making their debut in the intercollegiate in the Blue and White uniforms, will be Hughie Marks and Joe Connelly, leading exponents of that difficult art known as the forward pass. When Hughie draws back his arm and gives the inflated leather lemon an impulse towards Joey, it travels like a baseball (Continued on Page 4)

VARSITY OARSMEN RACE MCGILL CREW

Blue and White Men Favoured as Present Champions of Group

EXHIBITION GAME ONLY

The intercollegiate rowing race to be held Saturday on the Lachine Canal, Montreal, between the heavy crews of Varsity and McGill, will be but an exhibition event with nothing at stake; in short, McGill is allowing Varsity to retain the championship which it has won consecutively for eight years.

It seems that with two men from the Lachine Rowing Club in their shell and one or two graduates, McGill does not feel justified in contending for an intercollegiate title, which by its very name and nature is supposed to be competed for by undergraduates. This attitude is a voluntary one and does not result from any suggestion or demand from Varsity that they should have only oarsmen who are registered in the University. As the ranks of McGill oarsmen are so thinned by graduation, they would not have a crew at all if they were not able to use outside oarsmen, and Coach (Prof.) T. R. Loudon, of Varsity, knowing this, told them to put policemen in their boat if necessary; Varsity wanted a race.

The Varsity crew, though somewhat disappointed because nothing is at stake, nevertheless expect that the race will be just as keenly contested as if the retention of the old "barber pole" itself depended on it.

The personnel of the Varsity shell is as follows:

Coxswain—John Milson, 118 pound Intercollegiate Boxing Champion, who is considered the greatest cox to shout through a Blue megaphone in years.

Stroke—"Lofty" Willis, who has rowed for Varsity for five years and stroked the crew last year, is considered one of the greatest sweep oars in Canada. Weight 175 pounds.

Seven—Herb Miller; has rowed for Varsity for three years; owns a single shell and established an enviable record (Continued on Page 3)

It Pays To Play the Game

Tomorrow afternoon mid the loud acclaim of the Blue and White supporters at Varsity Stadium, the curtain rises on the opening session of the University of Toronto's sport parade. From then until early March sport activities continue, gathering momentum, sweeping aside in their headlong drive former champions, and enthroning new title holders in all the splendor of newly acquired laurels. But throughout the athletes' pursuits for the golden bauble of victory or whatever Dame Fortune wishes to bestow, the watchword will be—Play the Game.

The soccer pitch on the front campus will bear witness to many fine spirited contests of association football, as toe experts in driving attacks rush the opposing goals for scores or tries, as opposing backs frustrate scoring threats. Although a general tussling vades the field. Going through the curricula of sport ensues, an atmosphere of good sportsmanship pervades, such as hockey, basketball, track and field, boxing, and all the other sporting spectacles which afford such great competitive exhibitions, the governing matrix is "Play the Game".

Education a Force In Italian Nationalism

No matter how we look at this Ethiopian situation, condemning Italy, pitying Ethiopia, suspecting Britain, or scoffing at the League of Nations, there is one fact which stands above and beyond the whole business. It is the tremendous force wielded by Italian education and propaganda. We take most of our education on this continent pretty much for granted because it does not change our lives in any sudden direction. From the time we are born into an American or Canadian community to the time we are released from obligatory attendance at schools we are gently prodded and shaped into what we call Canadian citizens.

Over in Italy, they are prodded more severely and more often. Very few Canadians would share the emotional patriotism of the fervent Italian temperament with a dictator who took it into his head to increase the boundaries of Canada in any direction. A very small portion of the patriotism which the Italian people are displaying may be said to be the Excitable Latin Temperament. The reason that the Italians are so very much in earnest and so desperately patriotic is that they have been taught to be so from the time of their first attendance at school. In this year XIII of the Fascist regime, the fruits of that educational system which Mussolini incorporated a decade ago are being reaped.

The Italian people have been trained to regard the Fascist state as the one true state, and the only true reality. The State is the centre of their lives, and yesterday when Mussolini told the seventy millions of waiting people that the time for war, was near at hand, they applauded him because the state was going to vindicate itself.

The boys and girls who were sixteen and seventeen when Mussolini organized his Fascist state are the men and women who are foremost in this latest Italian project. They were injected with the venom of militarism when they were still in their more impressionable years, and now one crisis has arisen where Mussolini can put his thirteen years of careful propagandizing to work, by merely saying the word. The power of this instrument which Mussolini has been using is far greater than that of the actual implements and engines of war. We of the American continent may congratulate ourselves that our educational system is a little less stern, and that our education does not lead us quite so directly to the field of battle.

McGill Reporters Exempt From Essays

In the past one of the great drawbacks to the official management of the Daily was the lack of co-operation between the paper and the various college departments. This year the era of strained relations seems to be passing, for it was recently announced that the English department was willing to assist the staff of the Daily in their composition. Any student studying English One and who is a recognized reporter of the Daily will be exempted from writing the regular English One essays. Instead of writing these essays he merely clips his work in the Daily and hands it in to the professor in charge of the class. It was also decided that the Associate Editors who are studying English Three would be given credit for their Editorial work in the same manner.

The advantages of this arrangement are many. In the first place the Daily is receiving the recognition of the English Department. In the second place the Daily's general appearance and its content should be greatly improved by the end of the session. Not the least of the advantages will be gleaned by the reporter who, while writing for the Daily, receives constructive criticism of his style and at the same time fulfils the requirements of his course. We believe that the reportorial staff of the Daily will receive a new impetus with the adoption of this co-operative method.

While there is not yet a school of journalism at McGill the Daily offers definite training along that line. Many former Daily reporters are now with the City newspapers. In the past, however, the Daily has been hampered by a lack of criticism of the proper sort. This we feel will now be supplied, and we feel that before long the Daily as a whole will show a great improvement.

The Daily wishes to take this opportunity of expressing its thanks to those members of the English staff who are responsible for this consideration.

—Editorial from McGill Daily.

Fixed Currency And Tariff Barriers

It is four years now since the gold standard was occupying a commanding place in the headlines. Since Britain left Gold that term has ceased to worry the man on the street.

Foreign correspondents at Geneva have filled their despatches with reports of the Committee which is reviewing the Italo-Ethiopian problem. It might be well to remember that the League of Nations is in full session and that work is being done in other lines of international co-operation. The speech of the French Minister of Commerce to the Committee on Technical Organization, while badly timed from the point of view of publicity, presents a new proposal for some sort of currency stabilization.

The three principal countries still on the gold standard, France, Holland and Switzerland, experience quite a bit of trouble in their fight against devaluation. The departure from gold, on the part of the majority of nations, has meant a stimulus in foreign trade at the expense of the Gold Block. Countries with depressed currencies have had an advantage in exporting.

The French Minister M. Bonnet, in his address, referred to this vicious circle formed by the connection between Customs Protection and currency instability. What he proposed was a series of commercial agreements with other countries in which France would offer liberal tariff concessions in return for the pledge of other nations that they would keep their currencies fixed to a certain level for the period of such agreement.

It is indeed doubtful whether either the British or American Governments, to whom this proposal is obviously addressed, would agree to such a plan. However, it is a suggestion, worthy of consideration, for the solution of two obstructions along the path to economic recovery, that of currency stabilization and of tariff barriers.

At 9.33 p.m. last (Thursday) night two medium sized guys strode manfully into the Press, frowned the (female) night editors into cowering silence, and flopped a large and heavy envelope onto the desk. One spoke, deliberately, decisively, "You'll be hearing from us anon!" he said, while the other backed him up with a pat on the shoulder. The two stalked out, to go somewhere and toss coppers until anon had arrived. Meanwhile, the Yorker arrived and made bold to open the envelope—

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crocker

On the front page of The Varsity you'll find a little article written by the Sports Editor of the Western Gazette in which you'll find ample assurance that tomorrow afternoon's intercollegiate football opener will not be a cake walk for Varsity. Those of you who believed that the Blues were in for a soft afternoon had better dismiss that thought at once. As a matter of fact we, personally, are not expecting a rugged encounter but we are looking forward to an afternoon of spectacular rugby. Coach Storen is noted for his spectacular plays and his teams can always be counted upon to open up play considerably via the aerial route.

Lacking in material of star rating the Mustang mentor has built a dependable squad around a nucleus of the best members of last year's Purple and White aggregation. Although the London leader has not come out with a definite assurance of victory his words "We may even beat Varsity" should be taken seriously as Bill is of the same type as our own Warren Stevens. He doesn't emoté words of hope unless he has ample reason so to do.

Here at home we are told that Hughie Marks may watch the game from the sidelines. If this be true the Blues are in for a very hot afternoon despite this cool weather. However, we have a feeling that Marks will be zooming the oval around in the old Marksian manner tomorrow.

Due to unfavourable playing conditions yesterday the scores in the qualifying round of the U. of T. golf trials held at the Weston Golf Club were much higher than expected. The twelve low scorers at Weston qualified to play off for the six places on the Varsity golf team today at Lambton. The dozen hopefuls will tee off this morning at 9.30 in four threesomes.

The Blue and White British rugby team opens its 1935 fall schedule tomorrow on the back campus at 3 p.m. with the Wanderers of Toronto supplying the contention. Wanderers have already chalked up two whitewash victories against the Toronto Club and Toronto Irish and should provide stiff opposition for the well-coached Blue squad.

In anything but ideal tennis weather the interfaculty tennis singles tournament advanced into the final round with Harris Crowson and Bill Pigott slated to meet today. The doubles final will come off tomorrow. Today's singles final will mark the third meeting of Crowson and Pigott in the interfaculty singles final. In their first encounter Pigott routed Crowson, while the latter turned the tables on the Hamilton star last year. Play yesterday, in the opinion of Coach Han, was anything but intercollegiate standard, but the weather can partly be blamed for that. Today's matches should provide some interest though as each lad will be trying to chalk up a best two out of three record and at the same time gain the top ranking on the Varsity senior tennis squad. The Blue tennis hopes it seems will rest on Crowson, Pigott, Eaton and Tomlinson this year.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Today is the big day for the golf enthusiasts, and we hope they are all having a good time up yonder. In case it rains, the U.C. girls in charge of the events are planning for bridge for the weaker sisters who won't want to get wet. They figure that the harder ones who want to play in the rain, can take care of themselves.

The Nurses have a really enthusiastic crowd of sportswomen this year, and are entering a tennis team in the interfaculty tournament. They had twenty-one players in their own tournament, and have nearly finished the second round. As far as they can tell, Lillice Read, Alexa Broadfoot, and Elizabeth Duff will be on their team.

Most of the colleges are now making plans for their basketball practices. The Nurses are taking the lead, and are having their first practice tomorrow night at Margaret Eaton. St. Hilda's are hoping to start theirs next week. Basketball is one of the most popular sports played by the women at Varsity, and the games are usually very closely contested. If you want to make a team, it would be a good idea to go to all the practices and play like a fiend. The coaches always like enthusiasm, provided it is accompanied by a certain amount of playing ability.

it would be practiced by the student, Mr. Lockhart claimed that it was not a negative, but a constructive positive policy. He claimed further, in answering the charge so often heard, that pacifism was sentimental, that it was far more logical and unsentimental than the belief that this war would accomplish what has never been accomplished by war before.

This plethora of verse must cease if 3T9's to get some peace. They're broken, beaten, scorned and ophit it never doth become a Soph to play the second viol to a lauded Freshman class. And now, sir, that we've dealt with that, phine too of us who read the "Cat" and savour of its daily grin; we've had to take it on the chin. These last few days have plagued us sore, 'twas not the "Cat" we knew of yore. Our protest mild we write in prose which unequivocally shows the wrath within the Poet pent when'er he hath a spleen to vent. And if a line or two should rhyme or scan a bit from time to time, why double-space the thing, it will, beyond a doubt your colium fill!

C-C
Thank you very much, Mr. Cit, for those kind words, and you may inform your pal, Jelsabot, that we have taken the advice offered in his own effort... "It surely isn't any worse than Thursday's column-filling verse."

Right. But then it isn't any better; so except for the final limerick for which we may find room later, we'll skip it. However, these two lads both show signs of talent, and if Messrs. Loc Cit and Jelsabot would care to respond to the "Staff Meeting" notice on page one, and drop in at the Women's Union this afternoon for a spot of refreshment, we'd be glad to have them identify themselves. In addition to these two gentlemen, commonly referred to as the "fighting Irish", Mr. W. Stevens will have at his disposal Mike Valerioti, late Captain of Assumption, who fills the role of flying wing very ably. Bobby Coulter, the best running half in the intercollegiate, seems to have found in Joey-Connelly a partner in broken-field running to replace Art Upper, lost last May. In fact, this new combination proved very, very effective in last Saturday's tilt with the balmy Balmy Beaches. Big Bob Isbister is hoofing them high, far and handsomely, and Varsity stands little chance of losing ground on the kicking exchanges. Webber, Gray and Miller complete the backfield, which is, perhaps, the best in Canada.

Varsity supporters will rejoice to hear yet once again that our front line isn't weak, after all. Judging by the game with Beach, the rumoured weakness was quite unconfirmed by facts. Gus Greco and "Gash" Oakley, the middles, are big fellows who take a lot and Witzel who share the inner duties of taking-out, and the Williams brothers are also reliable. Jack Holden and "Red" Burke protect the flanks, assisted by Edwards, Lynch, and Buck.

Among those present—will Western be only "among those present" like they were here last year (22-6), or will they pull that threatened surprise and snatch a victory? Qui sait? The Mustangs have always been full of fight, though short on experience, and under their new coach they may have a change of form, and luck. Bill Storen has the knack of instilling pep into his football squads, and Western may be expected to be chuck full of that "let's-go-gang" spirit. Storen also knows how to teach the forward pass, as witness last year's St. Mike's, and so the Mustangs must be regarded as a definite threat in the air. Conspicuous among the London crew will be Charley Box, young brother of the great Ab.

Davies, B.A., will preach. On Sunday, October 13, a Bach-Handel recital will be given after evening, to commemorate the 250th anniversary of these famous composers, whose best-known and most loved works will be presented.

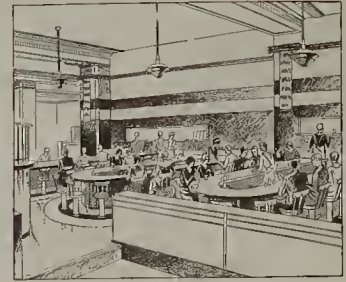

Promenade Concert

Last night's Prom Concert was distinguished both by the variety and by the performance of the program. Selections ranged from Cesar Franck's symphony in D Minor to Luigini's Ballet Egyptienne. Then to provide contrast especially for the latter number Saïda Gerrat gave her interpretation of negro spirituals accompanied by the singing of George Lambert.

Miss Gerrat with a group of four, gave a performance that was interesting not only from the point of view of dancing but also from the experiment of combining a singer with the dancers. The negro spiritual has an emotional ecstasy which fits in nicely with the Wigmans interpretation of Miss Gerrat. Certainly this part of the program met with the public favour.

Following the appearance of the dancers the orchestra played the Ballet Egyptienne. Indeed a contrast in terpsichorean style.

The main orchestral work was Cesar Franck's beautiful and impressive symphony. From the plaintive theme of the opening bars to the faith motive on which the work ends it is full of the spiritual awareness that the composer gave his music. It was an impressive presentation of the idea of the "vision splendid" following on a past full of tribulation.

TRINITY UNITED CHURCH HOLDS SPECIAL SERVICE

A Service of very special interest will be held in Trinity United Church next Sunday evening. Mr. John Duncan, the most outstanding Harpist of Ontario, will play a short recital before the Service and in the Service. The Pastor, Rev. G. O. Fallis, C.B.E., B.D., will be assisted in the Service by young people of the congregation. Miss Janet Follett, Miss Ruth Ferguson, and Mr. Arthur Stead, will take part. The Pastor will preach a special sermon to University students and young people, his topic being "Goose-stepping, or the Tragedy of Marching in Step".

At the close of the evening Service, the first Fireside Hour of the year will be held in the Fireside Room. Fifteen years ago, this feature of Trinity Church was started and each successive year has seen it more successful than the last. Last year, as many as five hundred young people remained after the Service. There is no speech-making but splendid musical numbers are rendered by the best artists in Toronto, followed by refreshments.

LITERARY SOCIETY AT VICTORIA COLLEGE HOLDS ANNUAL TEA

On Wednesday afternoon, the Women's Literary Society of Victoria College held its annual autumn tea, at Wymilwood. Miss Wilma Stanley, president of the society, announced the plans for the coming year, and Miss Macpherson, Dean of Women and honorary president of the society, spoke briefly on the contribution such a society could make to the enrichment of the individual.

The society will foster many groups: a song group, which, among other activities, will sponsor noon hour songsters; a sketch group; one on musical appreciation and several literary groups (on Shakespearean drama, on modern drama, on poetry and on the novel). The literary executive has prepared forms on which members may indicate their preferences and make suggestions; in this way they hope to ascertain the tastes and wishes of the greatest number of members.

CANADIAN SYSTEM ONE OF FINEST SAY NOTED BRITISH EDUCATIONISTS

Self-Reliance, Enterprise Seen

FAVOR M.P. FOR VARSITY

By Harold Freeman

"We are tremendously impressed by the enthusiasm shown in Canada for practical education as opposed to that of a more theoretical nature," stated Mr. T. J. Rees, Director of Education for Swansea, Wales, in an interview yesterday. Similar opinions were expressed by other members of the touring group of British educators, Dr. J. E. Smart, Director of Education for London; Mr. W. A. Hepburn, Director of Education for Ayrshire, Scotland; and Messrs. J. A. Peart and T. B. Tilley, Directors of Education for Winchester and Durham.

Mr. Rees went on to say that he, personally, was more than surprised at the enterprising nature of the children in the public schools, and the way in which they took advantage of the opportunities offered to ask visitors questions. He felt that such a system develops to the full a child's individuality, and a self-reliance which is far more a part of true education than is the more formal side of their training. When asked about their impressions (Continued on Page 4)

VIC DEBATING SOCIETY STARTS YEAR WEDNESDAY

The Victoria College Debating Society will commence activities for the year on Wednesday, October 16, when the House will be formally opened by Lieutenant-Governor Professor Havelock. A debate will take place on the subject, "That this House supports the policy of military sanctions against Italy." A two-party system has been inaugurated this year, under which the party in power, Conservative or Radical, as the case may be, will have definite responsibility for the preparation of the next debate. The club this year also departs from precedent by insisting that all debates shall begin on the time announced.

STUDENTS TO HAVE OWN THEATRE NIGHT

Will be Admitted at Reduced Rates to Special Programs Being Arranged

"SAUSAGE BAR" FEATURE

Hart House Theatre inaugurates a new programme for the students—to be held on one Wednesday evening every month starting October 16, when the students will be admitted at reduced rates. "It is an excellent way to keep the students in touch with the theatre," said Mr. E. W. Haldenby, member of the Board of Syndics, "and also to keep the various faculties and colleges closer to each other. Moreover," he continued, "things done by the student body as a whole are a lot of fun, especially a theatre night. The downtown theatres are not suitable because they are inconvenient and, too, they are afraid of students." The regular Hart House performance will be given but it will be presented to an audience composed entirely of University students. The lower rates offered students on this particular evening are expected to be an added inducement for men students to bring their girl-friends and enjoy the facilities of Hart House Theatre.

The type of play to be presented will afford a wide variety of entertainment. The first, "Once in a Lifetime," is a direct take-off on Hollywood. It concerns a movie director who does everything wrong and yet whose every mis-

An Advance on the Election! "Varsity" to Hold Straw Vote

For the first time in history the students of the University of Toronto are going to have an opportunity of ascertaining the political opinion of the student body. This is made possible through a straw vote to be conducted by "The Varsity" on Thursday, October 10.

This action on the part of "The Varsity" has been motivated by the interest shown by the student body in the coming federal election, as evidenced by the response received last week to an editorial raising the question of student franchise. Under the present elections Act it is impossible for the University to vote as a body while many students are being entirely deprived of the right to vote by the residence rule.

Voting will be facilitated by the distribution of ballot boxes around the buildings. The ballots will be marked with the name of the six contending parties. No names of contestants will appear on the ballots. Everyone registered in the University will be entitled to a vote on presentation of his registration card.

"The Varsity's" position in this campaign is strictly non-partisan. We are interested solely in obtaining a representative expression of student political opinion. This information should prove just as valuable to the students themselves as to "The Varsity".

"Without trying to flatter anybody, and in all sincerity, I repeat that I consider Toronto one of the finest cities I have ever been in, and repeat that its audiences are among the most receptive that I have encountered," said Cab Calloway, whose eccentric and individual style of jazz has won him wide fame, in an interview at Shea's Theatre Saturday. He further admitted that he would enjoy the Sunday rest, which he could obtain in no other city, but "allows" that most of it will be spent in rehearsal anyway. Four to six hours a day is his usual time for rehearsal and three arrangers are kept constantly busy with Calloway supervising their activities. His spare time at present is (Continued on Page 4)

Last spring the scholarship offered by the Italian government to the most promising students in the Italian Department of the American universities was extended to include two students from the Canadian universities. This scholarship is in the form of a conducted trip to Italy and back to enable the students to see something of the country and its more important cities and to promote their interest in the Italian language. Mary Dignam, Trinity III, was one of the two students from Canada to win this much coveted scholarship and she has just returned to the (Continued on Page 4)

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared for the press and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

2-MILE EXHIBITION RACE

By B. J. McGuire

Montreal, Oct. 5.—The University of Toronto senior eight, perennial winners of the "Barber Pole", which goes to the first team to cross the finish line in the annual McGill-Varsity boat race on the Lachine Canal, stroked their way across the line in front for the eighth year Saturday. This year, however, their margin of safety was more than usual, but their tangible evidence of victory was not so great—they didn't get the "barber pole". When the Blue oarsmen went to Montreal for the annual race Saturday, they went not in search of the token of victory; they were keeping it by (Continued on Page 4)

By W. A. Crocker

Living up to advance notices Warren Stevens' Blue and White clad warriors soundly trounced the University of Western Ontario's Mustangs at Varsity Stadium on Saturday by a 21-1 score. The game, marking the opening of the intercollegiate senior football season in Toronto, was a fairly good exhibition of the fall pastime although its one-sided nature tended to make it dull at times.

As was freely predicted, the Purple and White offensive consisted of trick plays and forward passes. However, as the Mustang backfield failed to get untangled in most of their manoeuvres the Blue front line had very little trouble (Continued on Page 3)

CHANCELLOR WALLACE WELCOMES VIC FRESHIES

Friday evening in Victoria College Chapel the Freshettes of 379 were welcomed into the college by Chancellor Wallace. The occasion was the traditional candle-lighting service of Sophomores and Freshies.

"SDCIAL CREDIT A RACKET"

"Aberhart's social credit scheme will spread as far as his radio broadcasts can be heard," said Bruce Marshall, fourth year University College student in an interview in which he gave a careful analysis of the reasons for Aberhart's election, the practicality of his system and his prospects in the forthcoming federal campaign.

Marshall spent the summer in Edmonton as a Liberal campaigner in support of his brother, who was a candidate in that city.

Asked to what he attributed the success of the social credit party in the Alberta election Marshall stated that Aberhart's oratorical ability, his personality, economic and social conditions in the province, religious-political hysteria and the fact that Aberhart changed his platform so often that the opposing parties could never get him to admit his advocacy of any definite line of policy were the main causes. "Aberhart is the cleverest politician on the continent," said Marshall, and added the Government of the United Farmers of Alberta had aggravated rather than improved conditions, and that to all intents and purposes it appeared to have been linked with the financial interests. Marshall made it clear that all the parties which opposed social credit were well organized and that a case of failure could not be (Continued on Page 4)

Montreal, Que. — Arthur Eustace Morgan, M.A., was officially invested with the robes of office of principal of McGill University by Dr. F. D. The ceremony was performed in the hollow of the McGill campus before a gathering of spectators prominent in the educational, social and economic life of Canada. The procession, consisting of members of the McGill Board of Governors, the Senate, the teaching staff and the Students' Council, wended its way from the Redpath Library to the specially constructed platform in front of the statue in the hollow. The canvas gates were closed to the general public all morning, admitting only students and invited guests, who filled and surrounded the natural amphitheatre. (Continued on Page 4)

A Goodly Hunk of Our Front Page We Give This Guy, the Sideline Sage

By "Grandstand Quarterback"

On the dope from the local experts, we figured Varsity ought to beat Western 35 to 1. We had misgivings, though, on arriving at the game three minutes late, just in time to see Western kick for a point. There are more myths about this bird Storen, the Mustang mentor, than about Cleopatra. Things looked dangerous.

One-two-three-hike
Then the Little Boy Blues started their act. Isbister threw the leather lemon in a spectacular forward to Connelly. Valeriot sailed through the Western line, gathering purple and white impudently like a magnet.

One-two-three-hike
When Isbister wasn't kicking points he was making papier-mache out of Western's paper dolls.

One-two-three-hike
Can't Gray must have some swell bridge partner. He sure learned this field goal stuff kicking shins under a table. The guy is phenomenal. He outclasses Merrivell novels with field goals from thirty-five to forty-five yards out.

One-two-three-hike
Coulter and Connelly are backfielders de luxe. Their running and passing made the Brones look as if they were knocking off flies with a bobbed tail.

One-two-three-hike
The game was full of movie unbelievable. Isbister ran fifty yards to recover his own kick while the boys from London town looked on.

One-two-three-hike
The visitors turned out in natty new uniforms looking ready to recapture the fighting spirit of the mauve decade, but down at the Royal York after the game they gave a soul-stirring rendition of the "Blues". (Stevens edition 1935).

One-two-three-hike
Sophomores from School pushed the backward Frosh for a win in the pushball championship at half time, and carried off the coveted Tipplers' Trophy to hold the famous forty beers; but the young'uns cleaned up their betters in local guerilla warfare.

One-two-three-hike
After the first three minutes Varsity only made twenty-one points. Well, we guess thirty-five is a lot to get, but then perhaps they weren't really trying.

One-two-three-hike
However, that's only the opinion of a Grandstand Quarterback.

"Varsity" Straw Vote

The unexpected interest which was evidenced by the students in the political problem, when in an editorial in this column last week, we raised the question of University franchise, has led The Varsity to hold a straw vote on the campus of the University of Toronto later this week.

The Varsity's stand in this vote is strictly non-partisan. We are interested in securing a representative vote from the students of the University. Whom the students vote for will be of interest only as valuable information regarding the undergraduate outlook on the political field. To the best of our knowledge the students of the University of Toronto have never before had a chance to express themselves as a political body.

The situation in which many students find themselves as the election day approaches is the unfortunate one of being legally eligible to vote for the first time in their lives, but being debarred from the exercise of this right through the residence ruling. That the students are interested in the question was made very clear by the response we received from the student body when we raised the issue a few days ago. In some respects, the straw vote will give the students a chance to express their opinions on this subject which is so pertinent to their future.

The information which this vote will bring forth should be invaluable. For years the charges have been made that the University students are radicals; that the University students are ultra conservative; that the University students are disinterested in anything of such importance as the political leadership of the country. No statistics have ever been available to support or discredit any of these claims. Now for the first time this information is going to be obtainable. But in order to make this true we need your support. If everyone votes, the expression of the student preference and the information regarding the students' position in Canadian politics will be just as valuable to you as us. Therefore we ask your co-operation.

Again, Essay Credits For Reporters

In Friday's paper was published an editorial from the McGill Daily on the fact that reporters who did satisfactory work on the Daily would be exempt from writing their English essays. The Varsity has always cherished the hope that eventually some similar arrangement could be worked out here.

The obvious objection is that the purpose of English essays is not entirely, nor even primarily, to test the student's ability to write, but to indicate his knowledge of the subject. The reply to this objection is that examinations should be a sufficient indication of a student's grasp of his subject. A very definite defect in our University curriculum is that no training in the art of writing is provided except the relatively insignificant amount derived from writing English essays.

The Varsity is the only medium through which the would-be writer can learn to express his thoughts in words. But The Varsity, we are forced to admit, leaves something to be desired in the matter of style because of the lack of adequate criticism. That is where the co-operation of the English staff would be invaluable.

As the McGill writer points out the new arrangement is advantageous both to the paper and to the student reporter. It is also an advantage to the University for it is providing what is essentially a course in journalism to the University curriculum.

Wanting-- A Sense of Value

One of the objections made to the American people is the manner in which it allows itself to be entertained. There are too many third rate actors and second rate comedians and bad singers in the entertainment world of the North American continent. If an ordinary man is fortunate enough to appear on a screen or to be heard by means of a radio, he immediately becomes a mysterious and glamorous person who is to be sought and worshipped and whose autograph is to be obtained at all costs. Why not praise the waiters in a night club for their efficient service, or write eulogies to the inventor of the motor-cycle?

It is impossible to explain the popularity of a man like Eddie Cantor on the grounds of his talent. His voice is without quality, his jokes are old and not very funny, and his sentimental one act plays are sickening. Yet he receives thousands of dollars every week for entertaining the American public. Al Jolson is only a little more talented. Ted Lewis is probably the world's worst clarinet artist, yet five years ago, people raved about his band and his clarinet solos, and he still has that musical reputation.

The wide mass of Americans prefer to see a book simplified into a moving-picture scenario and played upon the screen of a theatre rather than have the book itself to read. Perhaps the most insidious habit which the American people has adopted within the last ten years is that of picking up lines from the current radio or screen comedian and repeating them whenever possible, the skeptical "Oh yeah" of Bert Lahr, the accusing "You nasty man" of Joe Penner, or the surprised "Oh Oh" of Amos and Andy.

Is the average man and woman of the United States and Canada degenerating into a state where every pretty face which is shown upon the screen is to be adored, and where every hysterical utterance reproduced by the mechanism of the radio is to be laughed at? The emphasis is put in the wrong places, and it seems that the worth-while work of art is taking second place to the superficial talent of the popular screen and radio artist. It is hard to see the reason why a moving picture of the class of the Goldiggers of 1935 or some such light affair should outsell an artistically turned play such as Noel Coward's "Scoundrel". The difference is so obvious between the good and the bad that one is amazed at the box-office receipts of the two pictures. We don't propose to do anything about it, but it is quite a relief to comment upon it.

A Mere Trifle

Last night we set out with a feeling of righteous indignation to write an editorial. Unfortunately few great epics are written about trifles; someone is sure to remind us that with a world trembling on the brink of something or other, there are more and better subjects to be written about than the unopenability of the combination locks on the tote boxes in Hart House. Another circumstance also tended to moderate our crusading ardour—no one within record has written on the subject before. We ascribe that to the matchless patience and uncomplaining good humour of the members, who however much they may growl in private, do not care to sing their woes out to a perhaps indifferent public. Our enthusiasm was quenched, but on the whole our effort may be the better for it. The thought is worth passing on, and so much the better if it can be expressed with a certain degree of coolness and sanity.

Every year about this time a low murmur arises from masculine throats punctuated at intervals by short staccato barks of exasperation, rising finally to a roar of fury. And really it is too much to expect a man to stand shivering for half an hour before a locker, twirling and twisting a dial that refuses to be begged, coaxed or cajoled into opening. The perversity and obstinacy of the locks in question seems to be a source of peculiar pride to the attendants—they know how to open them all, by the way—who point out that the lock is all right, only you don't know how to work it. That is probably true, we only wish we did.

Perfection, so they say, is made up of trifles. It is a matter of common experience that a small matter overlooked can hold up the workings of a giant system. These pesky locks hold us up for lectures and wreck our peace of mind. The saddest part of it all is that nothing can be done about it. We can offer no remedy.

It seems to this department that it's high time some decisive action was taken in regard to the fee situation. The Ad Hoc committee were given a chance, and what did that get anybody? So by way of settling down to a little serious effort for the good of the University, after last week's poetic bing, we've decided to take the matter in hand ourselves.

First of all, we'll have the Ad Hoc committee bundle up their voluminous portfolios of evidence, petitions and preables, and despatch them to wait on Premier Hepburn at his Queen's Park Headquarters. That should keep Mr. Bridle safely occupied till sometime after October 14th.

Our next step will be to go down to the Bursar's Office and do a little private investigating. There's been too much importance laid to the mere fact that the Board of Governors have voted for a raise in the annual admission price. We doubt very much if the Fees clerk will accept the extra thirty dollars. Heaven knows he's always kicked up enough fuss about taking what we've tried to give him other years.

If this effort proves of no avail we'll take our ease to the Warden and make him a proposition. If Mr. Bickersteth will use his influence with the authorities to get a return to the old rates, we will use ours with the students to get their consent to benches in the Great Hall, and stag musicals.

The Warden may not succeed, but he'll die in the attempt. In this event we're going to go straight to the final authority and we ask your co-operation. During the half-time interlude at the next Varsity home game, President Cody will be asked to step out onto the field. Then at a given signal the entire student section will rise to their feet and, led by the new cheerleaders to the accompaniment of the Varsity Band, will chant in glorious tribute, "Fees a jolly good fellow!"

C—C

We'll be seeing you in the line-up on October 31st. And don't forget the extra thirty bucks.

—The Muddy Yorker.

Coming Up--- Everett Marshall

Because of an informal interview conducted by a member of the Feature Staff in the shower and swimming tank of the New York Athletic Club a few days ago, The Varsity makes bold to prophesy a new figure in the motion picture world in the next six months in the person of Everett Marshall, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera, George White's Scandals and the Ziegfeld Follies. The prophecy is based on the fact that Marshall has a rich baritone voice and a twinkle in his eye. Shouted above the noise of running water and the usual shower-room singing, the life story of Marshall sounded

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents stuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. K.

The golf tournament, sponsored by University College, was a great success. Most of the twenty-seven entrants turned up hoping to win a prize or at least to have a good day's fun, and in this last respect at any rate, they were not disappointed. Ruth Leavens, from Vic, played a great game, and anyone who can turn in a score of 97 in the kind of weather we had Friday, is a real golfer. Thornhill Ladies Club is a sporting little coterie and to add to everyone's troubles, the temperature was somewhat low to be conducive to good golf. You can pile on the sweaters and windbreakers, but it's bothersome to put on gloves between shots.

Mary Jarvis started out with a 43 but faltered on the way in; however, she was able to capture the second low gross for St. Hilda's.

The tournament was run off very efficiently and was even more satisfactory, if possible, than last year. U.C. wishes to thank the other colleges for their support and for the prizes which Vic, St. Hilda's and St. Mike's presented. Here's hoping that intercollegiate golf will be a regular feature of women's athletics from now on.

And now here's exciting tennis news. The teams have been chosen, the draw made and today the first rounds will be played. All members of the teams are to be at the Toronto Tennis Club, 44 Price St., at 9 this morning and anyone who is interested will be a welcome supporter for her faculty. The second round will be played off Tuesday, and it is a fine opportunity for the tennis fans to see some good games, because the players are not only playing intercollegiate matches, but showing their worth for the intercollegiate team.

Men's Sport Staff

There will be a meeting of the Men's Sports Staff at 1.30 today in The Varsity office.

RUGGER TEAM OPENS UP HANDS 15-0 SHUTOUT TO TORONTO WANDERERS

Varsity's intercollegiate rugger team shaped up like potential champions again this year, when they decisively defeated the Toronto Wanderers in an exhibition game on the back campus Saturday. The Blue title holders, after a rather shaky start, came on fast in the second half, and left the field at the conclusion of the contest with the score reading 15-0 in their favour.

The first half produced little by way of scoring although a field goal gave the students four points. In the final half the University team ran wild, scoring a total of 11 points.

AGGIES DOWNED 3-0 IN STIFF CONTEST

A battling intermediate squad smashed out a close but decisive 3-0 victory over the fighting farmers at Guelph on Saturday. The Blue team found the going very rough as the husky O.A.C. outfit fought and battled every inch of the way. The superior punting power of the Varsity backfield gave them the edge when they came within striking distance of the Guelph line.

The Varsity men wasted no time emulating the sensational running and aerial attack of their big Blue brothers. A deadly diet of fast end runs, accurate passes and knife-like plunges was dished up to Guelph by "chef" Barry Grey. A clever play by Ripley gave Varsity the only point of the first quarter when he returned a kick.

PIGOTT VICTOR IN TENNIS SINGLES DOWNS CROWSON

Challenger Extends Champion to Four Sets on Wind-Swept Court

UPSET IN DOUBLES

Tomlinson Wins 3rd Straight Doubles Championship; Paired with Crowson

Bill Pigott regained the singles championship from his perennial rival, Harris Crowson, in the finals of the Interfaculty Tennis Tournament played last Friday and Saturday. Pigott is now up on the Dents star, having beaten him twice in the three times they have met in the final bracket. Another veteran, Jack Tomlinson, made his third appearance in the last round of the doubles and partnered with Crowson, he completed the hat trick in winning the doubles for three consecutive years.

The singles match, played on Friday, was badly handicapped by the weather conditions, a high wind making it impossible to judge the flight of the ball. Pigott, however, seemed to have less difficulty with his shots than his opponent and by the end of the fourth set Crowson had blown up both literally and figuratively. The winner showed a complete reversal of form from the previous day when Tomlinson almost upset him in the semi-finals and at the same time the Dents man had lost the touch which gave him a straight set victory over Alan Eaton. Pigott, after a shaky start in the first set, which he lost 6-2, gradually improved and gained complete control to take the next three 6-4, 6-3, 6-1.

The doubles, played on Saturday, were disappointing, in that Eaton and Pigott were defeated rather handily, 6-2, 8-6, 5-7, 6-4. This team had been regarded as being a possible winner of this event in the intercollegiate meet. The coach, Dr. Art Ham, will probably whip these two into shape in time for that tournament.

About the only feature of this match was Tomlinson's third straight victory in interfaculty doubles finals. All the players looked as if they needed a few days' respite from the game before starting practice in preparation for the intercollegiate meet at Montreal a week from Thursday.

Interfaculty Tennis results:

PARKDALES BOW TO JUNIOR BLUES

Varsity Juniors came through with flying colours in their first game in the Toronto Rugby Union, playing Parkdale Grads. Fumbles were frequent all through the entire game, Varsity took advantage of the breaks to pile up the deciding score. A fumble by Parkdale halfway through the second quarter was the play which lost them the game.

Brown outkicked Varsity while Barber's plunging and broken-field running had the Varsity tacklers dizzy. Parkdale out-played Varsity in the third quarter and scored their only touchdown of the game when the Blues lost the ball behind their own line.

Varsity's only forward pass was incomplete, while Parkdale's Brown to McGee combination twice made long gains, but the game ended without further scoring.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George C. Vair

Five University of Toronto teams started the fall semester of sport on the right foot when they came through with five victories. The three rugby squads came out on top, the rowing crew had McGill in their backwash for two long miles while the English rugger squad whitewashed the Wanderers 15-0.

The Varsity seniors have not found any strong opposition in their first two games and Saturday saw them score practically at will. Bobby Isbister pulled one of the finest plays we have seen this season when he dove on the pigskin to recover his own kick while two hesitant Western backfielders looked on. The big boy is more than at home in senior company this season. T. Williams, playing at inside, rates four stars for his tackling and he was "Johnny on the spot" to intercept a Western end run and gallop for an easy touchdown. The new men from St. Michael's are certainly filling the holes left by last year's graduates and doing an exceptionally fine job of it.

With Barry Gray calling the signals Jack Dawson's intermediates beat Guelph 3-0 in the Aggies' own backyard. Congratulations to the new coach on his first victory. He certainly must have injected some of his own fight into his crew to take "Baldy" Baldwin's 1935 squad. Varsity is certainly fortunate in having a man of Gray's calibre to fill in at quarter when Coulter and Miller leave senior ranks.

The Redmen of Montreal upset the dope when they toppled the Tricolour 9-7 at Molson Stadium. Although outplayed for the greater part of the game the Redmen took advantage of Queen's errors and turned them into points. Something of a paradoxical situation since Reeve's team usually wait for the breaks and play a defensive game which is never pleasing to the customers. Well, evidently you can't win every game that way. McGill's only touchdown came when Herbie Westman heaved a 25 yard forward to Arden Hedge, and the fast moving wingman squirmed and twisted past Queen's tacklers for 45 yards and a touchdown. Barnabe tried hard to win the contest with two placements in the third quarter but both went wide for singles.

Bahuy Beach turned in a highly improved game to hold the Sarnia Imperials to a 1-0 score. The Beaches got a tough break when an attempted placement was blocked, thereby ruining their chances to tie or win the game. The line, weak against Varsity, was strong enough to hold three of Sarnia's best to a three yard gain when the Imperials were four yards out, thus preventing a major score. The return match on Thanksgiving should attract a capacity crowd.

in stopping most of Western's offensive drives. As to forward passes, Warren Stevens' men were always on the spot to knock them down. Throughout the entire contest Bill Storey's crew completed but three forwards on thirteen attempts for a total gain of only thirty yards, while the Blues, despite the absence of Hughie Marks for most of the game, star flinger of forwards, completed four out of ten passes for a gain of seventy yards.

In piling up their impressive total, the Blues registered two touchdowns, one of which was converted, two placements, both by Cam Gray, and four rouges. Western chalked up their lone point on a towering punt by Shales after the Mustangs had recovered a blue fumble in the very first minute of play.

The feature of the game was the wonderful running of the Coulter-Connelly combination. This Blue pair of backs literally ran wild against the Mustangs, chalking up large gains on end runs and running back catches for ten and fifteen yard gains. Big Bob Isbister turned in one of his best performances since donning a Blue uniform. The big backfielder was the most consistent plunger the Blues sent through the line while his kicking was slightly short of perfect. Cam Gray also turned in a very creditable performance with two field goals and a single point to his credit. The Blue line although not as impressive as last week, turned in a pretty good effort.

DENTAL SOCCER—

Young Doug Shales, Western's eighteen-year-old kicking star, booted a beautiful game and was only slightly shaded by Isbister. Charlie Box carried the greatest load for the Purple and White squad and worked himself to exhaustion. Boyce Sherk, worked like a Trojan but his play was very spotty and erratic. The Western line although not too good, was good enough to hold Varsity on three occasions when the Blues were only a few yards out.

Varsity kicked off to Western who booted right back on the first down. On the very next play Western recovered a Blue fumble and Shales kicked to Coulter, who managed to get out from behind his line. However, on the next exchange of kicks Coulter was rugged for Western's only point of the game. The Blues then took to the aerial route and a Coulter to Connelly pass and a lofty punt by Isbister tied the count. A few minutes later a Coulter to Connelly pass was good for thirty yards, but the Western line held with the Blues nine yards out and Varsity lost the ball. A few moments later Isbister kicked a beauty against the wind to send Varsity into a 2-1 lead as the quarter ended. The second stanza saw Coulter and Connelly go to work in earnest as they chalked up large gains. Gray kicked his first placement from a difficult angle thirty-five yards out. Western kicked off to Isbister who returned a lofty sixty-yard punt which bounded over the heads of the Mustang backfield. Isbister followed up like a flash to gain possession for Varsity nineteen yards out. The Blues again lost the ball after taking it to Western's three-yard line. Gray's attempted placement went for a single to make the count 6-1. Western, with play at mid-field, tried an end run and Sherk tossed the oval into the waiting hands of Turney Williams of Varsity who galloped unmolested for the first major score. The half ended with Varsity leading 12-1.

of the school buildings of Canada, the educators expressed their admiration for the modern architecture and excellent equipment, but confessed to a certain disappointment in the similarity of design of so many of the buildings. They felt this to be a failing of buildings in general throughout the Dominion, in contrast to the great diversity of architecture found in Great Britain.

The answer of Dr. Smart to the question, "Do you think that the so-called 'public' schools of England, the private boarding schools of the upper classes, are declining in importance?" was a decided "No." He stated that scholastically these great schools were equalled by the standards of the secondary schools, the continuation schools of the middle classes, but than men from Eton, Harrow, and other schools of great traditions were still to be distinguished by their great confidence in meeting life, and by an accent and way of speaking that was peculiarly theirs.

The general opinion of the visitors was that not enough publicity was given to education in the daily papers, that sport, elections, and war news were given too prominent a place. However, they did not feel that sport was too prominent in our universities, although great amazement was expressed at our systems of organized cheering at games.

The educators expressed their approval of the Varsity campaign for a University member of parliament. "However," said Dr. Smart, "if you are thinking of following the English system of a double vote for registered University graduates and are hoping to get one of your own students or professors elected, you might as well forget about it at once. The political parties simply nominate a man satisfactory to them for the University riding, and the post-graduate votes put him in power. As a matter of fact, about the only benefit that the undergraduate student can hope to obtain from his representative is an indignant protest whenever parliament suggests a cut in University grants."

"Just quote me as being opposed to everything Dr. Smart has told you," said Mr. Tilley with his broad smile, as he closed the interview.

take is to his advantage in the end. The second play will be a revival of the old-time melodramas in the style of "Nellie the Cloak Model". Following this, Hart House Theatre will present "Warping Wharf", a play "concerning pirates and dark plots, to be enacted entirely by children". For those interested in Russian drama, Leo Tolstoy's "The Power of Darkness" will be presented as the fourth feature. A thriller, "Rope", is included in the series, and also three-one act plays, which will bring the season to a close.

A new feature at Hart House Theatre this year is the Sausage Bar, where, between acts, sausages and hot coffee will be sold. This is being sponsored by the Junior League and the proceeds will go to charity. According to Mr. Melville Keay, Executive Secretary of Hart House Theatre, "The Bar" will lend the air of gaiety that is desired. The sounds of chatter and laughter will dispel the aura of stiff formality which seemed to surround the Theatre in the past." It has even been suggested that the singing of college songs be a feature of the "University Theatre Night".

found in this direction. As far as Marshall could see, there was no immediate probability of a social credit government or even official opposition in the federal parliament, despite the fact that Alberta would probably return a solid social credit group, with a considerable number of supporters in other western provinces.

In conclusion Marshall, referring to a letter published in yesterday's edition of The Varsity in which the writer described banking as the world's biggest racket, stated, "The writer of that letter would have been more accurate if he had stated Social Credit (both the Douglas and Aberhart varieties) is the biggest racket with which the world has ever been unfortunate enough to be afflicted."

SCHOLARSHIP GIVES SUMMER IN ITALY

University after having spent a most interesting and enjoyable summer in Italy. The main places visited by the students were Naples, Rome, Florence, Venice and Genoa and at each city they were entertained by representatives of the Gruppo Universitario Fascista, which is an organization that has branches all over Italy and to which all the university student automatically become members. Quite a number of undergraduates spoke good English but during the tour the visiting students spoke entirely in Italian in order to increase their vocabulary with the modern words and idioms.

Miss Dignam was very favourably impressed by the enthusiasm for sports exhibited by nearly all the students, who go in for many different games, but generally specialize in one.

Although Mussolini had arranged beforehand to receive the students in person when they arrived in Rome, he was unable to do so owing to the political state of affairs, which occupied all his time reviewing troops. They were met instead by Parini, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, who arranged for them to visit the Pope.

In contrast to the ancient ruins, relics of Rome's past glory, Miss Dignam said the modern institutions erected in recent years by Il Duce were very interesting from the point of view of architecture as well as efficiency. Miss Dignam was very much impressed by Sobadia, a model city just a few miles from Rome, which Mussolini had started to build about five years ago after first draining the marshes. This city, which is very beautiful in construction, is now nearly completed and is well populated already.

Before returning the students spent several days on the Riviera, which they enjoyed very much and although Miss Dignam said that the scenery was gorgeous she added that the scenery in parts of Canada was just as impressive in its own particular beauty.

With students from universities representing many parts of the North American continent there were many opportunities for discussions and arguments about various things seen on the tour, but Miss Dignam was certain that they would all agree with her in saying that wherever they went they were well received, and everyone put themselves out to help them and make them feel at home during their visit.

Beatty, Chancellor of the university, presented the principal to the assembled audience. He regretted the fact that for two years McGill had been without one of its chief executive officers. The proper functioning of the university within that time, he stated, was due to the hard work of the Board of Governors, and the heads of the faculties. He concluded by wishing the new principal every success.

The installation ceremony followed. Registrar Matthews stood up, received the principal's cap and removed his hood and gown. Dr. Adams then rose with the principal's cap and gown. He shook hands with Mr. Morgan and helped him assume his gown. He then presented the cap, which the principal himself put on. At the conclusion of the ceremony cheer leader Bourne called for three cheers for the new principal.

Mr. Morgan was then welcomed by Dean Martin of the Faculty of Medicine on behalf of the staff and graduates. Hillie McHugh, president of the Students' Council, next extended the best wishes of the student body. The welcome of the other universities of Canada was given by Dr. H. P. Whidden, Chancellor of McMaster University and vice-president of the National Conference of Canadian Universities.

The installation address was then given by the principal, who stated, "I am your principal by right conferred upon me. I am your servant in pursuance of my duty. I hope to become your friend by virtue of your acceptance."

Proceedings were completed with the Benediction spoken by Dr. Abbot-Smith. Following this, photographs of the whole staff were taken on the steps of the Arts Building. Later a reception and buffet luncheon were given in the McGill Union.

of the quarter Gray again kicked for three points. At the start of the fourth canto Isbister kicked for another point and soon after Connelly and Coulter marched down the field for another major count which was not converted. With nine minutes left to play Hughie Marks replaced the leg-weary Connelly. A Marks to Isbister forward was good for fifteen yards and soon the Blues were again knocking on the Mustangs' door but a forward pass by Miller was intercepted to end the game.

default. Instead they went to compete in what is known, for some mysterious reason, as an "exhibition". The difference between an exhibition and its antithesis seems to be rather subtle. In both cases two teams compete and one wins and the other loses. In an exhibition race it seems the winners are presented with a banquet. In a non-exhibition race they are presented with a cup—and probably buy their own dinner.

Despite the fact that no one was going to be present to welcome the boys with a "barber pole", the London-coached crew went out and rowed for all they were worth anyway. In fact they rowed so well that they were over the line just as the McGill team were speeding up their stroke in preparation for the last half mile sprint.

Barber pole or no barber pole, the U. of T. oarsmen gave one of the best exhibitions of rowing against adverse conditions to be seen in some time along the historic banks of the Lachine Canal. Facing a strong head wind they covered the two miles in 12.31, which we were assured is good time in good going, much less in heavy water. The record for the course is 11.30, made under ideal conditions.

The McGill team, which had to enlist the support of several non-participants in educational pursuits at McGill, were considerably weaker than last season. The Blue team, with Lofty Willis, after five years of efforts for his Alma Mater, making his valetudinary appearance and anxious to have them down in front, was equal to any team Toronto has sent to the race in several seasons. Anyway, it was a good race, and Varsity won, keeping the record intact over a period of eight years—and keeping the University of Toronto's record intact for the weekend.

EAST HOUSE LOSES CASTOR

Officers Observe with Amused but Watchful Eye

Last night shortly after twelve three beds manned by pajama-clad froth started off on the traditional bed race of the University of Toronto residences. South House took an early lead and swept to a triumph in the dash from Devonshire Place to College Street. East House was second and North House last.

At a house meeting attended shortly before the race, East House, victors in the last 12 out of 13 engagements, were predicted to be the easy victors. With dire threats in case of failure the various relays were exhorted to uphold the honour of their house.

The main portion of the crowd was assembled at the corner of Harbord and St. George Sts. armed with "the salad". With the report of two salutes jarring the midnight air three beds took the first corner in Hoskin neck and (Continued on Page 4)

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Geneva—By a unanimous vote of thirteen members, including France, the League of Nations Council last night outlawed Italy and agreed to apply economic sanctions against her.

Rome—Officials here stated last night that Italy was willing to endure economic sanctions if necessary, for the sake of victory in Ethiopia, nor would she leave the League of Nations.

London—Great Britain is prepared to work to Geneva for the quickest penalties possible against Italy, according to well-informed sources last night. It was also predicted that she would lift her arms embargo against Ethiopia when the cabinet meets Wednesday.

Addis Ababa—Emperor Haile Selassie yesterday was laying plans to lead 120,000 men against the Italian invaders. He expects to have a million in the field within a fortnight.

Chicago—Seven men were dead, six missing, and at least sixty injured in an explosion which destroyed a six-story building here last night.

The Arts and Crafts Room in Hart House, which is open all day, provides opportunities for members of Hart House to practice lino-cuts, colour blocks, wood engraving, etching, dry-point, aquatints, modelling and wood-carving.

All those interested are asked to meet the instructor, Mr. Carl Schaeffer, at 5 p.m. on Thursday next, October 10th, in the Crafts Room. Thereafter Mr. Schaeffer will be present every Tuesday and Thursday from 4.45 to 6.15. PICTORIAL PHOTOGRAPHY DISCUSSED IN RELATION TO ARTS IN GENERAL

Photography gives a degree of self-expression to those who have neither the ability nor the time for painting. Mr. John Vanderpant, a Fellow of the Royal Photographic Society, elaborated on this statement in his lecture on "Adventures in Pictorial Photography" in the Art Gallery last night.

Mr. Vanderpant discussed the nature of art and its relation to pictorial photography. Art is the expression of man's concept of life. Form is the carrier of the artist's emotion. Photography is only a limited medium of expression, of one's reactions to life.

The photographer must learn to leave the concept of the painter alone and to adhere to form, balance, and lighting. He must stay away from colour. Photographic skill does not consist in copying, which has nothing to do with art but in expressing the emotion which any subject may create, in the proper form and balance.

ITALIAN FURNITURE DEVELOPMENT TRACED

Renaissance Pieces Beautiful but Comfortless States Miss Ruth Home

Tracing the development of furniture in Renaissance Italy at the Museum yesterday afternoon, Miss Ruth Home stressed the secularization and elaborateness of design and detail even in ecclesiastical pieces.

"Richness and ornamentation were becoming increasingly important," Miss Home stated, "but underlying the gorgeousness were amazing traces of medievalism."

This period saw the introduction of such new pieces as the serving-table and the canopied bed, the speaker said. High chairs which required pages to place foot-stools attested to the wealth and importance of the owners.

Varsity Wins Game Thieves Score "Touch"

Guelph, Oct. 5.—Thieves broke into the dressing room of the Varsity Intermediate football team at the Ontario Agricultural College today. They ransacked the players' clothes thoroughly. Luckily the players had handed nearly one hundred dollars in cash and various valuables to the team manager before the game.

A small amount of cash and several sets of pens, pencils and keys were missing. The players, jubilant over their 3-0 victory over the Guelph Aggies, were handed a rude jolt on returning to their room and finding their clothes strewn over the floor. Apparently the latch on one of the windows had been forced.

STUDENT INTEREST IN POLITICS TO BE GAUGED ON THURSDAY

National issues, involving Canada's destiny, face the citizens of this country this week. From a complicated field of political groups and platforms, the voters of the Dominion must choose a party on Monday, October 14, to carry on the difficult business of government.

Students of the University of Toronto are practically disenfranchised in this election. But "The Varsity", by sponsoring a straw vote next Thursday, will endeavour to determine public opinion on the campus in matters political.

Charges and insinuations of apathy among University undergraduates in regard to current events have been common. On Thursday, students here will have an opportunity to prove to the critics they are interested in the public questions of the day.

It is a chance for students of all faculties to show that they think of the election issue. There will be ballot boxes in faculty buildings. Carry your registration card and VOTE.

QUEBEC FOLK SONGS NOT PURE CANADIAN

Marius Barbeau Says Earliest Folk-Songs Are the Best

HAVE FOREIGN ORIGINS

"Children, lovers, mothers, workers, drinkers, all have their songs," says Marius Barbeau, expert on Canadian art and folk-lore, in his recent volume "Folk-Songs of Old Quebec", published by the National Museum of Ottawa. He continues, "People in the old days were musical. Threshing and winnowing in the barn moved to the rhythm of work tunes as did spinning, weaving, beating the wash or rocking the cradle by the fireside."

Mr. Barbeau presents an account of the origins of Canadian folk songs. Through research and tabulation he has found that only 10 per cent of Quebec songs are purely Canadian in origin. The true folk songs arrived in Canada before 1680 with the early settlers from Normandy and the Loire (Continued on Page 4)

MINING BUILDING INVADDED BY THIEF

Malefactor Arrested after Attempting to Steal Overcoats

DENIES PREVIOUS THEFTS

Victor Post, 25 year old labourer, living at 221 Victor Avenue, was in fall today after an attempt to steal overcoats from the Mining Building on College Street. The thief was caught but broke away and jumped through the left-hand panel of the plate-glass doors at the College Street entrance to the Mining Building; he then threw off his coat and hat, discarded a stolen overcoat, and hopped on the running-board of a passing motor car. The driver of the car stopped at the corner of Henry and College Streets and there the thief was overhauled and taken into custody by Constables Scott and D'Arcy of the University Police.

In an interview with The Varsity later in the afternoon Constable D'Arcy stated that four coats had previously (Continued on Page 4)

MUNRO KILLED? NO!!! LOEB KILLED? NO!!!

By Ross Munro
With the Anglican Army at St. George and Harbord, 12.21 a.m., Oct. 8th.—Sweeping out of the east from Devonshire Place, the fierce warriors from the University residence mud villages split the midnight sky and the Trinity College windows early this morning with a flaming barrage of tomatoes as initial hostilities opened.

Their scuttling whippet tanks (beds) before them, the University residence troopers advanced down Hoskins. Searchlights played along the facade of Whitney nursing home as the angry Anglican antagonists of Trinity waited in the shadows with their deadly baskets of mature fruits.

Bringing up the heavy artillery and the tomato hand grenade experts, the cavaliers of University residence thudded the Trinity fortress. Shattered glass fell on St. George Street and the college missionaries dashed into the fray to marshal the men of the Anglican army.

Fierce skirmishes continued down St. George as the barbarians from the east swept through the last defences of the churchmen and headed for the College Street blunderland.

"This is the proudest moment in our history. Our national pride is avenged," an Anglican padre murmured as he vanished into his cell.

By Martin Loeb
With the Presbyterian Army on the St. George, 12.23 a.m., October 8th.—Days of planning in the dim dugouts of Knox College simmered away to a slight skirmish this morning as the University Residence Bed Race scampered down St. George St.

Hours before the expected invasion the killed laddies rustled their bristles, and armed with baskets of over-ripe paradise fruit, laid in ambush. They took up a position some 500 yards north of the College-St. George intersection.

South House led the invading forces. At Willocks, the Highlanders forsook ammunition and 22 of them pounced on six tired but game warriors.

Facing the overwhelming odds with great courage, the fleet-footed fellows from further north easily repulsed the burr-voiced attackers.

In the clash, the South House Tankers lost their tractor treads but despite this handicap, they sped on.

Later, as the invaders were returning, singing lustily, the Fundamentalists were cowed to a standstill, the braver and more fair-minded of them even cheering.

As the Presbyterian army retired to their billets, they mumbled, "Anyway, God's on our side."

Varsity Straw Vote Commended By Political Parties on Campus

POLAR EXPLORER NOW ON STAFF

Professor Taylor of Scott Expedition Now Member of Economics Department

GAVE NAME TO VALLEY

Comparatively few students are aware that the University has on its staff a man who has pulled a sleigh laden with provisions and geological apparatus for days at a time through piercing sub-zero blizzards at a distance of merely 800 miles from the South Pole! That man is T. Griffith Taylor, professor of Economic Geography in the Department of Economics.

In 1910 Professor Taylor was appointed from the University of Cambridge as chief geologist to Scott's last tragic expedition to the South Pole. The party left New Zealand in November, and those who survived returned in 1912 to tell the world of one of the most adventurous undertakings of man.

ALL INSPIRED ARTS HAVE COMMON BASIS SAYS J. M. GIBBON

That all the arts in which inspiration plays a vital part are related, was the statement of J. Murray Gibbon at the opening meeting of the twenty-first season of the Canadian Literature Club held in the auditorium of the Reference Library last night.

Mr. Gibbon, author of the recently published "Steel of Empire", commenced his address by tracing the similarities and differences in inspiration of five well-known composers. With Mozart composing was the germination and growth of years in his subconscious mind. The writing down of the finished composition was almost mechanical. Schubert's inspiration, on the other hand, was some poem he had read. Turning to the artists we find that Millar's subconscious self is stored with impressions received from close contact with nature.

In art the three chief inspirations are reformation, renaissance and the return to nature. Of these three is the last is the most important—Leonardi is noted (Continued on Page 4)

"Student" Appears On Campus To-day

"Educational opportunity is a factor in guaranteeing our civil liberties. Economics at the cost of education is a policy which can lead to dire consequences." Thus concludes an article by Harold Acker entitled "Students Balance the Budget", which appears in The Student, publication of the Student League appearing today on the campus.

The writer discusses the whole question of the increase in fees and the resultant activities of the Canadian Youth Council and the Ad Hoc committee to date.

Editorially The Student discusses the war question and its relation to students, the fees increase and the forthcoming election, as well as relations between the Student Christian Movement and the Student League.

Will Reveal Condition of Student Thought

Unanimous in their support of the straw vote to be held Thursday among the University of Toronto students in regard to the federal election issue, undergraduate spokesmen for political parties on the campus yesterday highly approved of the proposed vote to determine the political tendencies of the students.

The presidents of the Conservative and Liberal organizations on the campus characterized the vote as a "splendid idea". Spokesmen for the radical political clubs stated they fully endorsed the straw vote.

The Varsity was commended by students for its stand in sponsoring the vote and providing the undergraduates with a chance to indicate their political allegiance.

"It's very difficult to say what the result will be, but the idea is good," was the opinion of N. D. Pilcher, president of the Macdonald-Carter Club, (Continued on Page 4)

NO ESSAY CREDIT FOR REPORTERS

English Essay System is Different at McGill University

MANY OBSTACLES HERE

Members of the English Department in the University of Toronto see several obstacles which would perhaps prevent the adoption of a plan giving essay credit for reporters' work on the college daily paper. The discussion arose as a result of an "Exchange" editorial reprinted Friday in the columns of The Varsity from the McGill Daily. The article pointed out that the McGill students enrolled in English courses no longer need to write the essays which are a part of their course. Instead they will be marked on the strength of their articles appearing in the McGill Daily.

However, according to Professor G. D. Robins of the English Department, Victoria, "McGill has an essay system different from that used at Toronto. At McGill numerous essays of a short, general nature are required during the academic year, whereas at Toronto only four essays are required. All of them deal with problems encountered in the books assigned on the course in English Literature." Professor Robins concluded by explaining that although writing for The Varsity is splendid experience in writing clear, straightforward English, it has practically no value as an aid in understanding the text books on the course, as have the four assigned essays.

St. Hilda's College, Oxford women's faculty, will not hold its scheduled fall dance because the girls played pranks on their principal, finally locking her out of her own room for several hours. The principal countered by cancelling the dance, and is considered to have won the round on points.

Another of the women's colleges will not be allowed a dance since beer bottles were found in rooms.

Is This Our "Free Speech"?

Being an ordinary student with no burning convictions about any special social order except that in which one may be left to do mostly as one pleases, an opportunity is often provided for intimate glimpses of the feeble attempts that are made on this continent to organize new social systems. For instance, last May in Queen's Park, many students will remember the big parade with the lovely big signs and the foreigners who carried them shouting various unintelligible slogans and cheering for nearly everything except the football team and the Premier.

There were many speeches, one in particular which may be referred to as an intimate glimpse into the work being done by social agitators in Toronto. This speech was given by the gentleman who on one occasion climbed a tree the better to address his public, and who on this occasion chose to mount the drinking fountain in front of the band-stand. He spoke for perhaps fifteen minutes on the state of Canadian affairs. His words were badly chosen, and his exhortations meaningless. He urged the students to unite with the workers and to fight. He didn't say what to fight or who, or by what means or where to do it.

Of the fifteen odd speeches which were given by the comrades, only two showed any intelligent thought and rational criticism. The speeches were for the most part delivered by people who had read just enough to be able to mouth the few stock phrases of communism and socialism. Not one of the members of the crowd seemed to know what was wanted or needed. The speaker stood up and said that something had to be done and that the workers must fight and then sat down.

In Columbus Square, New York City, the same little knot of ignorant people is to be found mounting the soap box and the hydrant to condemn anything not already condemned and to beg of the workers to fight. There was one old reformer in particular in the Square this fall whom we noticed to have a long dirty beard and a mean glitter in his eye who called this world and the American government all the names he could think of, and pointed his finger in the air and swung his arms until it was difficult to know what he was talking about.

Granted the fact that the real thinking is done in quiet, and the valid theories of social organization are thought out by men in academic circles, why does it happen that most of the talking is done by these ignorant strangers who take it upon themselves to lead their comrades' minds into a peculiar way of thinking? The soap-box should be used to contain soap and not to support the weight of men such as these.

The Hyde Park idea is a good one, but on this side of the Atlantic at least, the ordinary communist meeting might better be held in the court-yard of a mental institution.

Pity the Frosh!

It is now two weeks since term opened and by now we suspect that ninety-nine per cent of the freshmen are wondering what they did in their five odd years of High School. To the first shock of discovering that they know practically nothing about the courses they have undertaken, is added that of discovering that nobody cares.

During the convention of the Ontario Teachers Association at Easter every year volumes are written on the inadequacy of the present High School system but nothing is ever done about it. So still we have these innocent youngsters coming down here with their matriculation certificates in their hands covered with first and second-class honours, many of them scholarships holders, who not unnaturally look forward to a college course as successful as that they have just finished. Their illusions are soon cruelly shattered. At High School their courses of study were carefully mapped for them. They were told what to do and they knew that if they followed instructions they would pass their examinations. The teachers drilled and redrilled them on all important points, always with an eye to the inevitable examination, and always aware that the better marks the pupils made the greater credit to themselves.

What a changed world the University proves to be! The poor bewildered students are ushered into a lecture room where a professor, to whom each individual is but another name, rattles off a lecture in erudite language quite above the head of the average High School graduate. The professor cares not at all for examination results. He is concerned only with what he has to say. It is no credit to him to produce a class of successful students. In fact the more "plunkings" that take place in May the higher the prestige of the course.

As the days pass the students become more and more confused; they try to work but they are utterly inexperienced in organizing their own work. They are expected to know so much about subjects they never even heard of before. The result is that many a good student goes down to disaster and defeat in the Christmas examinations, and happy he who gets his footing again before May.

Perhaps the end justifies the means and only the unintelligent ones are weeded out at the end of the first year. But when we look at the harassed faces of freshmen struggling in vain to cope with the work demanded by the honour courses we cannot help thinking that many good students must fail too, not through lack of ability but through being unable to adapt themselves to a new system. The fault lies obviously in the High Schools but until reform eventually comes, in the slow manner of true reform, we plead the cause of the freshmen with their professors. We beg them not to lower the standards of the University but just to be a little more understanding and sympathetic and to remember what a gulf there exists between High School and University.

A University Dance Hall

Have you a few thousand dollars handy? Because if you have, and you want to make a few more, there is a chance to do so right here on the campus of the University of Toronto.

For years University students have been holding their dances, College, year, Faculty and Fraternity dances, in the Ryoal York and King Edward Hotels, at the Old Mill, the Embassy, and even the Silver Slipper. For years the students have, of a Saturday night, taken their girls dancing to these places. They have paid for gasoline if they have cars, for the cars themselves if they have to hire them. They have paid cover charges and been charged exorbitant rates for what they eat and drink. But they have enjoyed themselves and, despite the cost, they go back and probably will continue to go back.

Now if some enterprising young capitalist would consider opening an establishment within the boundaries of the University, nearer the residences,—say up on Bloor Street,—or in some vacant lot such as that behind the Newman Hall Chapel on Hoskin,—surely he could make it pay? Low prices, a five cent cover charge, a dance floor and an orchestra. Now please don't get the wrong idea. Far be it from us to suggest any dime-a-dance palace! But, with the permission of the University, such an establishment as this could be built, staffed and operated for the sole use and benefit of the undergraduate body of the University. It could open at eight in the evening and shut regularly at midnight. If the authorities see anything undesirable about that they are far-sighted indeed! Far better it would be than most of the relaxation we allow ourselves at the moment. Closing in April a month or more before exams it could scarcely interfere with the studies of the studious—and would, I am sure, be a money-making proposition.

Just as a dog will eat grass if he is hungry, so will American people of liberal tendencies appease their appetite by following liberal thinkers.—J. David Stern.

Improve his midnight hours?

C-C

How mockingly he seems to grin,
This cunning little funster,
And gloats in very joy of sin,—
But what a rotten punster!

C-C

That was Iago, who must have read yesterday's column. Well, we had another good one for today but he'd say "There Iago again!" Next we will hear from friend Jelxabot who needs no other introduction than a couple of lines from his verse in last Friday's column, which we didn't have room to print—"Within the proletariat, There blooms a poet-laureate."

C-C

Taxation's an important tenet
Of that hard-hearted custom-cr Bennett,
But duties specific
Are truly tariffic,
And ought to be squashed by the Senate.

Before we could pun on "Jelxabot" we'd have to know how to pronounce it, so we'll just pass along to a timely little contribution from Rust'em the Persian, which we promised you some days ago.

As standing them a taxi.

C-C

Well, we don't like impatiently waiting any better than you do, Rust', but we'll be doggoned if we're going to pay taxi fare to the far end of the stacks and back just for the sake of speedier service. But it's an idea.

SACRIFICE NECESSARY TO ACHIEVE PEACE

Speaker at League Society
Attacks Superiority of War Victors

"I don't think we shall ever get right until we acknowledge our sins, notably the superiority we have assumed as victors in the Great War," was the statement of Miss Alice Chown, president of the Toronto branch of the League of Nations Society, speaking at the Y.W.C.A. yesterday afternoon on the subject, "What I heard in Geneva."

"There are universal laws," she declared, "to the breaking of which our present condition is due. They operate without regard to race or condition, and we must return to them, one of the foremost being the law 'Love thy neighbour as thyself.'" That the note of friendship was everywhere in Europe, this summer, was the speaker's observation, and it was the promise of many members that they would abide by their word given in meeting.

It was Miss Chown's privilege to hear Professor Mowat, author of "Private and Public Morality", whose declaration it was that the League was the first attempt for other nations to consider interests outside their own. And the speaker felt sure that it was each delegate's conclusion that sacrifice was necessary to achieve peace.

Miss Chown's closing note was a plea to remember that only in the welfare of the world will we find our own welfare.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

been reported missing from the Mining Building and that he and his companion had had the building under observation for some time. On detecting the thief the two constables had seized the man but he had broken away, broken through the window and eventually had been caught and taken to headquarters.

Post has previously been convicted for similar affairs and has confessed to the theft of the overcoat—though he denies the theft of the four coats previously reported missing.

A glance at the scene of the crime and attempted escape revealed the boarded up panel on the door of the Mining Building (damage estimated at $8.94), and the steps newly washed to clear up all traces of blood left by the fugitive after his crash through the glass. Post was sent slightly about the face and hands.

SOUTH HOUSE TRIUMPHS RIVALS FAR BEHIND

neck. Coming down the avenue the various supporters aided the contestants in trying to overwhelm opposing beds, but South with a wide swerve managed to grab the lead.

Turning into St. George the contestants ran into a well-aimed barrage of ancient fruit from Trinity and other by-standers. The frisky frosh were now travelling at top speed and crowding each other into the curb at every opportunity. As a result of such hectic struggles the North House brigade, equipped with the latest thing in rubber castors, crashed into a parked car opposite Knox, ruining their chances.

Here, too, the pride of East House betrayed its owners by dropping a castor and tore down the rest of St. George in a blaze of sparks. The last relay of South House rushed their bed over the College St. car tracks to an easy win.

Amidst wild jubilation the beds were shouldered and borne back to the cheers of the various houses. The Trinity supporters had meanwhile vanished into their residence, and were followed by a few well-placed tomatoes.

Through the whole fracas, Knox, despite its record of yearly opposition, remained strictly neutral. The affair was damped by the presence of three city officers located at the corner of Hoskin and St. George. The different houses served refreshments to their gladiators and the falling frosh spent the night in sadly splashed pyjamas.

QUEBEC FOLK SONGS NOT PURE CANADIAN

district. According to Mr. Barbeau, these songs far exceed all others and are incomparably the best. Thus Grimm's theory—that folk songs are the fruit of collective inspiration—does not apply to Quebec or France, where the folk singers do not create songs, but only conserve and transmit them orally.

Ancient songs are characterized by their inveterate nomadism. "Dance Lombard", a song which is still sung in modern French Canada, had its inception in 6th century northern Italy. "Born under the stars . . . the songs took to the road or the sea . . . No frontier impeded their progress for very long." The "wanderings" of four other songs are described also.

Descriptions of the songs of old Quebec are included in the book as well as song translations by Regina Schoolman. Arthur Lismer, Toronto artist and lecturer at the Art Gallery of Toronto, has added character and cultural sketches. The work also contains full musical scores of the songs. It may be obtained from the Director, the National Museum, the Department of Mines, Ottawa, at the cost of 25 cents.

The most important geological discoveries made by the exploration party on their two main trips were a sub-glacial river 25 miles long, and a canyon 5 miles across and 25 miles in length completely devoid of ice which was named Taylor Valley in honour of the professor. Coal, and fossils of fish were located, and the origin of cirque valleys was worked out by the geologists during their sojourn in Antarctica.

Gentlemen Prefer Brunettes Says Date Bureau Operator

Gentlemen may prefer blondes, but to date only 25 per cent of the men who have registered with the Date Bureau have specified a desire for this particular type of the dangerous female. And women are supposed to prefer tall strong handsome men, but the large majority of those who have registered with the Bureau want them intelligent and amusing, with few other preferences.

The Date Bureau, in operation over a week now, is catering to a steady stream of applicants who have not had an opportunity to make friends among the opposite sex, the bureau operator said last night. Approximately 75 per cent of the men who have applied have been from out of town, with representatives from New York City, England, Ireland, and each of the western provinces. Students have registered from every college except St. Joseph's College and Loretto Abbey.

So far the men who have patronized the Bureau outnumber the women by about two to one, and there is an acute shortage of women in residence. Last year it was found that women in residence were the Bureau's best patrons, but this year they have not registered in such great numbers.

Double dating is a problem that is causing the operator of the Bureau some trouble. Some girls write in in pairs, asking for escorts in pairs who will take them out together, and there have been two groups of three who want to hold house parties with trios of young men. Others specify that they wish to see the man who is chosen for them before the date. Such particular specifications have delayed the fulfilment of some applications.

Concluding the interview, the Bureau operator asked The Varsity to suggest that girls writing in for escorts to rugby games should say whether they have season tickets of their own, as many men have these bleacher seats and would gladly accompany a young lady who has one too.

in the moss. Penguins and seals are merely temporary visitors. The professor pointed out that in the north-polar regions there is grass in summer, and the musk-ox, a rather large animal, is found there. The temperature of the south-polar summer is similar to the normal Canadian mid-winter temperature, while in the winter months the thermometer drops to 80 below.

Mr. Taylor believes that Scott died because he tackled a job too great for human endurance in view of the equipment they had in those days. The reader can scarcely appreciate the immense climatic change that occurs in March, when the sun begins to vanish. Amundsen, who reached the pole just before Scott died, got back at the end of January, and also had the advantage of dog teams, while Scott had no dogs.

Professor Taylor first came to Toronto a month ago, and is determined to make geography the second science department in the University as he did in Sydney, Australia.

their political 'thinking', if it may be called that."

"The Varsity's claim that it is a flagrant abuse to hold an election in the school term, thus preventing many students from voting, is well founded," he said. "Still, I question if the undergraduate body as a whole is much better qualified to select a representative for a separate riding comprising the University than other electorates. The apathy here is appalling."

"I earnestly bespeak the support of the student body for the straw vote. It is most timely and will serve an excellent purpose if taken seriously."

A. R. Hicks, president of the 20th Century Liberal Club, stated yesterday he believed the campus would show Conservative tendencies in the straw vote on Thursday. He was of the opinion Toronto proper would return a 50-50 Liberal-Conservative verdict.

Hicks favoured representation for the undergraduates but did not think the proposal feasible. He added that some of the professors from the economics department ought to run as candidates.

Morris Wayman, leader of the Student League and spokesman for the Communist party on the campus, strongly endorsed the holding of a straw vote, and stated that the Student League had been considering urging such a step. He favoured the election of a majority of C.C.F. and Communist candidates in the federal elections.

When asked about the probable strength of the Communist party showing in the straw vote, Wayman refused to comment; but he added the opinion that the C.C.F. and Communists combined would make a very favourable showing.

W. Mason, third year Arts, whose father is a Reconstruction party candidate, indicated his complete approval of the proposed straw vote.

"It should indicate student political thought and be very valuable in times such as these," he said.

"The close association of architecture and furniture made for a harmony which is lacking in most modern homes," she said. University College, also foresaw certain difficulties in the scheme, as applied to the University of Toronto. "The courses in English are the same in all of the colleges," he said. "To initiate such a plan would require the unanimous support of the English Departments in each of the Arts Colleges." Dr. MacDonald saw the chief advantage of such an action would be the improvement of the material appearing in The Varsity. "My individual opinion means nothing," he stated, "the only body having any jurisdiction in the matter is the Council of the University Department of English. Any desire for a ruling must be dealt with by means of a petition directed to the Department."

TEST OF STUDENT INTEREST

Overthrow of Tammany Hall Attributed to Vote of N.Y. Students

Great interest is aroused on the campus in the straw vote which The Varsity is holding on Thursday. In a general survey made by The Varsity there was a unanimous opinion that such a test of student interest in national affairs was "a splendid idea". Undergraduates from every college and faculty expressed views concerning the outcome and the importance of a campus vote.

W. Caron Jones, III U.C., thought that it would "provide an opportunity for the student to vindicate himself as a thinking being to the outside world. It all depends, of course, on the students responding wholeheartedly to the splendid opportunity which The Varsity has provided," he said.

D. B. Kilgour, in the Faculty of Engineering, commented, "It is an excellent idea. S.P.S. men are taking a greater interest in political thinking due" (Continued on Page 4)

Neo-Engineers Need Nine Nice Nifties

LARGEST ORDER SO FAR

The year's first wholesale order for girl-friends came in to the Date Bureau last night, when nine second year engineers sent in a request for nine ravishing females for next Friday night.

This mass order, the largest since the memorable order from the seventeen Foresters last autumn, caught the Date Bureau operator unaware, he stated. There are no groups of girls now registered large enough to fill the request. The result, a rush call for nine girls who are free for an engagement with nine engineers this Friday.

The young men in the case are budding metallurgists, and they have a party all arranged except for the one requisite—women. They have no particular preferences except that the girls be good sports, and willing to make new friends.

Elsewhere in today's paper will be found the Date Bureau registration form. Any group of girls, preferably in residence, who would like to take up the offer of the nine School men should fill in these applications and enclose the necessary dime-a-date, sending them to the Date Bureau, care of The Varsity, Hart House. The Date Bureau operator would appreciate the co-operation if someone would get in touch with him at Ra. 3730 tomorrow, saying that the offer had been accepted.

Girls are still in demand, with two men for every girl registered so far, the operator added.

French House, a Victoria women's residence, at 127 Bloor St. West, has after a lapse of three years, been re-organized under Mademoiselle Riese, Professor of French at Victoria College. For three years Mlle. Riese was the head of French House, also known as Waldie House, in existence at the same address. With the recent decrease in the number of students, it was necessary to drop the idea of French House, and it was carried on as an ordinary residence for Victoria women. Last year the house was not occupied. It was due to the interest of the French Department at Victoria, and to the (Continued on Page 4)

Serious Attention Urged To 'Varsity' Election Poll

"The Varsity's" straw vote on the coming election will be held tomorrow.

Many of the students are virtually disenfranchised by the Election Act as it stands today.

The student reaction to this vote may largely determine the political future of the University.

An attitude of apathy toward the vote will stamp the student body as disinterested in politics and undeserving of consideration.

Unless the vote is taken seriously results met which would have a derogatory effect on that of the University.

The information resulting from a repes would be of value to the students and faculty. Therefore we ask your co-operation in co vote in a serious and dignified manner. This of the faculty.

PROGRAMME OF PLAYS

Tomorrow night at 8 p.m. Victoria College will present its 63rd annual Bob in Burwash Hall. The Bob founded by and named after Robert Beare, janitor of Victoria in its early days, climaxes the initiation of Victoria freshmen and the class of 3T9 thereby becomes acceptable to the college.

This year's Bob, which is arousing more interest than usual, places greater emphasis on musical arrangements. The programme is in charge of a committee of eleven, consisting chiefly of sophomores. The four-act play which forms the major part of the programme, was written by Charlie Jolliffe and George Johnson, with contributions to the musical setting by Fred Skitch.

Disenchantment in Higher Education

Many people have discussed the differences between secondary and higher education—the atmosphere of a university, the gaps in the continuity in learning, the movements and clubs of a college. Every college student has felt them. The distinctions generally drawn, are, of course, quite valid. But the essential contrast between what a student feels in high school and in university is the inconclusiveness of higher education.

We leave high school confident that we are on the threshold of a new era, wherein will be rolled back the veil that hides the mysteries of life. We enter college; the veil is rent in one or two places; we peer anxiously within; but always darkness greets our gaze, and a web of veils that overlap within. We shout into the depths and are answered with mockery, the echo of our own inquiring voices. A few examples from science and philosophy will suffice to illustrate the point.

In high school we studied physics. We were told of gravitation; and parrot-like, we recited Newton's three laws of motion. We heard of evolution, and, aflame with the spirit of modern progress, we believed in Darwinism as in our daily bread. One essential point is clear. We took all these things for granted. The world's mysteries were closed to us only because we did not know enough. Only let us learn a little more—let us go to university, and we should soon possess the secrets of science.

We did so. We went to university and found that Einstein had smashed Newton's compact world into bits—and Newton had seemed firmer than Gibraltar. Well, perhaps Newton was wrong; there is still Einstein. Then came the crushing blow. Einstein himself is uncertain of his theses. Darwin himself is called into question. Certainly his evolution has never been proved. Thus, the comforting world of fact, the dogmatic boxed-up world in which our high school days were lived, is gone.

In high school we conceived a desire to learn philosophy. The perfection of language, the nature of science, the secret of social organization, all these things were exceedingly interesting. But of more surpassing moment was the secret of the universe itself and the secret of life. Religion no longer served to solve these problems, and sanctions for morality grew dimmer and vaguer. Haltingly, we were becoming agnostics. "But do not be troubled," we consoled ourselves, as we looked upwards, "away off in university is a study called philosophy, echoes of which have drifted into your lives. It tells you what you are, and what the universe. Do not be afraid. Ultimate reality awaits only the persistent study of human reasoning, to be revealed. Difficult as the process may be it is at least theoretically possible."

We went to university and found that theoretically it is quite impossible. We had better have gone on living in the old spiritually hand-to-mouth way, enjoying romance and a good cup of coffee, and not worrying about sanctions for morality, or the final predicables of the universe. Inconclusive as were our other studies, this "queen of the sciences" was positively mystifying. "Inconclusiveness glorified" should be the description of the course labelled Philosophy 1r, or 2s or 3t. And the more we delved into higher education the more inconclusive and disappointing we found it. Similar statements could be made of the two newest fields of human learning, the social sciences and psychology.

This is neither a complaint nor an expression of regret. It is an explanation purporting to crystallize the differences between collegiate and college education, and to clarify the one theme that runs through all discussions of such differences, and that theme, the "inconclusiveness of higher learning".

Journalistic Warfare

Reports from Ethiopia last night indicated that Haile Selassie has at last expelled the Italian Ambassador from that country. Mr. Selassie is away behind schedule. The local papers had him driven from that country no less than a week ago. The assumption probably was that the scent of action was so far away from the publication that no one was likely to deny the statement in any case.

Distance is said to lend romance to any project. The journalistic organs in United States and Canada are reaping a harvest on this war being waged in the far-off corner of the world, so remote from authentic contact. While it is impossible to deny many of the fantastic stories emanating from this source, the variety in which the same story is presented should cause some question as to its validity.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

The M.C. Players' Guild

For its first production of the year the University College Players' Guild has selected "Seven Women", a one-act play by Barrie. The plot of this comedy is entirely negligible—the source of its success lies with the characters themselves, who are "perfect dears" involved in a situation most trying even to people with such a label as that. Gently humorous, whimsical, charming, it contains all the essential elements of Barrie's greater works and represents what was best in him—laughter that is gentle, even when it is satire.

Let's Go Places

With skirling pipes and hoot mons, Stanley (Mac) Laurel and Oliver Hardy parade across the Atlantic in a cattle boat to Bonnie Scotland for their full length comedy feature now (dis) gracing the screen at Loews. Stumbling into an army recruiting bureau in search of a free pair of pants they are treated to free skirts instead, and are shipped off to the north Indian frontier. They soon become accustomed to the kilts but Mr. (Mac) Laurel never does get the knack of marching in step. The choicest shot in the show is that where-in this worthy proves himself the only man in the army that is in step—by persuading the entire regiment to change step and march with him. Amazingly enough the funniest bit of slapstick on the performance is not provided by these specialists in the art.

Further Weakness Of the Weaker Sex

It is gratifying to see that co-eds at the University of Toronto can be emotionally aroused by a rugby game. Hundreds of the "weaker sex" endured the wintry blasts last Saturday afternoon in order that they might cheer their side on to victory. Indeed! What great enthusiasm must have been shown in order that Varsity's heroes could hand out such an overwhelming defeat to our Western opponents.

However gratifying this might be, it is nevertheless deplorable to witness the apathy of highly educated women to anything more intellectual than a rugby game. Anything that requires the use of that more elusive function of the organism called reason seems to elicit a response only after frequent exhortations on the part of a professor.

To back up this statement one need only observe the almost total lack of female support given to political organizations on the campus. Although women are debarred from most of the men's political clubs nothing prevents the women from forming parallel organizations of their own. But they do not seem to be able to become sufficiently enthusiastic to contribute even a small portion of their time and intellect to a political organization whether Liberal, Conservative, C.C.F. or Communist.

Are the members of the so-called weaker sex willing to admit that they are also the less intellectual? Can they become enthusiastic only at such emotional manifestations as a rugby game?

Surely the future of the women and the future of the men undergraduates is equally at stake. Do they not consider what responsibility the state owes to the individual and what responsibility the individual owes the state? It is the duty of the electors to put in control of the state the party who in their minds will assume the responsibility most adequately.

It will be interesting to see what proportion of the women students avail themselves of the opportunity offered them by the straw vote to record their opinions.

SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

The tennis tournament did not progress very far in yesterday's play. Only the remaining second round matches were played off, although Claire Walsh and Gladys Carveth were considering playing their third round match. The girls have been very lucky, and have had beautiful weather. So far no flannel slacks have appeared on the courts because of northern gales.

In the second round Jean Atkinson of U.C. and Mary de Wynter of St. Hilda's staged a very even struggle, with Mary the eventual winner. Both girls gave all they had, but Mary seemed to have the edge with her steadiness. Polly Shaw of U.C. was forced to abandon her usual driving game, and played steady pathball to win from Mary Gallagher of St. Mike's. Polly is following in her sister's footsteps and the two Shaw sisters are U.C.'s chief threats.

The third round will be played this morning, and five very good matches should result. So far U.C. is leading the bandwagon with eleven points, but Vic and St. Hilda's are running them close with ten points each. If possible, the tennis executive hopes to run off the fourth round this afternoon, in case the weather breaks.

St. Hilda's had a very good turnout at their basketball practice Monday night, and the freshmen seem to be coming players. Their next practice will be tonight. U.C. had a large gathering last night, and should be well away to a good start with their new coaches. Louise Crouch and Wilma Hazlett are coaching the seniors, and should produce a smart team with Jean Atkinson, Billy McGarry and Pat Petrick. Lorna Reid is taking the juniors in hand, and Quita Mennell will look after the freshmen.

The Nurses are having their second basketball practice tonight from five to seven at Margaret Eaton. Only eight players turned out last Friday night, and since nine players are necessary, it doesn't leave them any choice. They want to see a big turnout on hand tonight.

Munroe, Westheuser and Other Champions Lost Through Graduation

Track and field exponents will strive for places on the intercollegiate squad at Varsity Stadium, where the inter-faculty meet takes place this afternoon.

Some of last year's stalwarts have been lost through graduation, notably Alex Munroe, Canadian high jump champion, and Westheuser, holder of the inter-faculty and intercollegiate discus record. However, there are several promising stars to take their places. Innis will take a lot of beating in the high jump, while the discus, shot-put and javelin will be keenly contested by Fulton, Eaton, Greer and Bob Isbister.

Heading the sprinters is Caldwell, last year the winner of the intercollegiate 100 yard championship, and a winner at Buffalo this summer representing the Tri-Y. Harris and Ashen-hurst also kick up plenty of dust and a keen struggle is anticipated.

Worral, intercollegiate champion hurdler from McGill now attending O.C.E., appears to have that event at his mercy, as does Maguire in the broad jump. However, the latter is going to have a tough time winning the 440 when he takes the track against Conway. Wishart, a freshman at the Dental College, looks promising for the mile and half-mile jaunts. The three-mile should see a thrilling struggle between Kibblewhite, Huether and McAdam.

In the middle distances there are several good men including Forrest, Huether, Sandwell and Delaney. Rankin, always a threat, is a doubtful starter, as he has been laid up with a cold.

Cooper, the present wearer of the pole-vault crown, will have to really get up in the air if he hopes to shake off the challenge of Hamilton.

Everything points to a very successful track meet with keen competition the order of the day. For the past week the track has been a busy spot where the contestants have been getting into shape. The winners tomorrow will be rewarded with a place on the intercollegiate team, so there will be some desperate striving for those places.

SOCCER PROSPECTS BRIGHT THIS YEAR

Dave Rowland, Star Player,
Now Coach; MacPherson Manager

WORKOUT HELD YESTERDAY

Intimates in the intercollegiate soccer circle seem to envision new prospects for the Ontario championship this year. With Dave Rowland, star player in previous years, now coach, and Jimmie MacPherson, manager, both prepared to work the team into a strong hard-fighting unit, such enthusiasm may be well founded.

MacPherson, occupying either the centre-forward or centre-half position, can be counted on as in past years, to play a very strong position game. With Mack Pratt, wingman; Gordon Sully, inside-right; MacPherson, and Fred Rowland, all back on the forward line, a strong offensive is predicted in the coming clashes with R.M.C. and McGill. Alex Simm, in position at half, it is not as yet determined who will be teamed with Rod Jack on the full-back line. Forbes Thompson from the British Consul Jr. squad, Fred Lankin, Jack Brown, Bill Cochran, and Al Cushing, all showed up well in practice and come up from other teams with experience and good form.

Both Rowland and MacPherson intimated that first year men would be welcome to turn out for practices and try out for the team, thus making it possible to ascertain all available players not only for this but for ensuing years.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George C. Vair

VICTORIA are determined to bring home the interfaculty soccer cup after losing out to S.P.S. in the final last season. With the schedule opening within the next ten days, the Presbyterians are getting plenty of practice. Monday afternoon a team of freshmen bolstered by Captain Ken Woodsworth and Max Pratt, beat a similar Wycliffe squad 9-0. The Victoria hopefuls are having an exhibition game with Normal School on Thursday and should be in good condition when the whistle goes to open the scramble for the cup.

OF all sports in the curricula, the ancient Canadian game of lacrosse is drawing no little attention due to the Mann Cup games in Vancouver. Most important of all as far as we are concerned is the possibility of a University of Toronto team meeting the famed Rochester squad, one of the best exponents of lacrosse in the U.S.A., in the near future.

THE University of Toronto seconds meet Western II on Saturday as a curtain raiser to the Argonaut-Hamilton game and although the second game involves the leadership of the Big Four series, the opener should have its interesting features. This year's squad is composed of many new men and the manner in which they defeated the Aggies last week-end augurs well for coming senior teams. Besides this a victory for the Blues will keep them on the top of the heap.

EXTRA! Drop in at the Stadium tomorrow and see the inter-faculty track meet for a good line on who will compete in the intercollegiate meet to be held in Toronto on October 18th. Larry O'Connor, who ran away with the individual championship at the U.C. meet, when he scored four firsts, two seconds and one third, should provide the boys with some keen competition. Student ticket No. 2 will get you by the gate.

THURSDAY U.C. and Victoria will open the long Mulock Cup grind when they engage in the first interfaculty rugby game of the season.

RESIDENCES FAVOUR A CAMPUS CABARET

Other Students Oppose Idea on Economic Grounds

VIC STUDENT WANTS BEER

The idea of establishing a dance hall on the campus called forth (from the student body) both favourable and adverse criticism. The general opinion of the students was more or less evenly divided between the "yea" and the "nay" with neither in the majority. The people in residence seemed more favourably inclined to the establishment of a place of this sort, while the day students rather "booed" the idea.

Frank Lalor, Trinity, thought that the idea was good if a decent looking place could be established and if the authorities at the University would give their consent to the proposition. He, however, added that the possibilities of this taking place were rather small.

J. Hill, I Trinity: "The place reeks of knowledge, and naturally is not conducive to dancing. Establishments like the Royal York provide romantic atmosphere even though they are more expensive."

A third year student in political science, who preferred to remain anonymous, proceeded to outline the impracticability of the project from an economic standpoint. He claimed that the upkeep of a dance hall would be a heavy drain on anyone's pocket. In order to make it a paying proposition dances would have to be run there continually or students would have to patronize the hall regularly and since variety is the spice of life this can hardly be expected even from the most loyal and patriotic of students.

Jean Meiners, II B. & M., "The establishment of a dance hall on the campus might be a good idea except for the fact that it is highly impracticable. The students would never give it enough business to keep it going very long. There are quite enough dance halls around the city without cluttering up the campus. Establishing a dance hall on the campus would not be in harmony with the atmosphere of the University."

Desmond Pacey, II Victoria, acting as spokesman for a group of men at Gate House, claimed that the consensus of opinion was in favour of the venture if the dances were cheap enough.

GOLFERS SELECTED

Team Hopeful of Humbling McGill, Champions for Last Two Years

TWO-DAY TOURNAMENT

Varsity's 1935 collection of mashie-wielders are putting the final touches to their practice rounds today, in preparation for their annual clash with McGill at Montreal this Friday and Saturday.

With the prospect of a trip to Montreal before them, about thirty or forty hopefuls turned out last Thursday at the course of the Weston Golf and Country Club. The weather conditions were more ideal for slicing than golf, with the result that all the scores were rather high. The twelve low-scorers continued on to the final round at Lambton the following day, and of these Stan Biggs, Murray Cox, and Bill Sutton of Trinity; Whiting Lathrop of S.P.S.; Jack Williams and Macdonald survived, and will represent Varsity. Biggs, Sutton and Lathrop have all had previous experience on the team.

The intercollegiate program calls for singles matches to be played on Friday, with the individual championship also at stake, while the Scotch foursomes take place on Saturday.

McGill have held the team championship for the past two years and from all reports have lined up a strong team again this year, with Frank Corcoran, well-known Ottawa player, as captain. The Varsity aggregation have been working hard all week, however, and can be counted on to put up a good showing.

had a good orchestra, and served beer.

Miss E. Holden, IV Trinity: "It would be a splendid idea. It would fill in the evenings without making it necessary for us to get too many late leaves. The students would meet more people from the other faculties, thus creating a closer bond between them."

Jean Atkinson, III U.C.: "The idea is a very good one. I do not think that the blare and noise caused by a dance of this sort would add very materially to the conglomeration of noises that already permeate the campus in the vicinity of Hoskin Ave."

MARATHON SETS FEATURE
WOMEN'S TENNIS TOURNAMENT

A minor upset occurred in the women's interfaculty tennis tournament when Mary de Wynter, number five on the St. Hilda's team, defeated Jean Atkinson, number three on the U.C. team, 6-3, 6-4. The match became a marathon, and fourteen of the nineteen games went to deuce. Polly Shaw and Mary Gallagher also had a prolonged struggle but Polly steadied down to win by the peculiar score of 6-0, 1-6, 7-5.

Marjorie Mosbaugh took Helen Jolly into camp 6-4, 6-1, without undue difficulty, and Madge Shaw defeated Lillian Karawaska 6-4, 6-1.

Draw for today, third round:

Madge Shaw vs Helen Richardson.
Barbara Caldwell vs Ruby Barrett.
Marjorie Mosbaugh vs Polly Shaw.
Mary de Wynter vs Ellen Wilson.
Gladys Carveth vs Claire Walsh.

Lloyd Thompson's appointment as editor of the Student's Handbook at the University of Manitoba is being questioned on the grounds that he is not a bona-fide student of the university. Thompson held the same position last year, but a new ruling by the U.M.S.U., that only bona-fide students can participate in student activities, has led to the investigation.

VARSLITY STRAW VOTE APPROVED BY STUDENTS to the disturbed condition of the world today." Another had complained that it was a very deplorable state of affairs that so many students would be unable to vote in the general election next Monday because their homes were not in Toronto. The straw vote, he said, would at least show that students are interested in national affairs.

"Student opinions can be very impor-tant. The influence of college students in politics was largely responsible for the overthrow of Tammany Hall in New York city elections two years ago," said H. R. Nevin, III Dentistry student. "I hope that the students take this straw vote seriously," he added.

Miss Monica Reynolds, II Houshold Economics, expressed the opinion that, "The straw vote was a very good idea because 'serve youth' is the cry of nearly every political party involved in this election. By taking a straw vote it may be seen whether the youth are as interested in this political issue as the politicians seem to infer."

R. Handforth, II St. Michael's Col-lege, said, "With ballot boxes and con-venient places the majority of students will vote. The result might have no direct bearing on the general election but it will definitely reveal what the student body think."

FRENCH HOUSE

Dean, Miss McPherson, that the in-stitution was revived this year. In an interview, Mlle. Riese, who is in sole charge of the house, said that the pro-gress in the speaking of French since the beginning of the year is remark-able. There are at present seventeen women from Vic in residence at French House, most of whom are taking Hon-our French. The only qualification, however, is an interest in the French language, and French should be one of the subjects taken at college.

There are no particular rules ex-cept the talking of French in the liv-ing room, when addressing Mlle. Riese and on the lower floors of French House. French conversation is not com-pulsory in the bedrooms. Mlle. Riese says since it is at first a strain on the student to express herself in French. There is a French table for the French House residents at Annesley Hall at dinner. No meals are served at French House, except tea on Sundays. Later, Mlle. Riese hopes to have French con-versation with coffee after dinner at Annesley Hall, where any Victoria stu-dents who are interested may be present.

French House is still not completely organized. Plans for the future include the inviting to tea of the members of the various college French departments. The direct aim of the house is that the students should become familiar with the common phrases of conversational French. It is hoped that it will directly result in an increased fluency in the language, and will thus be of assistance in courses. At present there are from twenty-five to thirty-five French books in the house, a gift of Miss Rowell, Professor of French at Victoria, who retired last year. Mlle. Riese intends also to order French magazines from Paris.

FRENCH WEAKNESS KEY TO SITUATION

Mr. Woodside took his hearers on a rapid trip through all the major Euro-pean countries. As soon as he arrived in Rome he felt the "iron heel" for he was no more than fifteen minutes in the city when he was arrested and had his baggage and passports subjected to a thorough, if completely unintelligent, examination. Though Italian scenery was beautiful, he had "a great desire to get away from the police-ridden country".

After a great deal of difficulty with boats which ran out on him ahead of schedule, and with a multiplicity of visas that he had to obtain from in-efficient officials, Mr. Woodside finally arrived in Russia. Of this country he said, "Although the magnitude of Rus-sian development seizes the imagination one should bear in mind that it has cost, and is costing, millions of lives."

With regard to the condition of Rus-sian youth, the speaker stated that "there are no limits to the opportunities open to those with ability." Young men in Russia, moreover, differ from those in Canada, in that the former "do not go out with girls or do silly things like that". He also had a unique explanation of the lack of unemployment in that country, stating that "it takes three Russians to do one man's job". But the Russians, he hastened to add, are will-ing to learn and can be taught improved methods.

Mr. Woodside brought back a num-ber of interesting tales about conditions in Germany, tending to show that Nazi power is riding for a fall. With regard to military preparations, however, he said, "The German army will be the most remarkable army the world has ever seen."

France was described as being in a perpetual fear of Germany and as at-tempting to tie England down to a military alliance, which England, on her part, is reluctant to make.

England appeared sound, sane and even happy—but would be even happier if the British Isles could be hitched to a boat and anchored out in mid-Atlantic. Canada, however, was, in the speaker's opinion, the best country of all, and he was glad to get back.

Dr. Morgan, who followed Mr. Wood-side, gave a thorough analysis of the economic basis of the Italian crisis. He also mentioned that, in contrast to Mr. Woodside, the only experience he had with the police during his four months' stay in Europe, was that they persisted in lifting their hats to him and his wife.

lin's attitude are, in Dr. Morgan's opinion, threefold. The first is an eco-nomic background of limited and in-ferable land, lack of and poorness of raw materials, a large and rapidly expanding population, and a drastic shortage and decrease in markets. Dr. Morgan made it clear, however, that economic necessity by no means jus-tifies Italy's actions.

The second cause is that Fascism has not enabled Italy to withstand the effects of the depression and has, according to League of Nations statis-tics, given rise to a situation worse than that existing in other countries. A final cause is that he must main-tain his prestige—he must succeed or go under completely.

The speaker stated that if the League (i.e., France and Great Britain) failed to punish Germany this country would demand, in turn, colonies for itself. The Japanese precedent, makes it ap-pear that the League acts only when the interest of its two main members is of sufficient importance to warrant de-cisive action. This fact should not, Dr. Morgan stated to The Varsity follow-ing the talk, constitute a reason for opposing League attempts to prevent Italy from annexing Ethiopia.

Dr. Morgan made it clear that the basic economic problem must be settled in one way or another sooner or later. In the present instance, Mussolini could not stop because he "being a dictator, must save his face—a loss of face in a dictator invariably means a new dic-tator."

The results of the Commerce Club by-elections were announced at the meeting. The successful candidates were—first year representatives—K. H. Rae and M. Brisbin; third year rep-resentative—Saul Wolfe.

that occurred to them. Twenty minutes were allowed for this, and the stories were then collected, a few were read, and constructive criticism was offered.

In the stories read, a great variety of treatment was shown. Some were written from the amusing point of view, with the greater part in dialogue; some were synoptic and others were more serious, with even a note of tragedy. Both the straight narrative and the "tale within a tale" techniques were employed.

Miss Gorham also mentioned the sub-ject of the suggested reform for the Armistice Day Services at the Soldiers' Memorial Tower. These proposed changes would bring a more definite note of peace and remembrance into the service. A show of hands gave a major-ity in favour of this movement.

The next meeting of the Women's Press Club will be on Tuesday, Octo-ber 22nd, when Miss Peggy Ray will speak on "The Short Story".

College-Pro and Con

Recent papers report the suicide of a youth whose parents had insisted upon his attending college when he preferred to devote his earnings to the purchase of an automobile. The impulse which led to the tragedy must be regretted, since the boy in time might have re-alized the wisdom of his parents' de-sire. But the death emphasizes an im-portant point—that college is not an advantage of equal importance to every-one. Dr. Mercer spent some time in Abyssinia in 1929 and 1930, searching for manuscripts in Ethiopian monasteries. While there he made the personal acquaintance of Haile Selassie and other Ethiopian chieftains.

Asked if there was any justification of Italy's stand, Dr. Mercer stated that Italy was in the position of a bully nation fully armed trying to rob a smaller unarmed nation of its independence. "Abyssinia has every right to be considered an autonomous state," he said. "In 1923 Italy insisted that she be admitted to the League of Nations, against the wishes of Great Britain, and it was because of Italy's stand that she was admitted."

"The sympathy of India for Ethiopia rests on a moral basis," said Dr. Mercer. "Italy is committing a moral wrong in robbing Ethiopia of her independence, which appeals especially to the peoples of India. The Indians do not consider themselves black and are Sir John C. McLennan, former head of the Department of Physics at this University, collapsed and died suddenly yesterday on board a train between Paris and Calais.

Since 1932 Sir John had been Professor Emeritus and Visiting Professor of Physics here. He had been connected with the University since 1892, retiring in December 1931, when he was Dean of the School of Graduate Studies, Professor of Physics and Director of the Physical Laboratory. Professor McLennan was widely known throughout the scientific world for his investigations of the new phenomena discovered about the beginning of this century.

This year, in the King's Birthday Honours List, he was made a Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire for "fundamental discoveries in physics and scientific work in peace and war".

He was greatly instrumental in the erection of the Physics Building, which in 1932 became known as the McLennan Laboratory. When the laboratory was constructed Sir John was faced with the choice of embarking on either of two great paths of physical research: the investigation of matter by radioactive disintegration, or by the analysis of light. He chose the latter path and has created here one of the most complete and world-famed laboratories for the investigation of all properties of light, and its relation to the structure of matter.

Aside from his intimate studies of atomic structure, he gained outstanding recognition for identifying the source of a green line in the spectrum of the night sky and the aurora borealis.

Telephone Numbers

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared for the press and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

Paul Robeson is a giant among men, a man who places culture above all else.

He is proud, this huge African, proud of the artistic achievements of his forefathers and he is doing everything in his power to preserve and to enrich this heritage.

You have seen this artist on the stage, heard him on the concert stage, and have watched and listened to him on the screen. His towering height gained him four letters at Rutgers University, on the American gridiron he lives as one of the greatest defensive players ever in the game. As a student he was

Co-eds Disappoint Bureau Operator

"Moaning Low" should have been the Date Bureau operator's theme song last night, as he wandered around the University Press with his chin on his hand, and a puzzled look in his eye.

Yesterday news of the first wholesale order for dates was published, when nine second year metallurgists wrote in asking for nine girls for Friday night. The result—two groups of freshmen who wanted to fill the date, and got in touch with the Date Bureau yesterday.

The Bureau operator thought he was all set, when he suddenly began to think. One group, Whitney Hall freshmen, had promised to leave details and the requisite dimes at the Varsity office

ENROLMENT CUT IN HALF

A storm of controversy is raging in the University of Saskatchewan with the Canadian Officers' Training Corps at its centre as the result of a bitter attack on the C.O.T.C. carried in a recent issue of "The Sheaf", student's newspaper, which claimed the organization as "A School for Murder".

In the first issue of The Sheaf when the University opened, September 25, a front-page editorial by "the staff observer", suggested that the C.O.T.C. had been sailing under false colours and that officials "should come out honestly and state what they are trying to do".

Famous Visiting Missionary

"The modern Christian world must unite or be submerged," said Dr. Wilson Cash of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, yesterday, in an interview with The Varsity. The famous missionary is staying at the home of the Rev. Mr. McElheran, president of Wycliffe College. He just arrived from the International Missionary Council in Massachusetts, and will remain in Toronto until the seventeenth of this month.

Dr. Cash explained further that the present world is facing a serious crisis, and calls on the younger generation to form a united front for the preservation of Christianity. This, he said, was the principal message he had for University students.

This Englishman is a world traveller and general secretary of the largest missionary society in Great Britain. Two years ago he penetrated deep into the Sudan where Christianity had never been known. With financial aid from

Sports Columnist Mars Reputation

For the past few weeks we have watched Mr. Ted Reeve, Telegram sport columnist, do his best to mar a reputation which he has so deservedly acquired. One of the most popular writers of the current crop of sport scribes, Reeve's attitude and comments regarding the University of Toronto football team is nevertheless more than slightly similar to that of a man who has slightly strayed from the path of sportsmanship.

No one doubts Mr. Reeve's ability as a coach. No one doubts his ability as a columnist. But his public do not care to see him use his widely read column to serve his purpose as a coach. Reeve should realize that he has a decidedly unfair advantage over his rival coaches, should he choose to exercise it.

During the campaign last year the Queen's team was beset with injuries. They did, however, win the championship despite this. But for weeks previous to the game Reeve in a genial and courageous manner resigned himself to the inevitable and carried on. And he did it in print. Queen's were the moral champions of last season, regardless of the outcome of the final game.

With the University of Toronto fielding an unusually strong team in this campaign, Mr. Reeve takes pains to point out that there are several St. Mike's men and O.C.E. men on the team. These men belong to faculties in the University. Their presence on the team is no more unusual than that of men from any other faculty. The absence of athletic scholarships at the University of Toronto may render their presence here more unusual than the presence of some other intercollegiate players at other colleges.

The efforts Mr. Reeve has expended to create a false impression regarding the situation here smacks slightly of a pre-season alibi. Could that be so from a sportsman like Teddy Reeve? If so, we are disappointed.

Drive Carefully To Queen's

Here are a few words of advice from the Motor Vehicles Branch to those planning to motor to Kingston for the game with Queen's:

Did you ever stop to consider the similarity between football and driving? Both are dangerous sports which take their toll of injuries annually, but both can be made much safer if everyone abides by the rules and makes sure that both he and his equipment are in perfect condition before going on to the field or highway. What are the attributes of a good football team? Power, condition, accuracy, good timing and team-play. Power to go through when the opportunity arises, condition to resist injuries and to maintain a steady pace from start to finish, accuracy and timing so that the ball carrier is not trying to go through a hole in the line before it has been opened or after it has closed, and team-play, the spirit which makes possible the co-ordination of the various units so that players are in position to run or take passes, so that the ball-carrier is given a fair start toward the opposing line.

Driving needs much the same qualities though their application is somewhat different. First you need power, the power of your motor to move your car, power to start quickly if necessary to avoid an emergency, a reserve of power for climbing hills and to enable your car to travel easily at moderate speeds. Then there is condition. And, like a team, all the units of a vehicle and driver must be in good condition for safety. Good brakes and tires and lights are needed on the vehicle, but above all the driver needs good vision and a clear alert mind. Then we have accuracy and good timing. Have you ever stopped to consider just how much you depend on the co-operation of the other fellow as you drive down the highway? When travelling at even 35 miles per hour you meet another car coming towards you at the same speed you are meeting at a rate of seventy miles per hour. Just as these is a distinction between gentlemen and real gentlemen.

On the front page the same correspondent pointed out that the Emperor was a victim of circumstance under the control of his chieftains. Which of these conflicting reports are we to believe?

Apparently the well-known radio editor of the rival evening paper when he becomes news commentator goes into a trance of sheer jingoism and revels in sabre rattling dialogue, which culminates in enthusiastic flag waving which twenty years ago sent youth hurtling into the jaws of death for their "freedom and liberty". The vast responsibility of the newspapers and the news commentators is never realized until the aftermath of a great epoch when it seems only to have been a means of propaganda of ulterior motives.

By all means we urge loyalty to the Union Jack and recognition of British laws and traditions, but foolhardy bravado may destroy us all. Give us the cold facts and let intelligence be the guide. The most that can be said about the local papers is that cold facts do not increase circulation.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Barrie's amusing piece, "Seven Women" was played yesterday afternoon at the U.C. Players' Guild, directed by Murray Paulin. The situation is the predicament of one Captain Rattray, guest of honour at a dinner party. His host has playfully informed him that there are to be seven women present at the dinner—a politician, a coquette, a mother who is nothing but that, a woman with no sense of humor, one with too much, a widow and a murderess. Confronted by one woman, he has a merry time placing her. It develops that only one woman was expected, a person embodying the qualities of all.

The play was a neat little thing, with gay humour of dialogue. Lucy Jane Grabbell gives an admirable characterization of the woman in the case, subtly, yet clearly and convincingly, she revealed to Captain Rattray and the audience the manifestations of all seven women. The harassed guest was played by Tommy Dale, whose performance, apart from an occasional stiffness, was very good. Arthur Bernstein as the host prone to playing practical jokes, and Margaret Howe, in the role of his wife, provided adequate support. I.G.

At a conference of university deans of men, the representative from the University of Wisconsin claimed that college men are mollycoddled entirely too much. Too many intelligence tests, too many executive committees, and too much counselling, he said.

"Pyjamas can be very beautiful and are perfectly proper under certain circumstances."—Dolores Del Rio.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Frank Lambert

Before we begin, have you voted yet? If not we ask you to be sporting about it and do so as soon as possible.

Today on the back campus the Scarlet and Gold gridders of Victoria clash with U.C. in the opening game of the interfaculty rugby series. For sustained action, and breath-taking thrills, the Mulock Cup series stands out as the blue ribbon affair in interfaculty competition.

Year in and year out, well into the ebbing fall and early throes of winter, the embattled interfaculty gridders strive with might and main to give a new haven of rest to the Mulock Cup.

Although a little early to make predictions, the grid battles in Group 1, composed of St. Michael's, Senior S.P.S., Senior Meds and Dents, defending champions, promises to produce all the requisites of fine football. The "fighting Irish" are sure to be heard from but they are grouped in rather high-class company for their first challenge after a short absence.

Yesterday afternoon before the yawning void of Varsity Stadium, in a history making interfaculty meet, three records were broken and new holders of the Rowell Memorial Cup were enthroned, with U.C. leading O.C.E. by the scant margin of 25-23.

Fine weather and good track conditions prevailed and yet the meet only attracted the attention of 36 paid admissions. Another record?

The outstanding performance of Worrall rates four stars, as the O.C.E. flash clipped 4-5 and 3-10 seconds from the 120 and 220 yard hurdles, scoring new marks of 15.3 and 25.5 respectively. Another mark of twenty-five years standing was shattered by Conway of Trinity, reducing the 880 yards run by 2-5 seconds, establishing a 1.59.8 record.

The sporting event of the week will be the Queen's-Varsity tilt in Kingston, and the news that tickets for the game may be obtained at the Athletic Office should facilitate matters a lot for the ardent Blue and White supporters. Are you listening?

WOMEN'S TENNIS GOES TO FOURTH ROUND

Freshettes Yield Surprise in Interfaculty Tournament

Two upsets were features of yesterday's play in the women's interfaculty tennis tournament when Madge Shaw and Ellen Wilson, members of last year's Varsity team, were defeated by two of the freshettes, Velma Richardson outstaged Madge, and although the latter fought all the way, she could not hold her service in the third set. Polly Shaw played a beautiful game to defeat Ellen Wilson of St. Hilda's, 6-2, 2-6, 7-5. Ruby Barrett of Vic. chalked up two wins, when she advanced through the third and fourth rounds, by defeating Barbara Caldwell of U.C. and Velma Richardson of her own college. Claire Walsh advanced to the quarter-finals with a bye.

Third round results:
Velma Richardson defeated Madge Shaw 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

Ruby Barrett defeated Barbara Caldwell 6-3, 6-0.

Polly Shaw defeated Marjorie Mosbaugh 6-2, 6-3.

Ellen Wilson defeated Mary de Wynter 6-0, 6-3.

Claire Walsh defeated Gladys Carveth 6-4, 6-1.

Ruby Barrett defeated Velma Richardson 6-4, 8-6.

The tennis tournament is almost finished, and the intercollegiate team will soon be picked. It is hoped that no challenge matches will be played next week, as the team will need a few days to practise. A new system will be tried this year. Instead of the four girls on the team all playing singles, and then combining to form two doubles teams, only two girls will play singles, and the other two will be the only doubles team. This will eliminate the possibility of one girl taking the singles crown, and then teaming up to win the doubles too, as Ruth Fishleigh of Queen's did last year. Incidentally, Ruth may be playing for Queen's this year. It has not been ascertained as yet if she is eligible under intercollegiate rules.

Some very fine tennis was played yesterday at the Toronto Club. Polly Shaw was bothered by Marjorie Mosbaugh's two-fisted backhand at first, but steadied down to win the match. She then played her fourth round match and defeated Ellen Wilson of St. Hilda's, to put U.C. in second place on points. Polly is playing beautiful tennis and deserved both her wins. Gladys Carveth, another freshie, put up a good fight against Claire Walsh, but could not take more than five games from the Eastern Canadian junior champion.

Basketball practices are going merrily on. Vic had a good turnout for their practice the other night, with a large number of freshies among their twenty-two enthusiasts. Marian Bernhardt is coaching the girls, and should turn out two good teams. Six of last year's senior squad are back and two on the junior. Their next practice will be tonight from six to seven. The St. Hilda's girls had their second practice last night, and a few more of last year's team were present. The Saints have six of their last year's team back, but Mary Louise Carre, Enid Palmer, and Joyce Kirk are among the missing. However, they have plenty of good material coming along to fill up the gaps, and will put up a good fight to retain the championship, which they have held for the last two years.

LACROSSE LEAGUE DRAWS UP PLANS

Competition for Dafoe Cup Will Commence on November 21st

ELEVEN TEAMS ENTERED

The Interfaculty Lacrosse League is preparing to swing into its fifth season of competition for the Dafoe Cup starting November 21st. Representatives from various faculties met last evening in Hart House to discuss plans for the coming campaign. Mr. McCutcheon, the physical director, presided.

The legislative personnel consists of Dr. Dafoe, Hon. Pres; pres. D. Starr (Meds); vice-pres. J. A. Burgess (Vic); secretary, H. G. Burchell (Trin.), and there also exists a newly elected board of five managers whose capacity is to work with the executive. The five members are: B. Hamilton (S.P.S.), E. Miller (St. Mike's), F. Lankin (Dents), L. McConnell (Forestry), W. Smith (U.C.).

The league consists of eleven teams representing Trinity, Pharmacy, U.C., Dents, Senior School, Junior School, Victoria, Meds, O.C.E., Forestry and St. Mike's, which incidentally is the league's newest addition. All of last year's teams are intact. These teams are entered into three distinct groups. Group 1 includes Trinity, Pharmacy, U.C. and Dents. Group 2 is made up of Senior School, Meds, Victoria and St. Mike's. Junior School, O.C.E. and Forestry constitute the remaining circuit. A schedule will be drawn up at a later date. War will be on from the start for the seizure of the Dafoe Cup. Junior School is the present holder of the cup, which they won last year from Victoria in a gruelling series. Attempts are in progress to arrange games with outside teams for the all-star aggregation to be chosen from the talent which appears in the various faculties. Rochester is already on this schedule and more will be contacted.

RECORDS TUMBLE AT TRACK MEET

University College Wins Club Championship in Close Competition

O.C.E. PLACES SECOND

Records fell at Varsity Stadium yesterday afternoon when U.C. won the interfaculty track meet, aggregating 25 points, while O.C.E. came a good second with 23. Meds, Vic and Trinity came next in line, with S.P.S., last year's winners, tied with St. Mike's for sixth place with 11 points. The weather was ideal, the track good, and the meet was a success from all but the financial point of view, there being only 36 paid admissions.

Worrall, of O.C.E., champion intercollegiate hurdler from McGill, was the sensation of the day, winning individual honours with three firsts and setting two new records in his favourite hurdles, one in the 120 high and the second in the 220 low. He won his third first in the high jump, stepping over the bar in the easiest manner imaginable.

Pocius, of St. Mike's, Varsity's only heavyweight boxer, heaved the discus and javelin farther than anyone else, and placed third in the shot put to finish second with 11 points. Caldwell, of Meds, won both the 100 and 220 yard dashes, closely pursued by Ashenhurst and Harris in both events. Conway, of Trinity, stepped out smartly to take both the quarter and half mile dash. One of the best races of the day was the three-mile run, won by Kibblewhite of Wycliffe, a former Olympic runner, who beat Rankin of U.C. by a narrow margin in the final sprint for the tape, just missing setting a new record for that event. Rankin had previously won the one mile.

O.C.E. won the relay by a wide margin with S.P.S. and Victoria finishing second and third, respectively. Little won a commanding lead for the Teachers, and Worrall, the anchor-man, increased it enormously.

not Christians, and hence there is no racial or religious basis for their sympathies. De Valera has the same feelings, knowing that at some time in the future he may want the same world sympathy for Ireland that is being expressed for Ethiopia."

Mussolini, in Dr. Mercer's opinion, is simply carrying out his dream of recreating the Roman Empire. He is undoubtedly one of the world's greatest men, and having remade Italy and brought her once more into the front rank of the nations of the world, he is trying to make his larger dreams materialize. This is shown, Dr. Mercer said, in the tone and expression of his speeches. Italy is not driven to colonial expansion because of economic reasons, because she now has over 1,000,000 square miles of African territory, most of which is undeveloped.

"France is not to be condemned in refusing to support Britain unequivocally against Italy," said Dr. Mercer. "She wants the unqualified support of Britain against possible aggression, and until she gets this she must make the best of the situation. Lloyd George's view that France is behaving like an opportunist is unjustified."

graduated as "the perfect type of college man" after winning the Phi Beta Kappa key in his junior year.

Robeson, a visitor to Hart House yesterday, addressing a group of students, with the aid of his tremendous personality conveyed to them the reasons for his pride of birth. His love of the culture of his people has led him back to Africa. There he went in search of the roots of that culture and there he learned the basic rhythms of the negro spirituals. In contrast to Ellington and Calloway, the two foremost interpreters of the jazz rhythm, Robeson was not content to take the Americanized form of his art. He went to the source, "and believe me," he said yesterday, "I know some African drummers who make Calloway look like a new-born babe."

The supremacy of European civilization is challenged by this singer. He conceded a technical supremacy but as to the field of culture he believes that Africa has much to offer. Green Pastures he considers valuable because it is based on the negro's life. This play was written by two white men and, though Robeson condemns it as sentimental, he thinks it bears the same relationship to a pure negro form that "Way Down Upon the Swanne River" does to a spiritual.

Robeson's most important contribution to the African culture is in his interpretation of the spiritual. Tonight the songs he will sing will not be the pure negro rhythms, they will be his translation into the American idiom. Herein lies the value of this particular form of art to American civilization. It will influence the American Idiom.

Unfortunately Paul Robeson stands alone, his people want to forget that they are Africans. Their culture is crumbling, especially on this continent, where the negro wants to be an American and does not cherish the idea of remaining a racial minority. But the personality of this man alone, the beauty of his interpretations have done much towards the establishment of African culture and the dissipation of the notion of the "Wild African".

calis, which had puzzled scientists for years, while with the British Admiralty. During the world war, Sir John developed commercial production of helium from Canadian gas wells for war use. This led to the construction of one of the first liquid helium producing plants in the world, here in the University. The low temperatures obtained by this plant led to important discoveries regarding the superconduction of electricity in certain metals and related phenomena.

After his retirement from this University he went to England and there directed an attack against cancer by use of large quantities of radium with marked success.

It is probable that a memorial service will be held Sunday afternoon at Convocation Hall, Dr. H. J. Cody stated last night.

In the current issues of the university newspaper, D. W. Mundell, lieutenant and assistant adjutant of the C.O.T.C. unit, makes a lengthy reply. Lieutenant Mundell charges that the editorial has given rise to misconceptions in its statement that the C.O.T.C. develops a callous and murderous spirit, claiming that knowledge of warfare tends to dampen military ardor. In his rebuttal, in the same issue, Staff Observer suggests that if training for war is a means to peace, universal conscription should be advocated. "We are concerned with the truth that millions of dollars spent by the Department of Defence on C.O.T.C. training, equipping and paying for officials might better be spent on scholarships or other imminent needs," the reply reads.

Registration for the courses reveals that the students at the university are avoiding military training. The enrolment in the C.O.T.C. is down about 50 per cent, while classes in physical instruction, which must be taken if a student does not enter the C.O.T.C., were swamped with entries.

In previous years the students, an impetuous race, were frequently influenced by the military pay attached, to prefer the C.O.T.C. classes to the non-military physical instruction.

Many students will no doubt remember Dr. Cash's last visit to Toronto, two years ago. He speaks particularly of the beauty of our University and the wonderful facilities of Hart House. He is intensely interested in student activities and athletics and is a devotee of rugby and water polo. When asked about Canada, he said that what impressed him most was the comfort of our railroads, which far surpassed that of European trains.

Doctor Cash expects to speak to the students of Wycliffe College this week and preach in several Toronto churches Sunday.

Dinner and speeches concluded, those at the dinner were entertained by Mr. George Patton, well-known in Toronto and particularly in University circles for his dramatic work. Mr. Patton gave several short skits and ended the evening with a humorous lecture on a trip to the tropical valleys of Alaska, for which he was introduced as Sir Hubert Wilkins.

CLUBS TO PROVIDE MUSIC

Voicing protest against the military aspects of the Armistice Day ceremony at the Soldiers' Tower, the Student Christian Movement has approached the Alumni Federation urging that the C.O.T.C. be requested not to parade as a company with military equipment when the ceremony is observed next November 11, it was learned last night.

"We feel the militaristic display at the service is almost contrary to the supposed spirit of the ceremony," Wilfred Smith, member of the S.C.M. committee, stated. "The S.C.M. is taking a decided pacifistic stand on the matter. Our proposals of a change in the service are suggested in order that a more positive note of peace be sounded."

Secondly it was suggested the music for the service be provided by the Carillon in the Soldiers' Tower with the co-operation of University Music and Glee Clubs. If the band must be used, they appear as a University, not as a C.O.T.C. band, the S.C.M. proposals read.

Thirdly, it was urged the service include prayers and hymns of remembrance and for peace. A prayer and several hymns were suggested by the S.C.M. committee in the proposals.

Result of Straw Vote Shatters All Former Charges of Apathy and Radicalism, on the Part of Students at the University of Toronto

APPROXIMATELY 4,000 VOTERS APPEAR AT POLLS

By B. J. McGuire

Undergraduates of the University of Toronto yesterday turned out to record the largest vote that any issue in the history of the University has ever attracted. And they voted Conservative.

Approximately 4,000 students presented themselves yesterday at the polling booths to record the largest vote ever accomplished by any organization at the University of Toronto. The results of yesterday's elections were such as to refute any charges of radicalism or disinterest on the part of the students at this University.

The women of the physiotherapy course, one of the younger courses on the campus, have lately found themselves without a place to roost. On their return to their old haunts in the Medical Building this fall, the physiotherapy students found themselves cast out.

For some time they wandered, homeless, until the other day the University College Women's Union extended an invitation to them, giving them free use of their premises.

Gridiron Stalwarts Clash In Limestone City Battle

Vital Struggle Finds Reeve's Charges Ready for Feud

Varsity Squad not Alarmed at Prospect of Tussle with Tricolours

VETERAN LEADS PLAYERS

By Ab Gratton

Sports Editor, Queen's Journal (Special to The Varsity)

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 9.—With everything pointing to a battle royal at the Richardson Stadium here on Saturday when Queen's and Varsity renew their age-old gridiron feud, Ted Reeve, elongated Tricolour mentor, pronounced his charges as fit and ready for the crucial game.

Coach Reeve drove the team through several stiff workouts during the week and has his stalwarts going at a fast clip. Queen's, who won the championship last year by their superior defensive ability, have added a shifty, speedy attack which only had luck kept from piling up a score at Montreal last week.

The Reeve men are captained by John Wing, a veteran end, who will lead a team of experienced players in quest of their first victory. Eddie Barnabe, drop-kicker de luxe, will do the signal calling and his fellow backfielders will be John Munro, ace punter who will give Bob Isbister a merry battle for the kicking honours; John Edwards, "Curly" Krug, Jack McNichol, Charlie Peck, ex-St. Mike's star, Art Stollery, and Grover Dennis, with Harry Sonshine at flying wing.

Up front a heavier than ever line will present a stonewall defence. Reg Barker and Jack Lewis will handle the snap duties with such outstanding line men as Bob Weir, Marty Jones, Archie Kirkland, Mel Thompson, Abe Zvonkin, Joe McMams and Chuck McLean, to flank them. At outside wing, Captain Wing, Frank Earle, Jim Scott, Mal Bews and Coldfoe will alternate to give Blue and White ball carriers a busy afternoon.

RUGBY TICKETS

Tickets for the Varsity-Queen's game in Kingston tomorrow may be obtained at the Athletic Office, Hart House.

CRUCIAL GAME IN SERIES

By John T. Stubbs

On Saturday Varsity's senior griders face the acid test when they invade the Limestone City in search of their third straight victory of the current season and the leadership of the inter-collegiate union. The Tricolour, still smarting under the defeat handed them by the rising tide of McGill's new-found football prowess, will be out to give the Blue team everything they've got. A defeat for Queen's will mean possible elimination and heavy odds to finish in the play-offs. The game should be one of the most crucial of the schedule. Varsity's team is confident of success. They are of the opinion that while the Queen's line has a possible edge, the Varsity backfield by far surpasses any other in the series and should break up the famed Tricolour defensive tactics that slipped a notch in the game in Montreal last week.

Last week Coulter and Connelly made 252 yards between them running back kicks through the Western team at random. The Tricolour defence may be rated as effective but it will have to be a lot better than last year to stop the running backfield and the forward passing attacks that will be turned on by the Isbister-Coulter-Marks-Connelly combination. Cam Gray's placements have been turning up with increasing frequency this season and last week Barnabe continually failed in this, his favourite pastime.

"Varsity" Integrating Force In University

Yesterday The Varsity held a straw vote on the University campus in which nearly four thousand students polled. Last year the total registration of the University was somewhere in the neighbourhood of the seven thousand mark; thus, allowing for the usual run of illness and other absences, yesterday's vote would seem to show a real co-ordination on the part of the student body.

It was of co-ordination, unification and general fellowship that President Cody spoke when he addressed the members of Hart House committees in the Great Hall on Wednesday night. The President mentioned such forces as the University Band, athletics, and, above all, Hart House, as being among these unifying factors. But probably he left out one of the most important of them all when he failed to mention the student paper, your own Varsity.

The Band, Hart House and athletics in general may serve to bring students of widely scattered units of the University into contact; but it is through The Varsity that this contact is first established, that the undergraduate really maintains his grasp of the fact that he is a member, not of a faculty, a college or a course, but of a vast and wide-spread whole, that very heterogeneous body, the University of Toronto.

President Cody stressed the great importance of the realization of the necessity for intra-University contacts, social, intellectual and athletic. We would like to bring to the notice of the entire student body, even as he did for the Hart House committees, the reality of this great truth.

It is for reasons such as this that The Varsity exists, that we have, from time to time, the straw votes such as that held yesterday. May the students of the University of Toronto realize this and continue to support to their utmost The Varsity and any other such organizations that help to bring their University into a closer organized unit.

French House Re-opens

The article in Wednesday's Varsity stating that after a lapse of three years, Victoria College is re-opening its French House is highly interesting. It is gratifying to know that there is sufficient interest in the language to make such a step practicable and the authorities are to be commended for their action in offering the students an opportunity to become more proficient in speaking the language.

Next to English, French is probably the most popular subject in the Arts curriculum. The majority of those who study French attain by the end of three or four years a fair proficiency in reading and writing the language, but, as a rule, they are woefully weak in conversation. It is a fact of which we should be all the more ashamed as our French-Canadian compatriots in Quebec speak English so well.

Oral instruction is given in most of the French courses, generally one hour a week. This hour is frequently devoted, on the part of the students, to skillfully avoiding any remarks in French beyond a monosyllabic "oui" or "non".

The fact seems to be that many students are down-right lazy about attempting to express themselves in French. They want to be able to speak French well but they are reluctant to make the effort necessary to acquiring a fluent vocabulary. That is where such an institution as a French House is of incalculable value. Definite rules about speaking the language act as a prod to the lazy and self-conscious.

It is to be hoped that the other colleges will consider establishing French residences. With greater facilities for practising conversation it is possible that the French learned in college might stay with us always and not be gradually forgotten after graduation.

French Movies Serve Double Purpose

Next Saturday sees the first showing of the French movies for this season. Dostoevski's Crime et Châtiment, featuring Harry Bauer has been chosen for the initial presentation, to be followed by Louis Hemon's classic Maria Chapdelaine. This latter, filmed in Canada, was last year awarded first prize for photography and gives a splendid impression of French-Canadian life.

Apart from their value as entertainment these French films are of great importance to all students specializing in languages and also to those who take French only as a pass subject. Whether or not they help fluency of speech is a moot question, but certainly they are the most agreeable way yet known of training the ear to French sounds.

The fact that these films are sponsored by the French department is indicative of the value placed upon them as an educational feature. Everyone interested in the French language would be well advised to take advantage of this opportunity to hear French spoken as it is spoken in France.

Are Torontonians Petty?

On Saturday afternoon last we were ashamed to think that we were a member—however insignificant—of the community of Toronto. The thought that we could be placed in the same category as the two hundred odd people who disgraced our city in the Maple Leaf Gardens repels us. We still find difficulty in believing that a city with a population of one million should be as petty as those Torontonians proved themselves. The place, as we have said, was Maple Leaf Gardens. The occasion—an address by Admiral Byrd.

Anyone who has ever gone to a lecture (non universitäts) or to an amateur theatrical performance knows that if he is lucky—very lucky—the speaker commences or the curtain rings up twenty or twenty-five minutes after the scheduled time. Commander Byrd's talk was announced for two-thirty. At two forty-five canned music was still coming over the public address system. Then—several egotistical, self-sufficient young business men began to applaud, to whistle, to stamp their feet.

In a few minutes a large portion of the audience, was emulating them. Like school children at a Saturday matinee in some tiny neighbourhood theatre they clapped and pounded. And what were they waiting for? Some cheap Western serial? Some long-winded political speaker? Not at all. They were waiting to hear from a man who has done more for the world at large than any of them can ever hope to do! Byrd is not a movie star. He is not a movie star. He is not a hockey player. He is not even a six-day bicycle racer. But he is the man who, with others of his kind, risked his life in polar exploration. His name will live long after Mae West and Lionel Conacher and Torchy Peden are forgotten. His tale adds a few more pages to the immortal saga of men like Columbus and Scott, Vespucci and Amundsen. Yet those adult, presumably, normal people sat there and insulted him in a manner only too repellent to anyone with a grain of decency in his system.

"We paid our thirty cents. Darn you, now, hustle and entertain us. After undergoing hardships in Little America come back here and talk to us smart citizens. And don't keep us waiting!" Such cannot be the cry of Canada's greatest English-speaking metropolis! Surely this must be a meeting of a Bowery A.C. or, at best, a political rally in White-chapel.

Commander Byrd had the decency to refrain from commenting on this exhibition of boorishness and disrespect, but we can imagine his impressions of Toronto and thence of Canada. Incidents such as this do not foster international amity and goodwill. Let not Toronto be an agent in justifying the phrase "Those Canucks!" Shall Canada's insignia be Ingratitude, Boorishness and Lack of Taste? We hope not.

By W. A. Crockower

We're going to take this last opportunity of advising those of you who are able to make the trip to Kingston tomorrow not to miss the classic of this season's football games. The Queen's-Varsity tilts are usually the peak of the season and this year seems to be no exception. With Hughie Marks back on the tiring line, Istister kicking as he never kicked before and Connelly and Coulter all set to go it seems to us that Ted Reeve's champions are going to absorb still another beating. The Tricolour crew was a great defensive machine last year and Coach Reeve has added some offensive material to his iron-man squad.
However, we believe that the Blues will have too much power for Reeve's Queennies. For those of you who contemplate taking the Kingston trip—you'll see the Blues come up against the gamest bunch of fighters in the college loop but you'll also see Steve's men emerge victorious.Coach Dawson's Seconds and Coach Graham's Juniors also swing into action to make war complete on all fronts. The Blue Seconds should have no trouble with the Mustang Seconds. Coach Graham is not too sure of his squad as his lads are not as yet a unified machine. The Juniors will meet the Mimico Grads tomorrow on the back campus while the Seconds will play the Purple and White Seconds up at the Varsity Stadium prior to the Argo-Tiger tilt.The announcement which came out of Montreal Wednesday night to the effect that the annual intercollegiate track and field meet to be held in Toronto next Friday has been thrown open to all members of the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union points definitely to the fact that the smaller members of the Union are finally beginning to wage a successful fight for equality. The larger members of the Union have for years answered in the negative all requests for open meets and their recent decision may mean that the barriers will slowly be let down and college sport in Canada will some day assume the picture to be found in our southern neighbour. We think this would be a splendid idea as a conference system in rugby, for example, similar to that used in the United States, would tend to lend more interest to the college football loop, more so than the present out and dried home-and-home series enjoys. At any rate this is something to which we look forward in the near future.The Mulock Cup series was inaugurated last night when U.C. held Victoria to a 1-1 tie. This points to the fact that the interfaculty series this year will be very close and interesting. We hear, on your good authority, that the Meds crews will again bear watching as the versatile Tony Rosso, Argo star, has them going through all kinds of trick plays. We have also learned that the Trinity squad will be a far better than average crew.This morning play for the Rutan Cup, emblematic of intercollegiate golf championship, will get under way at Montreal. The Varsity squad is composed of J. C. Williams, S. Biggs, S. MacDonald, D. W. Lathrop, G. Cox, and S. W. Sutton. The 36 hole individual championship will be decided today and the foursome title tomorrow.Varsity for draw. Everybody plays

All those who want to make the team should be out for this practice.Tomorrow being that day upon which the Blue and White makes its annual pilgrimage to Tricolour town (if the S.O.S. uses this lead too well scream) it occurs to us to relate what has always been one of our favourite anecdotes of Canadian college life.The legend concerns a graduate of the Limestone University whose academic prowess secured for him upon graduation a minor appointment to the faculty of one of the provincial Varsities in the west. Although necessarily an institution of comparatively recent founding, it was not without veneration and its own burden of tradition. In the great hall of the men's residence, hallowed custom decreed that the senior member of the faculty present at each meal should call down the blessing of the Deity on the assembled students at the commencement of the repast, and do his calling in Latin. Nor would any Latin grace suffice; tradition had specified a particular form the incantation should take, the trend of which, so far as the Queen's graduate was concerned, was invariably lost in the depths of the Dean's beard.Conceive then of the Kingstonian's horror to discover, one day along towards the end of the term, that he was the senior member of the faculty in attendance for evening dinner. In fact, he was quite alone at the head table, the entire remainder of the non-resident staff having taken advantage of a long-week-end which, however, scarcely offered sufficient leeway for a return trip to Ontario. Complete realization of his predicament came slowly, and meanwhile the assembled men of the University stood in impatient reverence.
The professor from down east had been appointed as an English instructor and his Latin was admittedly weak beyond hope of ad libbing his way to safety.
Nor did he have a beard.

Voting Students All Go Tory For The Grits a Sorry Story

By R. G. A.

Though students come from far and near

To seek an education,
Their way is fraught with doubt and fear

And many a tribulation.

So sings that son of Champlain, Jelkxat, and if only friend Jelkxat had been on scrutineer duty during The Varsity's straw vote yesterday (Will you take morning shift, 10 to 1, or afternoon 1 to 4—Lectures? What d'ya mean lectures, you'll serve!) or had he perchance been down at the press to take his turn at counting last night, well would he realize how true was his muse.

For instance, high in the headlines must stream the name of Miss J. M. E. Seythes, fourth year Classics at Victoria, whose way was so fraught with doubt and fear that the young lady dunked her ballot in the box, and slipped her registration card in as well. Ah well, these Classics are a law unto themselves. . . . You'll find the card waiting for you at the Vie College office, Miss Seythes, safe and sound. Whole'er their party trend, they know, When in another section, In voteless state they must forgo The general election.

Yes, and a whole boxful of them (collected from various polls of course) did go voteless, in spite of the special opportunity afforded by The Varsity poll. Into the discard went ballots from egotists who signed their names; others got excited and wrote in a party leader's name ("Mackenzie King X", frzample), and some were so quick to fold their ballots and pop 'em in the box that their inky Xs blotted and read double. No, the returning officers weren't that tight.

Too bad it was that no provision had been made for a separate poll for Emmanuel. As the Vic ballots flooded CCFwards the tabulating engineers roughly estimated that the few young United theologs who didn't vote CCF chalked up their support for Mr. Stevens or Mr. Buck. So much so that Conservative Emmanuel votes were viewed with suspicion!

But students, hark! and lend your sight And rouse you from your pollsters.

In protestation fair and right Come mark the Chaffish Ballots!

And did they, friend Jelkxat, 4,000 of them, from Pharmacy on the south-east to O.C.E. on the north,—those coy student teachers who shied from having their individual poll declared for fear school boards aren't fussy about radical demagogues!

And when evening shadowed round, the soft refrain of plopping ballots found its echo in the shrill jangling of the telephone. "I'm very sorry, but we don't know yet. Yes, about eleven thirty!" . . . (Terrible to kid 'em, but we can't let the morning papers get it in time for the newscast!) . . . "Sorry, read it in The Varsity tomorrow!" . . . "Sorry—" . . . "Say, has anybody got a pair of wire cutters fer this telephone?!"

Varsity. Less than an hour after voting began the supply of ballots was exhausted. So began the largest vote in the history of the University of Toronto.

St. Michael's College was the only faculty to give the Liberals a definite majority, although Pharmacy and Household Science both gave Liberalism a slight margin. Trinity College was the most staunchly Conservative, although a slight margin was accorded the Conservatives in all but three faculties.

Social Credit and Communist, two parties whose influence was reputed to be great around the University, drew only 190 votes between them. Of these the Social Crediters attracted only 62 supporters while the Communists recorded 128 followers.

STRAW VOTE DECIDED SUCCESS IS PROFESSORIAL OPINION

Widespread Opinion Among Faculty on Results of Straw Vote

TAKEN SERIOUSLY

Many Lecturers Expected Larger Radical Element

Widespread diversity of opinion was evoked from the faculty when questioned by The Varsity on the results of the straw vote. Some were elated at the outcome of the balloting; others were dissatisfied. Several suggested that a tabulation by years instead of by colleges would have yielded more significant results. All were unanimous in their praise of The Varsity for carrying off successfully a first class news feature, and of the response of the student body, which dispelled any beliefs in scholastic apathy to politics. There were several comments on the slightly radical showing made by Victoria.

Brig-Gen. C. H. Mitchell, Dean of the Faculty of Engineering, expressed the prevailing sentiment of those who were pleased with the outcome. "The straw vote was indeed a success," the Dean said. "The comprehensive results show that the students took the thing seriously. Two-thirds of the entire engineering student body, for instance, cast a vote, a higher percentage than is generally encountered in the electorate at large. I clipped the table out of The Varsity and took it to one of the important downtown clubs. People there were more than curious to see the results." (Continued on Page 4)

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Geneva—The first concrete step in the economic isolation of Italy was taken yesterday with the approval of a scheme for a financial blockade of that country by the financial sanctions committee of the League of Nations. The plan calls for the cessation of all loans and credits to Italy, and becomes effective when accepted by the general committee on which are represented 52 member states.

Rome—The Italian attitude towards League sanctions remains one of anger and defiance. England is charged in the Giornale d'Italia, a paper usually indicative of Il Duce's opinions, with intentions to foment a general European conflict. Official sources stated that Italy is prepared for every eventuality and fears neither economic nor military sanctions.

Addis Ababa—Authorities await fresh Italian onslaughts on all sides before the putting into effect of League sanctions. The general population has been encouraged by the reported recapture of Adowa and the belief that Italian armies are fleeing before the forces of Ras Siyoun.

Ottawa—892 candidates are today seeking election to the 245 seats available in the House of Commons. All campaigning ended Saturday night.

Moscow—Clashes between frontier guards on the Russo-Japanese border threatens to precipitate a war between the two countries, despite the fact that officials of both minimized the importance of the incidents.

ALUMNI DIRECTORS DEFEND CEREMONY

Believe C.O.T.C. should be Represented at Armistice Celebrations

ANSWER TO PETITION

Members of the Alumni Federation board of directors were almost unanimous in their defence of the present nature of the Remembrance Day ceremony. When interviewed on their reactions to the petition circulated by the S.C.M. which deplored the military nature of the ceremony, fifteen student organizations had already endorsed the petition. The directors were of the opinion that the ceremony was most fitting for the occasion, and in no way offensive to non-militarists.

Mr. E. A. MacDonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the S.A.C., said that although the S.C.M. had some good suggestions, it was rather an inopportune time to raise such an objection, and (Continued on Page 4)

"CANADA IS AS PAGAN AS AFRICA," MISS WRONG

Great Missionary Problem is Caused by Effect of Westernization

The application of the essentials of Christianity to modern problems here and in Africa was discussed by Miss Margaret Wrong, speaking to members of the Student Christian Movement at a joint meeting in the Women's Union on Sunday afternoon. Miss Wrong, daughter of Emeritus Professor G. M. Wrong and former Dean of Women at University College, is at present one of the secretaries of the World Student Christian Federation and author of "The Land and Life of Africa".

Speaking of Christian communities here and in Africa, she remarked that their basic essentials were the same. "Our communities are just as pagan as any in Africa," she said. Education in village schools in Africa and in the Canadian Mission field is very similar, she continued, and the fear of spirits and witchcraft among the African tribes corresponds to our fear of economic insecurity and disorder.

Miss Wrong described the Student Christian Movement as "a real student, international fellowship," and told of connections formed through it between people of all races and denominations in Africa.

Pervaded throughout with the dignity and nobility that characterized his life, the memorial service for Sir John C. The service was chosen with particular appropriateness. It was conducted by Dr. Stuart Parker. Sir Robert Falconer, former President of the University, read the lesson and President the Rev. H. J. In speaking of the present international situation in relation to world Christianity, Dr. Cash showed how such countries as Germany, Russia, Italy, Turkey, Persia and China, were among those aiming to make the next generation materialistic, secular and godless (Continued on Page 4)

376 PHARMACY HOLDS ELECTION OF OFFICERS

Takes Place at the Most Enthusiastic Meeting in Years

With more enthusiasm and interest than has been manifested for several years, officers and class committee for the year 376 were chosen on Friday afternoon. Every office with the exception of secretary was closely contested, in the case of the vice-president's chair three ballots were necessary before Jack Wade was returned victor over Muir McDonald, last year's vice-president, and Geoff. Wright. A field of 12 sought the five positions on the committee.

Election Results

As The Varsity does not finally go to press till early in the morning, tomorrow's edition will be able to carry later election returns than any other paper in Canada.

HOLLYWOOD SATIRE AT CAMPUS THEATRE

Nancy Pyper Tries to Get Students Interested in H. H. Theatre

STUDENT NIGHT

To bring the students back to Hart House Theatre; that is the object of Nancy Pyper, who is directing the theatre's production this season. Her choice of Moss Hart and George Kaufman's satire on Hollywood, "Once in a Lifetime" is the first step in her campaign. It is a play that will capture the applause of the undergraduate.

Mrs. Pyper's second move is an attempt to secure an all student audience for at least one performance of the play. To this end she has set aside Wednesday evening as Students' Night when only undergraduates will be admitted to the theatre. It is hoped that this completely student house will bring to Hart House Theatre an atmosphere that has been missing for too long a time.

This Wednesday night there will be many changes in the theatre from which the undergraduates have drifted away. There will be none of that formality that entered the theatre. Instead, gaiety, in the clever lines of the play, in the language bar and in the audience are all the elements of a new Hart House Theatre.

FRENCH SOCIETY MEETING ON TUESDAY EVENING

Short Talk by Monsieur Laflamme, and Clever Farce

The French Society of University College will hold its first meeting of the year in the Women's Union tomorrow night at 8.15. The highlights of the program will be a short talk by the honorary president, M. Laflamme, and Tristram Bernard's clever farce, "Antoinette on Le Retour du Marquis". French songs, election of the first year representative and a French conversational half hour will complete the program which will be followed by dancing to Craig Lindsay's "Canadian Ambassadors". All U.C. students interested in French are cordially invited.

Tricolour Gets Moral Victory But Intermediates Victorious

Barry Gray Stars for Blues -as Intermediates Win from Western

FINAL SCORE 30-5

Varsity intermediate gridders knocked off their second straight triumph of the football season by smashing Western Seconds 30-5 at Varsity Stadium on Saturday. Starting off slowly they rapidly gathered momentum and the end of the game saw the Purple and White crew smothered under an avalanche of dazzling end runs, powerful plunges and accurate tosses.

A single by Ripley started the scoring for Varsity. Van Allen blocked a kick for a Varsity major which Gray converted. Western broke into the scoring column when Gargan took a nice pass to romp over the Varsity line. First quarter, Varsity 7, Western 5.

Barry Gray, brilliant blue quarter, lifted a nice placement to open the second stanza. Ted Jarvis ploughed through the centre for another Varsity touch, Gray converting. Half time Varsity 16, Western 5.

Ripley kicked a forty yard single to add to the Blue total. Billy Mustard, diminutive quarterback, turned in several (Continued on Page 3)

SAINTLY SINNERS DEBATE DARINGLY

"Resolved that Woman is as yet Incapable of Friendship"

MOTION DEFEATED

"Resolved that woman is as yet incapable of friendship," was the subject of a lively debate held by the Trinity College Literary Institute at an open meeting with St. Hilda's on Friday evening.

W. H. Arison, leader of the affirmative, stated first that he did not wish to overstep the bounds of rigid Victorian morality and virgin delicacy.

Friendship, he continued, is different from love and passions, and also from acquaintance. Woman uses her men acquaintances as a means to an end—usually a week-end.

The "as yet" part of the resolution hints that woman may develop friendship. It brings to the fore that oft (Continued on Page 4)

Roughest Play Seen in Many Years Features Thrilling Contest

ISBISTER OUTKICKED

By George C. Vair

Kingston, Oct. 12.—Costly failures to score by both teams featured the thrilling moments of the important senior grid fixture staged at Richardson Stadium in Kingston Saturday when Queen's and Varsity played to a 2-2 tie. The dying moments of the game saw Varsity in the driver's seat but the consistent kicking defence of Munro prevented the Tricolour from suffering their second straight defeat of the series.

Early in the second quarter Queen's tacklers started their campaign meant to pound the Varsity backs into submission and a continual barrage of the roughest play seen in a college game for many years lasted until the final whistle with both teams taking it and handing it out at every opportunity.

When the blue and white line failed to give Isbister protection the Queen's tacklers continued to rush him, hampering his effectiveness in kicking. Consequently his yardage was bettered by that of Munro, who averaged 48 yards to 46 by Isbister. Two Varsity kicks went for 18 and 20 yards, the first being partially blocked and the second wide out and out of touch.

In the first half Varsity had the best of the play, moving the sticks nine times to once by the Revereens. Valeriotte was responsible for four first (Continued on Page 3)

THERAPISTS GIVEN U.C. HEADQUARTERS

All Arrangements Delayed by the Lack of Workmen

ENROLMENT GREATER

"It is remarkable, in so large an institution, that space should be at a premium," said W. J. Dunlop, when questioned on Saturday as to the provision of a permanent resting place for the wandering physiotherapists, "yet this is the case. However, arrangements have been made to provide a common room, and it is expected to be ready in a few days."

Mr. Dunlop stated that the room next to Room 52L in U.C. (the occupational therapy workshop) is being prepared as official headquarters for the girls in both occupational and physiotherapy. Arrangements for this, he explained, were made a month ago, but, owing to the fact that no workmen have recently been available to fix the lights and paint the walls of the therapists' new abode, the girls will not be able to take possession for a few days.

When questioned as to what the normal faculty had used for a common room in the past, Mr. Dunlop said that, at various times, they had used the occupational therapy workshop and the Margaret Eaton School. In one year, when only seven girls were enrolled in the course, the women's medical common room had been open to them, but the increased numbers enrolled this year had made this impossible. It was because of this large increase, he said, that it had become necessary to establish a separate and permanent "home" for the physiotherapy women.

Lost Art of Drama Revived

Maxwell Anderson, one of our lesser-known dramatists, has written a new play. That is not a startling fact until it is discovered that he has written it in verse, and that it is not an historical play, or a romantic treatment of a long past subject, but a drama with its plot taken from a situation which actually happened within the last ten years.

Are we to expect that a revival of the lost art of poetical drama is heralded by this presumptuous attempt? If we are to take Mr. Anderson's word, his play in verse is but the first of a whole cycle of verse plays which will renew the splendour of the Elizabethan drama, and lend it the richness of the long years of experience in the theatre which the dramatist may now turn to his own uses.

The play itself, Winterset, is the story of a murder in the dismal dirty area of the East River in New York, a subject which does not lend itself very readily to poetic treatment. Yet Mr. Anderson's effort is by no means weak or ineffectual. On the contrary, with Winterset, he has shown that poetic drama as a medium for self-expression is one of the most powerful of the art forms, and that its resources have yet to be tapped.

In a preface to the published play, Mr. Anderson rightly points out that the drab realism of the modern journalistic drama and its neglect of the spiritual life of the people it tells about is becoming a little old and worn. The way of drama in the future lies not so much in social reform in propaganda, and in social comment, but rather in the universals once more—"It is incumbent on the dramatist to be a poet, and incumbent on the poet to be a prophet, dreamer and interpreter of the racial dream".

Synge, O'Neill and O'Casey have certainly done a little spade-work in this movement of which Anderson now speaks. But the poetry inherent in the more profound of their lines is not yet of the calibre recommended by Mr. Anderson. He will be content with nothing less than drama written in the poetic form with due deference to rhythm and metre, since he claims that the form of the poetry has a very great deal to do with the content.

We read of Winterset with interest, hoping that Maxwell Anderson is right, and half suspecting that he is; perhaps we may look forward to a period in the drama when the poets will supercede the journalists, and the wisecrack will retreat before the rhymed couplet.

Interest in Elections

Today the people of Canada go to the polls to elect members of the government who will be their representatives in parliament for the next five years. This was not always the privilege of the citizens. For centuries they had their government thrust upon them. This they deemed an undesirable situation so they began campaigning for the right to do their own selecting of their governing bodies. They were successful in this after years of costly effort. That was many years ago. Now they take this situation for granted. In fact the number who will vote today will be only a percentage of the voting public.

This apathy on the part of the public, while a very undesirable one, results partly from the fact that there is an element of discontent and distrust growing up among the public with regard to the governing bodies. Many people have arrived at the stage where they regard one political party just a few degrees worse for the health of the country than the other. Political scandals have in some respects merited this. The mad struggle for material goods does not make for honest officials. And honest officials are the only ones which retain the regard of their fellow country man. In some ways the party which adopts this attitude is being slightly more reasonable than the Canadian citizen who is just too lazy and indifferent to take any interest in what goes on at the head of the country.

One of the things which tends more than anything else to make the men in charge follow the dictates of their conscience, is the close scrutiny of the electorate. And the electorate who refuse to interest themselves in political activities concerning themselves make very poor scrutineers. The result is that once firmly esconced in a representative seat the political heads have a chance to become lax in regard to the administration in the best interests of the public. The person who merely complains and then refuses to exert himself to remedy the situation is underserving of consideration.

The instances of the political heads being untrue to people they represent is fortunately rare. Canadian politics have been relatively free from scandal. This does not, however, absolve the electorate from any responsibility. Only an intelligent and actively interested electorate can produce the best available in the matter of government. It is a responsibility upon the electorate to be active and interested. The way to make that interest manifest is to vote on election day. And vote intelligently. This is the only manner in which democracy can hope to function adequately.

Armistice Day and The C.O.T.C.

The Canadian Officers' Training Corps has frequently been regarded with suspicion, more particularly during the last few years since peace movements have become rampant on the campus. The latest development is that the Student Christian Movement is protesting against any parade by the C.O.T.C. at the Armistice Day service. Their contention is that a militaristic display is contrary to the supposed spirit of the ceremony.

This seems to be an extremely narrow-minded viewpoint. The spirit of the ceremony is surely one of grateful recognition of the sacrifice made by those who fell in the Great War. Who should appreciate that sacrifice more than those who are most likely to suffer the same fate in the event of another war? To our mind an Armistice service would lose much of its significance were there no soldiers present to remind us of the last war and to make us hope that they will never be called upon to fight again.

One fact the pacifists are inclined to forget is that soldiers do not cause wars. If there is another war the soldiers, not the pacifists, will be the first to perish. It would be more to the point if the peace-makers would transfer their animosity to the real culprits—those who, by manufacturing munitions, or by other means, make great fortunes from wars.

The University of Saskatchewan's student newspaper, "The Sheaf", has been bitterly attacking the C.O.T.C., calling it a "school for murder". We imagine that if it came to a case of murdering or being murdered even the editor of "The Sheaf" would prefer to murder. And that is a very real possibility. War may be inevitable. If it comes are our pacifist friends going to calmly fold their hands and let a foreign power assume control of the country? Of course not. Even the most pacifistic individual will fight in self-preservation.

Here then lies the value of the C.O.T.C. Far from indicating that the government or the C.O.T.C. itself desires war, the organization of some kind of military training merely indicates a desire to be able to put up an adequate defense in case of necessity. "Be prepared for any emergency" is a good motto.

Nobody, with the exception of the profiteers mentioned above and the misguided few who think that a war would restore economic prosperity, least of all the man who is going to be the first rifle target, wants war. But some people wish to be given a fighting chance if war does come. The idea that banishing soldiers from the land will insure perpetual peace is a fallacy.

It is a strangely peculiar aspect of modern intellectual progress that the Baer-Louis fight gate brought in the same amount that it takes to run this university of 5,500 students for 12 months, including all salaries and operating expenses.—Oklahoma Daily.

Let's Go Places

Fun and games.

Last Wednesday evening a scattering of the local gentry gathered in the round room at Diana's on Bloor Street to attend the introduction of one of the brightest entertainment ideas to appear in the University vicinity for many a year. Dress was formal, the atmosphere warmly informal, with a new high for enjoyment being chalked up early in the proceedings and maintained all night.

Hal Taylor, warmly supported by such local musical notables as Arch Crossley, Lloyd Kerr, Ken Houston and Bill Green, were responsible for some of the most danceable tunes it has been our good fortune to encounter. With their musical clowning the local five supplied among many other notes exactly the right one of spontaneity to ensure the liveliness of the proceedings.

One interesting feature is the "admission by invitation only", which, with said invitations freely available to all familiar faces about Varsity's favourite cooking spot, merely assures you of friendly company for the evening. Most delightful of all about "Uncle Tom" Thomas' party at Diana's were the financial details. For the same sum usually demanded by local dance spots a full course supper is served.

The Varsity's editorial plea for reasonable entertainment facilities has in great part been answered by the happy thought which has thus blossomed forth. Intended as a weekly affair, announcement of "Uncle Tom's" next formal shindig will be released very shortly. R.G.A.

The glamorous days of the Klondike gold rush live again in the "Call of the Wild", showing at Loew's this week. Clark Gable, Loretta Young and Jack Oakie are billed as the stars but the honours for the most interesting performance go to Buck, a huge St. Bernard, who forms almost the only connecting link between the picture and Jack London's novel of the same name on which the cinema is supposedly based.

Impressionable women-folk who think Clark is the Great Gable will like this show no end as Clark is adorably rough. (Continued on Page 4)

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Promenade Concert

It is very seldom that Torontonians have the opportunity of hearing music as it was played by Reginald Stewart on Saturday evening last. The programme was very attractively arranged with a well-balanced group of selections which afforded the pianist the chance to display his skill in all manner of technique and interpretations.

It was perhaps the best of any of the recitals given in Toronto by Mr. Stewart, not only were the acoustics as good as the regular concert halls, but the playing itself rose to great heights. After his successes with the Prom symphonies Reginald Stewart has become quite at home in the Arena.

In expression and tone Mr. Stewart gave an excellent rendition of the first movement of the Moonlight Sonata and interpreted the last movement with remarkable clarity and skill.

Other numbers included Rubenstein's Staccato Etude exhibiting great technical ability as well as a fine sense of touch which is one of the outstanding merits of Mr. Stewart's performance. This same characteristic was evidenced in such numbers as Chopin's Berceuse and also in the selection Un Sospiro from Liszt.

This recital was indeed but another which proved the capacity of Mr. Stewart as an all round performer capable of interpreting his selections with a great deal of skill and expression and one who leaves the impression (Continued on Page 4)

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Orchids and bouquets to Claire Walsh, the new Varsity tennis champion. She and Ruby Barrett fought it out Saturday morning, and Claire came out on top. In our opinion she was lucky to do so, because for a while it was nip and tuck. Ruby put up a grand fight, and made Claire display her best tennis. The final score was 5-7, 11-9, 6-1. Most of the game was played from the baselines, with Claire getting not a few points from tricky cross-court drives. She certainly used her head, and deserves her win.

The team remains the same as it was last week. Gladys Carvill of St. Hilda's challenged Velma Richardson of Vic, but through she extended Velma to three sets, she was unable to take her. The question now is which of the girls will combine to form the doubles team. Steady practice will be necessary before the team leaves for London on Thursday. They will be playing on cement courts up there, and the balls bounce higher than they do on the clay. The boys on last year's intermediate team have been offering free advice, and their chief recommendation is two pairs of socks.

eral dashes and on a beautiful lateral pass from Gray, skirted the Western end for a score, Gray converting. Three quarter score Varsity 23, Western 5.

The magnificent work of the Varsity backfield which ran and plunged as though inspired, was partially neutralized by the lofty hosts of Farrel for Western. Gray tore off twenty five yards after taking a 15 yard toss from Ripley. An attempted Blue placement went wide for a rouge. Mustard and Gray duplicated their former performance on a fast breaking end run and a wide lateral pass which saw Mustard gather in his second try of the day. Gray again converted. Final score, Varsity 30, Western 5.

Varsity: Warren, Ripley, Tafts, Jarvis, Gray, Jacobs, Beatty, Gibson, Bridle, Van Allen, Shuken, Powell, Mustard, Nally, Willoughby, Sale, Boyle, Stringer, Scott.

VARSITY RUGGERITES IN DRAW WITH IRISH

3-3 Score at Close of Exciting Game on the Back Campus

The Varsity rugby team and the Toronto Irish staged an exciting 3-3 tie game on the back campus in an exhibition game Saturday. While the Blue team had most of the play, the Irish with their dribbling rushes, threatened to score more than once and almost succeeded in humbling the unconquered Varsity squad.

The first score went to Varsity when Proust plunged over from a loose scrimmage. Play was even until the Irish scored on a penalty kick from the 30 yard mark.

downs for Varsity while Isbister performed brilliantly, making 17 yards on three successive plunges. Varsity's first point came in the first quarter on a well-earned forward pass, Coulter-Lynch for 20 yards, Isbister kicking to the dead line. Stevens' squad made it 2-0 in the second quarter on a smartly executed series of plays that baffled the Tricolour defensive. Valeriote and Connelly moved the sticks twice to put the ball on Queen's 15 yard line. Then a frustrated end run was followed by an onside kick taken by Krug who was rouged for the point. In the same quarter the Blues got possession on Queen's 32 when Edwards fumbled with Holden falling on it. Two plays took the ball to Queen's 4 when Coulter sneaked through the centre for 12 and Connelly ran it around the end for the rest. Three plunges by the Blues failed to pierce the Tricolour defence.

Just before half time Isbister was handed a high snap which was secured by Dafeo on Varsity's 27. Munro immediately hoisted it to the deadline for Queen's first score, to make it 2-1.

A strong wind gave Queen's an advantage in the third quarter that resulted in two attempted placements by Wing and Barnabe, both of which failed to gain the desired three points. The second attempt went for a point to the deadline. Both were made possible by Isbister's breaks, the first when the Blues fumbled and Barker recovered and the second when Valeriote was penalized 25 yards for retaliating at Zvonkin. Injuries held up the game every few minutes in the third quarter with most of the casualties on the Varsity team. A. Williams faced a severe grueling throughout the game but had his ankle twisted seriously, forcing his retirement. T. Williams replaced him at snap.

The last quarter saw Varsity with the wind at their backs but the Blue tacklers proved too slow to catch the Queen's receivers for the necessary winning point. Connelly ran the ball from centre field to Queen's 25 but Isbister's kick was run out by Krug 30 yards to the 25 again after receiving the short punt five yards behind his own line. A grim series of exchanges ended with Varsity deep in the Queen's territory with only a few minutes left to play. The tension was nerve wracking as Isbister hoisted to Munro who returned it to Coulter at Queen's 30. Isbister again kicked on the first down to Munro who hoisted it back to the mulling mob of Blues, one of whom was nailed as the final whistle blew.

Varsity: Valeriote, Marks, Connelly, Isbister, Coulter, A. Williams, T. Williams, Witzel, Greco, Oakley, Holden, Burke; subs: C. Gray, Edwards, Weber, Kuntz, Casson, Miller, B. Gray, MacLachlan, Buck, Lynch.

Queen's: Sonshine, Krug, Munro, Edwards, Barnabe, Barker, Peck, Weir, Jones, Zvonkin, McManus, Wing; subs: McNichol, Earl, Dafeo, Lewis, Kirkland, Dennis, Thompson.

Officials: Consiglio, Mungovan, and Sutton.

Varsity then pressed hard and succeeded in crossing the Irish goal line only to be called back for being offside. The Irish line was again in danger when full time was called. For the Irish Sanderson, Boswell and Reynolds played well while Williams and Young made long gains for the Blue and White.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George C. Vair

Varsity has a new set of sweaters on order this week. The bill should be forwarded to the Queen's Athletic Association. Connelly's sweater with the number 11 was replaced by Miller's garment, number 22. The result was twice as much vitality in Connelly and double the dose handed out by Sonshine and Co. Don't think all the medicine was dished up by Sonshine. The Toronto lads gave him more than he wanted but the plucky Queen's flying wing stayed in the fight until the last whistle. Zvonkin's lot was not so fortunate. His bad leg was aggravated continually under the heavy going, causing his exit on two occasions, the second one for good until next week-end.

That game in Kingston was 60 minutes of the roughest tea party ever refereed (?) by intercollegiate officials in many a year. Just take a look at the penalties and you own your own thinking. (This scribe had difficulties doing his own.) Queen's lost 80 yards for their transgressions to Varsity's 40.

With the odds against them Queen's gave Varsity plenty to think about by the time the battle was over. That two-all tie puts Varsity in second place, Queen's in third position and McGill leading the race for the first time in several years. This coming Saturday will probably see Varsity out in front or tied with Queen's on the second rung of the ladder. The Redmen will have something to say but it is hoped here that their argument won't be as convincing as Varsity's.

Queen's failure to send the pigskin sailing between the posts for those envied placements on two occasions spelt their doom as far as winning the game went. Varsity's failure to make four yards in three downs when they were in possession on Queen's 4 yard line made the above answer ditto! The obvious plays, as far as the Tricolour players were concerned, were attempted. Result—no score. Had Varsity noticed that Munro was the only player not in the line for Queen's on those three plays, an easy forward pass across the short end on a fake end run to the left might have made five points look exceptionally easy. Now don't call us a grandstand quarterback, PLEASE!

TRINITY OUTPINTS S.P.S. IN MULOCK CUP GAME

Red and Black Team Victorious Over School Juniors by a Score of 6-5

Hostilities were begun in Group III of the interfaculty rugby series Friday night when Trinity tangled with S.P.S. juniors on the Trinity field, with the former coming out on the long end of a 6-5 score.

School started off strongly by snaring a Trinity forward, and after failing to make yards in two plunges, put over a nice placement. A few minutes later A'Court booted a single, to make the half-time score 3-1.

Trinity showed to greater advantage in the second half, scoring a touchdown on an end run, Ruddock to Owen to A'Court. S.P.S., headed by Galway, battled strongly and were rewarded with two more singles, but were unable to stand the pace, leaving the Red and Black victors by one point.

A six-inch rat crawling between the terminals of a 2300-volt power line shorted the lighting system at Oldham Agricultural College, causing the destruction of three switchboards by fire and throwing the campus into darkness for several hours.

SCHOOL SENIORS, MEDS ATTAIN SCORELESS TIE

Both Teams Show Lack of Finish; Engineers Miss Chances

Butch Alison's S.P.S. seniors held Tony Rosso's Senior Meds to a nothing all tie on Friday afternoon in the second game of the Mulock Cup interfaculty rugby series. The game was played under very unfavourable conditions, which caused numerous fumbles, blocked kicks and general loose play.

The Engineers were presented with a glorious opportunity to win the game in the last minute when the Meds backfield fumbled a kick on their own twenty-five yard line. School lined up quickly for a kick formation but Meds' charging line broke through to block the kick. A wild scramble ensued in which Meds recovered to end the game.

The teams battled for the first three periods with Meds heavier line holding a slight advantage over their traditional rivals. It was a typical early season game with both teams showing a decided lack of finish.

SIR JOHN McLENNAN HAS MEMORIAL SERVICE
affection and esteem in which the late Professor McLennan was held.

Dr. Cody enumerated the contributions made to the University of Toronto and to mankind as a whole in the deceased's capacity as an alumnus of the Faculty of Mathematics and Physics, and later as a brilliant scientist, whose sudden death came as a profound shock to both Canadian and English friends.

The late Sir John C. McLennan was born in the county of Oxford of Scottish parents. His education was continued at Ingersoll and later at the University of Toronto, for which he prepared by several years of teaching at Stratford Collegiate. In 1892 he graduated from the honour course in Physics. After an educational pilgrimage to Cambridge, Professor McLennan returned to the University and rose from assistant demonstrator to full professorship in Physics. His work was recognized by a Fellowship in the Royal Society, and a knighthood by his King.

President Cody then continued to tell of the great part played by the deceased in the building of Convocation Hall, and also characterized him as the embodiment of energy in the group of alumni of the University, whose work was the diffusion of good-will towards people of the province. "If you are looking for his monument, look about you," remarked President Cody.

In conclusion, Sir John McLennan's great contributions to the realm of research in the isolation of the cosmic rays, in studying low temperature activity, in the extraction of helium from natural gas and most especially in the field of x-ray and radium treatment for cancer, to which committee he was appointed in 1931, were cited.

quoted expression, "Faith, Hope and Charity, and the greatest of these is Hope."

Miss E. Holden, for the negative side, said that man's passion prevented him from thinking of platonic friendship. It is the girl with the most sex-appeal you want, and in spite of the interjection of "sour grapes" by a heckler, she went on to show the true friendships of men and women in the past.

Miss R. Cochran urged that friendship between woman and woman was not sincere and J. H. H. Dewey attempted to illustrate true friendship between woman and woman.

The motion was defeated by a small majority.

STRAW VOTE IS SUCCESS SAY FACULTY MEMBERS

sults. They were genuinely interested Above all, the vote destroyed the commonly held belief that students of the University are inclined to be radical. Mr. A. F. W. Plumtree of the Department of Economics, expressed satisfaction over the Conservative victory, which was not to be considered surprising. Bennett's personality and speeches had much to do with the outcome, Mr. Plumtree thought. Certainly the relative insignificance of the radical vote could be partly accounted for by the premier's radical utterances of the past year. The C.C.F. would undoubtedly have fared better, if the vote had been held a year ago.

A slightly different note was struck by Professor Chester Martin, head of the Department of History. "The vote shows once and for all," he contended, "that the University of Toronto is Canada-minded and not Toronto-centric, as it has so often been accused of being. Every political party and every section of Canada were well represented in the voting. The University has finally refuted the charge of localism."

E. W. Macdonald, Professor of Philosophy in U.C., was uncertain whether or not to accept the results complacently. "I haven't made up my mind about this election," he said. "But I certainly expected a larger vote to be cast for the radical parties."

Professor E. J. Urwick, head of the Department of Sociology, likewise anticipated a stronger radical showing. He believed that a good third of the votes were cast not after reflection, but as a result of the conventions of the classes to which the voters belonged, pointing especially to St. Michael's and Trinity Colleges.

Among those who were dissatisfied with the results was Professor E. A. Havelock, of Classics, Victoria College. "The students, far from representing a true cross-section of the country at large, are drawn from the well-to-do primarily," he stated. "Naturally they supported the old-line parties in overwhelming preference to the parties that stood for the masses of the people—the working classes. The mythical idealism of youth is again exploded by this straw vote," he continued. "It is a mistake to think of University students in general as being radical. My experiences in England convince me that a similar vote taken in Oxford or Cambridge would reveal a similar preference for the status quo."

The Varsity's Date Bureau has found favour in the eyes of a certain Toronto high school. It was learned yesterday that Northern Vocational School is endeavouring to gather together an organization which will function in a manner similar to the Date Bureau. The idea is finding favour with many of the students. All that remains is for the Students' Council to pass sanction on the matter.

upon his audience of an outstanding and thoroughly trained musician. B.H.M.

Serge Jaroff and his Don Cossacks brought to their audience Friday night a remarkable presentation of Russian music. The appeal of this body of men lies not so much in their individual singing as in their group work. And it is not only because of some of their choral effects that they are so successful. It is the dramatic manner in which they give their performance that appeals to their audience.

As a choral group they do fill their songs with the typical melancholy and fervor of Russia. In their five selections from the music of the Greek Orthodox Church there is a true religious feeling. When they sing their native Cossack songs they bring their spirited courage.

In Germany this organization sings on the vaudeville stage. The antics of the diminutive Jaroff are certainly more appropriate to that type of production than to purely concert work. The Cossacks would fit in a program such as the Continental Varieties, they are Revue Artists of a high calibre. Their audience is appealed to by the dramatic note they strike in their performance.

At the same time this does not detract from the quality of their work. They achieve the most amazing instrumental effects with their high falsetto sopranos and their deep basses. Their range covers four full octaves and from the choir Serge Jaroff gets the results of a human orchestra.

by seeking to eliminate all that is Christian in the state controlled education of the children. By controlling the education these countries can mold the mind of the future generation. In this way the world is being changed, people are doing things on the other side of the Atlantic while we in Canada are only talking platitudes.

"We have never faced a situation like this in the history of the Christian church and we will not get anywhere if we merely compromise," maintained Dr. Cash. The S.C.M. has done much to strike out the superstition and fear among the natives of Africa and the southern parts of India but we will not be able to change the world until we have a world-wide church winning through the power of great love.

THE ALUMNI DIRECTORS DEFEND CEREMONY

it was only proper for the C.O.T.C. to pay tribute to previous members of the contingent.

Mr. Carter of University College was not in sympathy with the attitude of the S.C.M., and was in favour of a military service as the most suitable memorial to the men who died overseas.

Another of the directors, Mr. Mulholland, believed that a soldier may be in uniform and carry a token of peace at the same time. He would rather see the uniformed men conduct the service, as without the uniforms, the ceremony would lose its significance.

Mr. Little of Victoria College was emphatic in defence of the present program. He stated that there was no military element present at the ceremony, but merely a small guard of honour, and that the company had not been at the service for the last two years. Mr. Little also said that the carillon had been used last year since the C.O.T.C. band was in Montreal at the time, and that the Victoria Glee Club had participated for years in the service.

"The S.C.M. are so unfamiliar with the true nature of the ceremony, that I think many of their members have never attended it," concluded the director.

LIBERALS SWEEP CANADA IN FEDERAL ELECTIONS

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Addis Ababa—Upon the capture by the Italian forces of the Holy City of Aksum, Emperor Haile Selassie has proclaimed a Holy War to retrieve it. Italy now holds 1,500 square miles.

Rome—Premier Mussolini, in an interview with former United States Senator Henry Allen, gave him to believe that he does not hope for avoidance of a European war.

Geneva—Powers here set October 31 as the deadline for the effecting of financial and economic sanctions, hoping thus to force Benito Mussolini to sue for peace before his armies have reached their objectives in Ethiopia.

New York—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt disagrees with Senator William E. Borah that the 1936 Republican presidential campaign should be based on a "trust-busting" issue, maintaining that there are other issues that will overshadow it. His statement was in response to a letter from Senator Borah suggesting that the "question of monopoly lies at the base" of United States election campaign issue-making.

Former Dean of Women at U.C.

Women's Union

Miss Margaret Wrong, first dean of women in University College and the founder of the Women's Union, is speaking this week to the women of the college on the present situation in Africa. This is a subject with which Miss Wrong is well acquainted as her present work as one of the secretaries of the World Student Christian Federation brings her into constant contact with that country.

Miss Wrong's address is the first of a series being sponsored by the Women's Undergraduate Association of University College. It is planned to give the lectures from 1.30 p.m. to 2 o'clock, a time when most students are free. The lectures are not confined to University College alone and women of other colleges will be welcome to attend.

In an interview with The Varsity Miss Wrong, who is the daughter of Professor Emeritus Wrong, former head of the History Department, and who was herself, for a short time, a member of the history staff here, outlined something of the establishment of

BYRD AUDIENCE CRITICIZED

A census of student opinion was taken yesterday regarding the editorial printed in last week's Varsity. The editorial criticized the actions of certain Toronto citizens who behaved in an unseemly manner on the occasion of Commander Byrd's recent lecture at the Maple Leaf Gardens.

Student opinion in general seems to agree with the viewpoint presented in the editorial.

Arthur de Bystrice of Austria, agrees with The Varsity that "Commander Byrd is a man who deserves the respect of any audience and he is certainly not in the same category as an ordinary box office attraction like Mae West. That the citizens of Toronto should behave so is an example of their provincialism."

Bill Greenfield, II Trinity, thinks that "Toronto is the only city where such a thing would occur. I have never heard of it happening anywhere else. In most places people would know how to behave on a similar occasion."

Isabel Wallbridge, III Pass Arts, said she did not know how universal bad manners were, but that she came from Belleville and she was sure the same thing would happen there.

Sheila Bull, II Trinity did not think that the problem was a serious one. She said, "No, they had no right to

BOARDING HOUSE, COMMUNIST STYLE ON QUEEN'S CAMPUS

The octopus of Communism has spread its tentacles and gripped some of our students. A boarding house on University Avenue has evolved a brilliant plan to which they claim no patent rights and will be glad to lend their expert advice to aid the further adoption of their scheme.

The plan is fundamentally simple yet very effective. Each week the boys in the boarding house to pay a small fee to the treasurer of their organization and he in turn hands it over to a previously selected member to spend. Every member is pledged to continue his donations each week so that the one who is last

Hart House Theatre Displays Hollywood's Fantastic Ways

Whoops and shrieks emanating from Hart House Theatre last night were genuine. Habitués of free admission dress rehearsals laughed and laughed and laughed at the wise-cracks and antics of the clowning cast of "Once in a Lifetime", the current production in the campus theatre.

This isn't a review but "we strongly urge the use of abdominal breathing as a fundamental principle in elocutionary training". Try it on your "Boots" sometime. Kipling did, at least posterity does. Sometimes they stumble on the syllabets or fail to keep their vowels open.

"Oh those nuts. Go ahead and crack two at a time. See if I care. I'm going to the ladies' smoker—maybe I'll hear a good dirty story." Well, watch where your stepping, there's a sausage bar in the ladies' room right now.

Tie Nothing-All For the Mulock Cup

Dents and St. Mike's Finish
Even after Varying Game

THIRD TIE OF SERIES

Dents, last year's champions, were held to a nothing-all tie by St. Mike's in a scheduled Mulock Cup interfaculty rugby game on the back campus yesterday afternoon. It was the third tie of the series so far this year and the second successive scoreless tie.

St. Mike's kicked off and Dents started off very strongly, plunging for yards on the first down. Near the end of the first quarter Singer of Dents made 20 yards on an end run and on the next down kicked over the line to Tommy Sullivan of St. Mike's, who ran it out 2 yards as the quarter ended.

For the next two periods play ranged between the 25 yard markers, with Dents losing a chance for single points because of weak kicking. St. Mike's began to march up the field. Finnan made 15 yards in 2 successive plunges and then completed a 20 yard forward pass to Aulenbacher. Scandifio then made 12 through centre but Speers of Dents ran a kick back 25 yards to relieve the pressure.

In the third period St. Mike's had a great chance to win the game when Finnan threw a 40 yard pass to Sonberg who fell 20 yards from the goal after receiving the ball. Dents then tightened up and an interference penalty set the Irish back out of scoring range. The last period was hard fought in mid-field generally, until Dents pulled off a 25 yard pass, Speers to Mueller.

Canton School

WILL LECTURE HERE

The Rev. Geoffrey F. Allen, who is on his way from England to China, where he goes to Canton to be principal of a theological college, will spend two days on the campus this week, Wednesday and Thursday, October 16 and 17. Allen took a brilliant degree from Oxford and was later an S.C.M. Secretary at Liverpool University. He returned to Oxford as Fellow and Chaplain of Lincoln College where, in recent years, he has given considerable leadership in the intellectual and religious life of the college. At one time he was closely identified with the Oxford Group Movement and found much help in their fellowship.

A number of meetings have been arranged for him while he is at the University. At luncheon on Wednesday he will speak to a group in Wyulwood. In the afternoon at four o'clock he will conduct a worship service in the School of Missions. An evening supper group is being arranged by the Medical S.C.M. group when Allen will speak on "Psychology and Religion".

Thursday morning he will speak in Victoria College Chapel at 9.50 a.m. In the evening in Hart House he will address a joint meeting of the faculty and students of Knox, Trinity, Wycliffe and Emmanuel Colleges.

BAKELITE FILMS SHOWN AT ENGINEERS' CLUB

The Manufacture of Bakelite and its Varied Uses Are Demonstrated

A sound film entitled "Bakelite, the material of infinite uses" was shown at the first open meeting of the Engineering Society Monday afternoon by Mr. Campbell of the Bakelite Company of Canada. To the obvious delight of the fun-loving Schoolmen this film was preceded by a Mickey Mouse comedy.

The first scenes were taken in the British bakelite factories demonstrating how the product was made in the laboratory from a mixture of phenol and formaldehyde. It was then shown how bakelite was manufactured commercially.

New Parties Fail to Sustain Threat of Serious
Rivalry

STEVENS PARTY SWAMPED

Quebec Province Swings to Support of Liberal Party

The Right Honourable Richard Bedford Bennett, the man who for the past five years has stood at the helm of and guided the destinies of the Canadian government, could only stand idly by last night as the wave of liberalism swept westward across the dominion, driving the Conservative forces before it and leaving William Lyon Mackenzie King and his Liberal followers at the head of the Canadian government.

Yesterday's Liberal victory was very decisive. The electorate which established a new record in the matter of voting, gave the Liberals more than 75 per cent of the total seats.

The new parties, who were considered serious threats to the political supremacy, failed to make any showing in the general returns. The electorate, despite a general feeling of uncertainty, concentrated on the old parties of Conservatives and Liberals. The Stevens led, Reconstruction party was thoroughly swamped in the east and fared little better in the west. Communism had only one candidate receive enough votes to avoid losing the forfeit.

Quebec, the province which supported Mr. Bennett in the campaign of 1930, voted solidly Liberal yesterday. The three Maritime provinces elected twenty three Liberals and only one Conservative. Ontario, with its nucleus at Toronto, gave the Conservative party their largest number of seats although here too the Liberals had a substantial majority.

The present Liberal prime minister was for several years connected with The Varsity, acting as editor in his final year at the University of Toronto. Summarized details of the election appear elsewhere in this paper.

Yesterday the Liberals took seventy-six seats in parliament from the Conservatives. Woodsworth was elected in Winnipeg North Centre. Tim Buck was defeated in Winnipeg North by A. E. Heaps, C.C.F. candidate.

The Reconstruction party was the most complete washout of the day, Stevens himself only being elected in Kootenay East.

The Liberal Victory

William Lyon Mackenzie King, one-time editor of The Varsity, today stands at the head of the Canadian Government, having overwhelmingly defeated the Conservative government led by the Right Honourable Richard Bedford Bennett. The task facing the premier as he returns to office is a difficult one. Few countries of the world have as many industrial interests as has Canada. And reconciling these conflicting interests is a task which will require time, skill and courage. His success or failure as premier will depend upon his ability to succeed in this regard.

One of the things the election proved was that Canada is not a country of radicals. One Communist only secured enough votes to avoid losing his forfeit. The new parties likewise failed significantly. Despite the rumours of upsets and unusual occurrences on election day, it was the old parties who fought it out. In fact it was just another election in which one party secured a large majority. The time of tension preceding any significant event always generates uneasiness and fantastic opinions regarding the outcome. But when it is all over and written into history it is then seen to resemble in many ways all events of the kind.

The Battle of Headlines

Long before the first gun had been fired in the Italo-Ethiopian war, a merry battle had already gotten well under way among our newspapers. Yesterday's battle of the ballots was an amazing spectacle, but the battle of the headlines among our exalted contemporaries on the subject of the African war promises to be an epic. Headlines have risen in height, full page streamers too deep have proclaimed the latest challenges of Mussolini to world peace, together with the gallant if somewhat belated attempts of the League to stem the tide. The climax of this interesting battle of the headlines was reached early last week when a late edition of the Telegram ran a seering streamer across the front page: MACLEAN KILLED?—NO!!! We are sure that this message was very comforting to Mrs. Maclean, not to speak of the thousands of Telegram readers who were anxiously waiting news of the safety of their favourite war correspondent, but the rest of the world could have well been assured in quieter terms.

Along with this struggle of the headlines there is also being carried on a concerted editorial attempt to influence public opinion in the direction of war. Mr. Matthew Halton writes very brilliant and highly coloured articles to the Star from an armchair in London. His latest effort appeared in Saturday's issue and the headline was spread over three columns. In this he points out lugubriously enough that England is awakening from a long dream of peace, and is now, with the active support of conservative, labour and communist alike, beginning to arm heavily for the next war. Mr. Halton's article makes very stirring reading, none the less because he seems to be actually smacking his lips over the prospect. There is an air of complacency if not of smug satisfaction in his tone when he describes the present labour attitude to rearmament. It is very evident that the Star's correspondent is writing for effect. But to what effect?

What we have said about these Toronto newspapers we could say with equal force about newspapers all over America. Certainly something is afoot. Can we see behind these flaming headlines, these powerful editorials a sinister conspiracy to draw us back into another war? Newspapers are excellent instruments for disseminating knowledge and facts. They are just as excellent for purposes of propaganda in the hands of those who have axes to grind. This is a time to test our intelligence and our powers of discernment, to distinguish between news and views in our headlines.

Heming Exhibit in Sketch Room

The following article was written for The Varsity by F. H. Bridgen, A.R.C.A., P.P., O.S.A. We are very much indebted to Mr. Bridgen for this criticism which is based on Arthur Heming's exhibit in the Sketch Room of Hart House.

The opening exhibition in the sketch room which has just concluded had an unusually wide appeal. There was a great deal for the serious student of art, and that larger group who go to picture exhibitions from a sense of duty or to put in a little time, will also have found something to interest and stimulate them.

Arthur Heming, A.R.C.A., O.S.A., is a Canadian who has won international reputation for both his writing and painting. In the field of pictorial art, as in that of literature, his contribution has been unique, a distinctly individual and original expression.

In these days when so many painters are slavishly imitating the work of one or other of the French Post Impressionists, it is a refreshing experience to see a group of paintings which owe nothing to these exponentists.

Heming's subject matter is his own. The fruit of years of exploration and keen observation in the out of the way places of Canada's Northland, his art is based on principles which have formed the basic structure of all great achievement in the painter's craft.

As one stood in the sketch room and looked round at the striking group of canvasses there displayed, the first impression was one of creative force. It could be seen that much study had been devoted to design and arrangement and that a powerful imagination had been given full play in developing the dynamic effects which imparted to each picture an arresting interest.

The themes are ones which have come to be associated with the name of Heming by all those who have been intrigued with the romance of the Canadian North. The Voyageurs, the canoists on their perilous plunge through the dark canyon, the Hudson Bay factor travelling in official state, the lumber raft daring death in its mad journey down river, the glistening fantasy of the Northern winter, and the intimate record of animal life by one who had himself shared the winter solitudes with the denizens of the forest.

In addition to the masterly arrangement and dramatic quality of their design, Heming's pictures are notable for the emphasis placed on form—often conceived in a decorative manner. Foreground branches and snow-laden trees are used in this way to enrich the pattern and give a satisfying feeling of line and rhythm to the composition.

He has also made most effective use of light. The magic of the sun on snow, the subtle changes of colour in the shadows and the beauty of reflected lights add much to the charm of the work.

Light is also used to give emphasis to the motive as when it catches the crest of the wave which follows the canoe on its way to the dark depths of the lower rapids or when it illuminates the graceful deer as it leaps across the sunlit snow.

Heming's colour is restrained and harmonious. It is a constant source of surprised comment from those who have known of him as a monochrome painter, for it is only in recent years that he has launched out into the use of the full palette.

His technique is simple, following the methods of those old masters whose works have come down to us with all the freshness of their original lustre.

Sir C. J. Holmes in his book on the science of painting, prophesies that many of the modern paintings with their careless workmanship and thick impasto will soon deteriorate and that it will be impossible to restore them by any method of cleaning.

It is gratifying to learn that Mr. Heming's work is being recognized in a substantial way, through finding a place in the collections of art lovers not only in Canada but in England and America as well.

His success should be a stimulus to sincere study and the development of originality among the coming generation of Canadian painters.

When it comes to having stricken females weep on our shoulder it is all right with us if they are tea room proprietors because in that case it is just possible there might be some free refreshments lying in wait for a sympathetic listener. So the other day when the Pink House lady relayed a woful tale about the gradual deterioration of the charm of her village shoppe we gave at least respectful attention.

It seems that her venerable institution boasts a room called the Label Room because the walls are papered with bottle labels of varied nature, design and inscription, creating a very pretty effect indeed, not to say mouth-watering. Something like a year ago, however, what with the ravages of time and the depredations of souvenir hunters (and maybe prohibitionists for all we know) the blank spaces between the labels on the walls of the Label Room were growing increasingly larger. One night a trifle maudlin visitor, who was, however, still alert enough to realize the sad deficiency of the local table supply, cheered the proprietress exceedingly by offering to right the wrong that had been done. "Just leave it to me, young lady," quoth the good Samaritan. "I'll tell all the readers of my paper about it, and then you'll get plenty of 'em!"

True to his word the next issue of Toronto's youngest weekly tabloid bantered abroad the word that the Pink House needed more labels. The week-enders volubly responded and back came the helpful journalist with a few bucketsful of choice assorted bottle stickers.

"Interesting, if true," was our rather puzzled statement as the proprietress finished her story, "but why so despondent now—and where do we come in?"

"Oh, but that all happened a year ago," explained the lady, "and now the labels are again peeling off the walls and fast becoming a scarcity."

"So?"

"So I thought perhaps you might put something about it in your paper and get me a whole lot of labels, just like the other man did!"

And we, in our innocence, told her it wouldn't work. There aren't any labels on coca-cola bottles.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

The forthcoming production of the U.C. Players' Guild will be a prize-winning play, "Get Out of Your Cage", by Mary Plowman, an English playwright. It is a psychological study of the effects of a narrow environment on a group of six contrasted characters. The structure is interesting, in that it arouses two alien and incompatible feelings, by bringing the action to an inevitable denouement which provides no solution to the problem.

Rehearsals have brought to light an actress of some promise, in Iris Gibson, who is playing the difficult role of the French teacher in an English girls' school. The less striking, but equally difficult part of the Classics mistress is played by Jean Snider, with sympathy and understanding. Helen McEwan and Anita Faessler are giving good performances as Games mistress and the head of the school, and two minor parts are handled capably by Margaret Sorenson and Pat Downey. The play is under the direction of Dorothy Walker, and includes a repertoire of entrancing sound effects, manufactured and supplied by members of the cast.

Correspondence

Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

As a member of the committee that helped to formulate the proposals made by the executives of the S.C.M. and fifteen other organizations on the campus to make some alterations in the students' memorial service on November 11th, I feel an explanation is necessary to make clear the position from which the subject was originally attacked.

In making these proposals the organizations are not identifying themselves with a pacifist position, nor is that the issue in which we are interested at this time. We are not concerned with our attitude towards war and how that attitude is put into action, but with how the purpose of the memorial service may best be carried out. We consider that, since the purpose of the service is remembrance of those who sacrificed their lives in 1914-18, this remembrance is useless unless it points us to the fulfillment of their sacrifice. They died in the hope of peace. Military display is out of keeping with the spirit of a service which is showing respect for their death and the cause of peace which led them to make such a sacrifice.

A member of the committee on the Memorial Service.

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Yesterday's editorial on "Armistice Day and the C.O.T.C." was well-meaning but regrettable. The S.C.M. is to be commended for a suggestion that has long been in order. Remembrance Day should cause us to remember the spirit of honest devotion that motivated the men who fought the "war to end war"; and it should also epitomize present-day young Canadians' determination to be as true to their own vision of service as they were to theirs. Perhaps we can more easily detect specious and mean ingredients in public ideals of conduct and are therefore more wary of resort to mass-violence as a means of effecting a just settlement of a dispute in which we have an interest, selfish or otherwise. For there are few ends in modern war that can be clearly delimited as desirable; and even when there are such, the economic and emotional upheaval of a major war is likely

By E. S. W.

We have good news for all swimming enthusiasts. The Lillian Massey pool is open again, and looks very swanky with its new coat of paint. Our only regret is that they didn't enlarge the pool while they were at it. Quite a few girls were out practising yesterday, and among other new talent we noticed Frances Carlisle, I.U.C., who promises to be a new diving star. Midge Murphy of Social Science was also practising. She and Phil Haslem are both back, and with them and some of their freshies, Social Science stand a good chance of winning the inter-faculty championship again. They shined the cup the other day for good luck, and are now displaying it proudly on the table in their common room.

The pool will be open every afternoon except Saturday from three to five-thirty, and Billy Cochrane or her father will be there to give instruction. Tickets can be bought three for a dollar from Billy, or else the four dollar athletic fee can be paid at the bursar's office. It wouldn't be a bad idea to do some practising now, before the weather becomes too cold, and before dozens of other people come milling round. As most of you know, if more than fifteen people get in the pool, a traffic cop is almost necessary.

There's nothing new to report about basketball, except that all the teams are practising hard. Vic seniors team had a practice last night, as did St. Hilda's and U.C. juniors. St. Hilda's had about twenty people out, of whom ten or so were freshies. U.C. had only six girls out when we saw them, but we imagine that there were more to come. Joyce Tenenbaum seemed to be in good basketball condition, and Lorna Reid's coaching should produce a smart team.

DENTISTRY GOLF TOURNEY

The students of Dentistry were the guests of Dr. Mason at a golf tournament at the Thornhill Golf Club yesterday. The weather was perfect and good scores were turned in. Leaders were MacDonald with 79, Leask and Dunlop 84.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crocker

With the league leading Redmen due in our midst next Saturday orders for the Blues during practice sessions will no doubt be "Full speed ahead". Our fondest hope is that Steve's crew will dry the tears of Crying Coach O'Brien, who'll always be remembered as the coach who cried after his team's initial success in the college loop this year. McGill, as a result of their convincing victory up at London on Saturday rate as Public Worry Number One in the Blue dressing room. In trouncing the Mustangs right in London the Redmen accomplished a greater bit of work than did the Blues as Coach Storen's squad was no doubt a more polished one than the aggregation through which the Blues waded right here in Toronto. In handing the Purple and White gridders a 21-7 pasting McGill demonstrated that their bag of tricks consisted of more than "running in reverse" as Kingston critics would have us believe.

If the Blues are desirous of getting anywhere in the college circuit this year they'll have to learn how to stand up at critical moments. Two weeks in a row now supposedly weaker teams have held the Blues off just when Steve's crew was on the verge of a major score. Two weeks ago the Blue and White aggregation marched down the field against Western on two or three occasions (we can't remember the exact number) only to be denied major scores when they were only a couple of yards out. The same thing happened down in Kingston when Ted Reeve's Queenies threw the Blues for a loss after Varsity had marched to the Tricolour line. Coulter called the plays correctly on each of these occasions but it seemed that the Varsity line lost its effectiveness in the stress of the moment.

We wonder what Ted Reeve feeds his team before games. Too had the government doesn't insist on taking a saliva test on the gridiron. Last year we came out with the declaration that the Queenies' front line was indulging in the art of "handing it out to the opposition". However, we weren't taken seriously as those things weren't supposed to happen in the intercollegiate circuit. All we know of the Queen's-Varsity game in Kingston is what we've read and if what we've read is true it seems that this year's Limestone City squad has discovered new methods of aggressiveness to add to last year's repertoire. What seems to us to add insult to injury is that Coach Reeve seems to take this rough play as a part of the grand old fall pastime. Proof of this statement can be found in Reeve's column of yesterday in which he takes officials to task for calling too many rough play penalties. The apparent indifference of the Tricolour mentor to all the reported fist-swinging on the line is to be regretted by all of us who have been entertained year after year by the clean and sportsmanlike nature of college sport.

The coming week promises to be a busy one in the sports calendar at Varsity. Friday afternoon will mark the first intercollegiate "open" track meet. With several records having been broken at the interfaculty track meets held at the various colleges in preparation for the intercollegiate meet competition should be very keen. As all you lads will be getting a holiday Friday afternoon we look forward to seeing all of you at the Stadium. The Varsity officials and the competing athletes deserve a better attendance mark than the one recorded at the interfaculty track meet last Wednesday. It must be terribly disconcerting to go to the trouble of arranging a meet only to find that only a mere handful have become interested enough to come out for the show. So let's all get out on Friday and give the boys a rousing reception.

While the track men are cavorting around in Toronto the intercollegiate tennis matches will be in full swing down in Montreal where the University of Montreal will be playing host to visiting racket-wielders. The Blue team will consist of Pigott, Crowson, Eaton and Tomlinson.

Soccer Schedule

Due to the withdrawal of O.C.E., the interfaculty soccer groupings and schedule have been revised. Trinity has been moved from group A to group C, while group B has remained unchanged. The revised schedule is as follows:

REGISTRATION SHOWS PROMISING INCREASE

"Registration in all courses of the University has increased considerably this year," stated W. J. Dunlop, director of the Extension Bureau. Mr. Dunlop cited as an example that enrolment in the School of Nursing is the largest in its history, approximating 400 in contrast to last year's enrolment of 324.

Great interest has also been shown in the University Extension courses, making it possible to introduce several new ones. There will be an evening class in swimming and gymnastics in the Household Science Building, and a new course in the study of History and Archaeology in the Near East is being offered. Professor John Alford will present a series of lectures on History of Fine Art beginning Wednesday, October 16. A new course especially for purchasing agents will be given, too, in an attempt to set a high standard of education, and make of this work a recognized profession.

Green's Studio, 24 Grenville, at 8 p.m. Miss Strack is a former member of the cabinet of the American Y.W.C.A. In 1934-35 she was national women's debating champion in the U.S.A.

S. C. M. PRESENTS VARIEO PROGRAM

Informal Gathering Includes Speeches, Music and Folk-Dancing

The Student Christian Movement held an informal gathering at Wymwood last evening. The program had been arranged under the directorship of Ken Woodsworth.

An explanation of the aim of the movement was given by Mr. J. Romeyn. "The S.C.M. is trying to achieve a unity in the experiences of life among the students and to make the University a community," he stated. A great opportunity will be afforded to the students during Armistice week, when Dr. T. Z. Koo is to be present at Varsity to give lectures on the subject of "Peace".

A violin-piano duet, followed by a short talk by Mr. Archie Manson on the different groups which are being formed under the auspices of the S.C.M., ended the serious part of the entertainment.

Folk-dancing was a feature of the evening.

U.C. MUSIC CLUB MEETING LAYS PLANS FOR SEASON

New Committee Elected for Year 1935-36—Play to be Given

On Friday, October 11, the U.C. Music Club held its first meeting at the Women's Union. This year's committee is as follows: Dorothy Salter, president; Jack Taylor, secretary; Wynne Shenstone, musical director; Mervyn Mirsky and Anne Ferguson. Last year's production being such a huge success it was announced that a similar entertainment will be given this year.

The notice of the play selected will appear in The Varsity a week from Monday. Members were urged to bring all their friends who are interested in the club or the forthcoming play to the next meeting. Plans of teaching dancing to those wishing to join the ballet of this production were discussed. Tea was served.

Last year's pyjama parade cost the first two years a considerable sum of money. No doubt the paraders will bear this in mind tonight. It's hard to have to pay for your fun.—Queen's Journal.

ART OF MODERNS GAINS IN FORCE

Merits of Past and Present in Portraiture Are Compared

FIRST OF LISMER SERIES

"Painting of present day artists is more dynamic and mechanic than heretofore," stated Mr. Arthur Lismar in his lecture at the Art Gallery last evening. Mr. Lismar compared the painting of the past with that of the present, choosing Raeburn and Tintoretto as examples of the old school.

A means of livelihood was a first consideration with Raeburn. His portraits were painted with one eye on form, another on posterity. Posterity never did much for us, why do something for it, echoes the modern painter.

Raeburn's portraits glow with a medieval glamour, their chief emphasis being on clothes. His expressions are of the rigid mode of the time rather than actualities, although in comparison with Reynolds, his contemporary, they express better the personality of the sitter. In spite of the increase in naturalness his portrait tends to flatter.

Jacopo Tintoretto is similar to Raeburn in his use of colour. That colour is found chiefly in the draperies which were used rather to suit Tintoretto than his artistic public. His paintings are very classical, having some sumptuous person for his madonna. Usually he represents her as some lusty and energetic mortal. This was characteristic of allegorical pictures.

stamp their feet; it would be all right for Commander Byrd to stamp his because he's been to both poles and is probably still cold, but that's no reason for Torontonians to do likewise; the people of Toronto are certainly very impatient; you can tell that by the way they drive cars."

Ken MacEwen, III Meds, said that it all depended on the price of admission. "If you pay a dollar or a dollar and a half you should conduct yourself with decorum, but for a price of two bits it would be all right to stamp as much as you wanted. I don't know if rudeness is limited to Toronto, these things happen in the best of places, you know."

the Women's Union. "Before its foundation there were no club facilities for the women," said Miss Wrong, "only the old residences in Queen's Park and a lunch room and rest room in the main building."

As secretary of the Y.W.C.A. in 1914 Miss Wrong had reported on the need of a building for the women, so in 1916 when Number 85 St. George St. was left vacant by the faculty men going to war, the Board of Governors suggested that it might be used by the women, and placed Miss Wrong in charge of it. "For the first year it was a purely experimental undertaking and the fees were only voluntary contributions," Miss Wrong stated. "However, the W.U.A. and the graduates and faculty all supported it valiantly and by the second year it was aided by a regular fee levied by the Board of Governors."

At present Miss Wrong is secretary of an international committee to provide literature for the people of Africa. "The people there are learning to read but have no reading material," declared Miss Wrong. The committee was established in 1926 by British mission societies and has its headquarters in London.

"The committee is spreading information about what is being done in this line and helping to provide translations," said Miss Wrong. She continued, "The Africans even are beginning to write fiction now, but we have no funds to print the excellent manuscripts in the native languages which sometimes fall into our hands." According to Miss Wrong the Bible and the "Pilgrim's Progress" are the most translated books in Africa.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking—

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

terrible than that from which it sought to escape.

Realist and idealist alike are fast becoming suspicious of violence as a practical means of resolving conflict. A sane exposition of this view is to be found in a recent book, "The Power of Non-Violence" by Richard Gregg. If we avoid disaster in the present crisis we may emerge into an era of increasing reasonableness in which resort to force to procure justice would be increasingly rare and at the same time increasingly intelligent, centralized and decisive. This can only happen if the masses of the world become increasingly aware of the futility and moral awfulness of mass violence. A constructive pacifist movement, devoted to stringent ideals and rigorous criteria of conduct that would consider surrender only on the highest terms, would do much to forward such a development and to secure confidence in the arbitrament of the World Court, which, more than the League, is the potential saviour of internationalism.

Of course the C.D.T.C. does not want war. And a Remembrance Day service in which a "guard of honour" carrying fixed bayonets participates, is unlikely to impress those who take part in it with the necessity for a sane devotion to peace. For such a service is dishonest; it gives a picture of the nature and usefulness of war that is only very partially accurate.

Only by using every ounce of intelligence and moral sensitiveness of which we are possessed in order to determine our conduct in the event of war, can we, "the next generation," hold high the torch flung to us by the last. I hope, therefore, that the S.C.M.'s recommendations for an honest and truly reverent service on Remembrance Day, endorsed as they have been by nearly every student body on the campus, will be carried out on November 11th.

Dear Sir:

At the initial meeting of the Student Peace Movement Thursday evening, October 10, a discussion as to the attitude the students as a whole took towards the S.P.M. indicated that in the minds of many it was a "Red" organization. May we of the S.P.M. correct this impression? It is not a "Red", nor a Liberal, Conservative or C.C.F. organization. It is formed of those who, not alike in politics, yet with the common ground that war is a crime and ought not to come again, meet to discuss this subject of peace or war and by lectures and research build up our knowledge of the whys and wherefores of peace having no moral nor economic arguments to justify our stand.

Geneva—A general boycott of all Italian products was favoured last night by many delegates as the third step in League penalties against Italy for attacking Ethiopia. Anthony Eden of Great Britain suggested that all members immediately stop importing from Italy.

RED-TAILED HAWK SHOWN ON CAMPUS

HUNTS GROUND GAME

A group of students were treated to something unusual on the front campus near the University library at 1.30-2.00 p.m. yesterday. The centre of interest was a red-tailed hawk (Buteo borealis to the zoologists), on a perch, perched on the gloved left hand of Don MacKinnon. The young man was plying with many questions and was quite free with his information.

The hawk, a female, five years of age, with its right anterior middle talon severed at the first joint, was caught 5 weeks ago north of Park Hill near Lake Huron. With patient training, the hawk, 2 lbs. 10 oz., has learned to perch on Don's left hand and to obey several commands; for example "Elevators up" was answered by the bird displaying his tail feathers; "Down" meant jumping from hand to raised foot.

This type of hawk is used in hunting ground game and especially for rabbits. The record is 17 kills out of 18 tries. Only three other people in Canada have trained hawks. The hawk is fed on raw meat and feathers, the latter are not absolutely necessary but seem to aid in digestion.

Miss Mary Dingman, chairman of the Peace and Disarmament Committee of the Women's International Organizations, is making a twenty-five stop tour of Canada. She is at present in Toronto, on her ninth stop. Miss Dingman has attended meetings in Toronto, two or three times previously, and has enjoyed them, she said.

Among her many experiences Miss Dingman attended a meeting at which 120 women's organizations were represented. Miss Katherine Courtney, vice-president of the Peace and Disarmament Conference, gave a moving address on "The Responsibility of the League of Nations in the Crisis of Today". Other questions of importance discussed were "The Nationality of Married Women", "The Whole Status of Women", "The Opium Traffic and Women". These topics, Miss Dingman pointed out, show that women as well as men of today, should take an active interest in the events going on around them.

Director, audience and players were all mixed up together in the play within a play "Antoinette ou le Retour" presented last night at the first meeting of the University College French Club.

Tristan Bernard's farce has as its subject a doting mother who while watching her daughter make her theatrical debut keeps up a running commentary on the play and her daughter's merits from her place in the audience. To add to the confusion the daughter, Kronka, played by Miss Rebecca Himmel, keeps directing with a man in the orchestra. Distracted by the continual interruptions the cast finally leaves the stage, whereupon the old mother, Mr. Charlie Carrington, and a member of the orchestra, come on the stage in an effort to continue the play. While they are seeking inspiration the director, Mr. G. Lenschow, runs out and demands the curtain.

Other members of the cast included the Vicomte, Mr. L. E. Hampel; the Marquis, Mr. Eric Metcalfe; Mlle. Stevenson, Miss L. Melson, and two members of the orchestra, Mr. Eric Yarell and Mr. Will Beattie.

French Film Has Quebec Locale

The beauty of Quebec has at last been realized by producers in the filming of Maria Chapdelaine. This adaptation of the French Canadian novel is the first distinctly Canadian production to be released. The company, including actors from the Comedie Francaise, under the direction of M. Duvivier, came from France to Lake St. John and used the district there generally as "location". The villages they chose were among those known to Louis Hemon. The players even recruited a French Canadian, Fred Barry, to play the role of father and he returned with them to France to complete the film.

The picture was not shot entirely in Quebec. The spring and summer sequences are genuine Bernibonka, but the Canadian winter is too rigorous to permit the numerous retakes necessary for a good scene, hence the snow-covered hills are only Parisian reproductions.

The film has been very well received in Quebec. The critics found that the director in his short visit had translated the soul of the country and of a world new to him to seventy minutes of enjoyment.

The hours of presentation at the Hollywood have been changed so that there will be three shows next Saturday morning, at 9.15, 10.50 and 12.25.

Liberal Club Leader Asserts Depression Caused Bennett's Downfall

ACCLAIMS STEVENS' DEFEAT

University C. C. F. President Had Hoped for Twenty Seats

The sweeping victory of the Liberal party in Monday's federal election resulted in a variety of comment by leaders of the political organizations in the University. In no case was surprise expressed as to the successful party, but for the decisive majority given the new government different reasons and interpretations were suggested.

The showing of the more radical parties came as both a disappointment and an encouragement to the C.C.F. and Communist leaders of the campus, while the Reconstruction party, it appears, was never considered a real factor.

According to A. R. Hicks, the vice-president of the 20th Century Liberal Club, the fact that trade was a major issue is significant and the depression was in a large measure the cause of the downfall of the Bennett government, while the overwhelming character of the returns is a tribute to the policies of the Liberal government. With eight of the nine provinces having Liberal governments, Mr. King has a great advantage with which to prove the worth of his party platform.

"The defeat of Mr. Stevens was one of the happiest features and will do good to our credit abroad. Toronto is now the laughing stock of Canada," he concluded.

J. H. H. Depew, of the Macdonald-Cartier Club, expressed surprise that so few of the radical parties such as the C.C.F. were elected. As for the general results, he said: "I think it is (Continued on Page 4)

BELIEF IN MIRACLES ASSERTED BY SPEAKER AT WOMEN'S UNION

"Miracles? Why not?" said Miss Marion McCarthy, speaking to the weekly meeting of the Toronto Inter-collegiate Christian Union yesterday in the Women's Union on "Our Life in God's Hands."

"Every time I move this book, which is said to be an immovable object, I, a diametrically opposed force, am performing a miracle. God controls all laws of nature and laws of nature are different for every sphere, yet He can apply a law of one sphere to any other. This is what we call a miracle."

The gist of Miss McCarthy's ensuing words was that God is our creator and moral ruler. God cares for man despite the doubts of the sceptical. The whole story of the Old Testament is "God Seeking Man", and the story of the New Testament is how He sent Christ to seek us personally. "The only way to God is through Christ. The hand with the nail-print in it," she concluded, "is ever reaching out for us."

GERMAN AND FRENCH FILMS

Foreign films are beginning more and more to engage the attention of the Toronto theatre-going population, especially that part in attendance at the Modern Language Department are making a greater effort to bring these films before the public eye.

The German Department is planning to bring a number of German pictures, but the date is not definitely set as yet. The first, "Blue Light", was very successful in New York, Paris, London and other European capitals. They plan, in addition, to bring a variety of films, an historical one, and a modern musical comedy among others, all of them German talkies. These will be shown at Hart House, sponsored by the German Department and the German Club, and using their own equipment. The idea of bringing these pictures is not merely to bring language films but to present another form of entertainment and perhaps to establish a branch of the National Film League in Toronto. The tremendous success of the few German films shown in Toronto in the past encourages the German Department to repeat the experiment.

History of Explosives At Science Meeting

Illustrating his talk with intermittent explosions, diagrams and lantern slides, T. J. Powell addressed the Trinity College Science Club last night on Explosives. Dealing with the historical side of the subject, the speaker briefly outlined the discovery and practical applications of explosives from the invention of gun powder by Bacon, up to the present-day manufacture and use of high explosives.

He drew a distinction between "propellants" and "explosives" proper, the former being used only in guns and rifles, while the latter were used for shattering and blasting work of all types. Mr. Powell went on to outline briefly the properties, good or bad, of the main explosives in modern use, and showed in general how these properties are observed. After describing the methods of a modern plant in England, the speaker succinctly observed that the only property which they all had in common was the ability "to go off at any moment".

Straw Vote Forecasts Results

One of the things worthy of study before the elections are completely forgotten is the relationship the results of the straw vote, conducted by The Varsity, bore to the general results of the federal election.

One significant fact has to do with the number of eligible voters and the percentage who voted in each case. In the straw vote on the campus about 68 per cent of the eligible voters presented themselves at the polling booths. In the federal elections the proportion of the electorate who actually cast ballots was around 55 per cent. The student vote was merely an expression of opinion. The federal election was a national issue. The only fact deducible from the above figures is that the student body is more concerned with the political situation than the people who pay the taxes.

Another factor which appears significant is that the student vote was almost entirely split between the two old parties, Conservatives and Liberals. The newer parties, such as the Reconstruction and C.C.F., received relatively little support on the campus. In the federal election they fared likewise. In this regard the student vote was very indicative of the federal results.

The one place in which the two votes differed was in their respective treatments of Liberal and Conservative parties. While the straw vote gave the Conservatives a very slight plurality the federal vote gave the Liberals a decided majority. The reason for this difference is chiefly the fact that at the present time the greater number of students at the University are from the city of Toronto. The city of Toronto elected but two Liberals. If this is taken into consideration, the vote on the campus definitely forecast the results of the federal election. Most of the Liberal support came from outside the city. About half the students came from outside the city. Therefore the student vote was almost certain to give the Conservatives a majority. The fact that the differences between the two parties was so slight, was an unmistakable sign that the Liberals would be the stronger party when the election results were released.

It appears then that the University students present a very good cross section of the society from which they are drawn. There appears to be one difference, and that a healthy one. It is that the students are far more active and interested in political affairs than the public at large.

Nazi Regime Facing Revolt?

During the past vacation season the usual number of undergraduates and members of the staff of the University visited England and the continent and the opinions they formed from their observations shed a new light on the European situation. Of special interest to us has been the information available from this source on the conditions in Germany. This information is of the kind which the newspapers do not carry—actions and reactions of the masses of German population with respect to the Nazi regime, and no one is more capable of giving this information than the educated men who have travelled leisurely through the country observing the life of the nation.

The most interesting single fact upon which those who have visited the country year after year seem to be in agreement is that Hitler is gradually losing the confidence of the people. It is officially estimated that two years ago about sixty-six per cent of the people were supporters of the Nazi cause while today Hitler is lucky if he possesses the confidence of 54 per cent of the masses.

The Fuehrer's startling advent to power was a direct result of the depression. He promised jobs to the six million unemployed in a program which would rejuvenate his country and revive her former glory. The employment figures which are printed from time to time at least three million of the population are still without occupation, and many of those nominally employed are in the army or engaged in some sort of public work at very low wage. Foreign trade has fallen off and in reality the increase of jobs judged from a Canadian standard is not very great.

His elaborate propaganda machine has had the effect of keeping the minds of the people from their own troubles and fear of persecution has prevented manifestation of verbal disapproval.

But such methods cannot succeed in bringing national prosperity, and in the trains this summer tourists noticed the dejected and tense atmosphere. Smiling faces were few and little conversation was carried on. Storm troopers who were interviewed did not seem to have the same Semitic hatred and Chauvinistic passion that they formerly possessed. Jews were often observed enjoying privileges which are officially banned, without interference. Men of education such as professors and burgomasters who had to make addresses to touring parties did not seem to enjoy making speeches which had to satisfy the requirements of the government, and afterwards they avoided discussing any topic which concerned the nation, as if they feared that something not complimentary to Hitler might accidentally escape their lips.

Hitler's hand-picked army of Black Shirts deal with opponents of the government in a manner which is world famous and needs no enlargement, yet signs of disaffection were more evident this summer than they were last season. To prophesy a revolt in one year, in five years, or in ten years would be fatuous in view of the fact that Germany might become involved in a European war at any time. The observations of summer visitors, however, do not seem to be without a certain amount of significance.

Radio Can Be Overdone?

The radio has undoubtedly proved a boon to the rural population of the country, but one sometimes wonders if the urban dweller does not suffer from too much radio. In the cities escape from the all-pervading radio is impossible. Nowadays even cars, railway coaches and hotel rooms are not considered up-to-date unless they possess some sort of radio equipment.

This constant diet of radio has a slightly detrimental effect upon those who are subjected to it. Many children become so accustomed to studying with the radio turned on full blast that they consider it easier to study that way, a delusion shared even by some University students. It is impossible for any advanced student to give his full attention to his work with such a distraction by his side. It is much more probable that the student finds it pleasant to attempt to read a text book while half his mind is being entertained by the radio.

The most unfortunate effect of too much radio is that one's musical sense becomes dulled. The habit of regarding music merely as a background for a bridge game or a family discussion deprives one to a certain extent of the faculty of concentration. Many students attending the Promenade Concerts found that they had acquired the fatal trick of hearing music without being aware of it in any real sense, and that at the end of a Cesar Franck symphony in D minor their impressions were practically nil.

their use of the radio they would find that their If people would show a little more discretion in powers of musical appreciation would improve.

We can imagine it did come as a bit of a shock to dear old Jelxabot (we can even pronounce it now; you wanna come round and hear us) to find the triple-versed effort which he tenderly submitted in tribute to the great god Champus, presented to the public gaze in sadly mangled state, merely to provide a theme upon which the Feature Editor might base his comments on the recent chaffish poll. Thus we can't find it in our heart to deny him his taking the stand on his own behalf in the case of Jelx vs. R. G. A., tho' the Yorker finds himself embarrassed, in the light of our dual personality, as to just the proper stand he (we) should take on the question. Moreover, we (they, he, she, it, etc.) get such real satisfaction out of this laddy's poetic quatrains that we invariably hasten to send them speeding into print and immortality.

Dear R.G.A. is full of hay,
In dampish state, forsooth,
For in his blast of Friday last
He wavered from the truth.
He labels me an absentee
From those who watched the poll,
When, students' night, loud-voiced did I
The noble Vote extol.

And also, hear, did scrutineer
My fellow-souls among,
For civic pride, ne'er satisfied,
Must help the cause along.

Correspondence

Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

It is my belief that a well written paper deserves more than one pat on the back.

I have been reading The Varsity for a little over three years and wish to start a flow of fan mail which The Varsity deserves. The only fault I have ever found was that editorial which spoke of the suppression of soap box speakers, especially that iniquitous breed, Communists.

Even with this flaw, The Varsity undoubtedly deserves 4 stars.

Yours truly,
A Varsity Fan.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Hart House Theatre

George Kaufman and Moss Hart wrote a very good comedy, "Once in a Lifetime". It is a satire on Hollywood, a very witty satire with some very neat lines. The play is extravagant comedy but the more fantastic it gets the truer does it seem. Nancy Pyper presented this play last night as her first production of the Hart House Theatre. There is still the good comedy but the production drags badly.

There are some very talented and experienced actors in the cast but somehow only Andrew Allan clicked. Mr. Allan, as the neglected author, makes full use of the lines given him. He only moves at the same speed as the play intended. Randolph Crowe, as the honest oaf, slows up the production quite a bit but that is called for in his part. Next to Allan, Crowe is the most appealing actor on the stage.

The play is an extravaganza but as it is presented it becomes nearer to a circus. The lines are there, the situations, but they are not knit into a swiftly moving piece. The director is no doubt hindered in the lack of facilities for speedy scene shifting; there is a large cast to be handled; the play could stand a little shearing. We hope that the production will be speeded up in time for the Students' Night this evening.

It is unfortunate that this, the initial offering of Mrs. Pyper, should lack

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

We have been trying to find some basketball news to pass on to you, but so far have gathered only a few glimpsings. Alison Watt of Vic is in charge of the sport, and has been trying to arrange practices, though so far none has come off. Baseball is really rather a side-line sport it seems, by which we do not mean that it can be played from benches, but that no one who plays basketball can play baseball too, and consequently the latter is neglected. Vic and St. Mike's are the only two colleges who enter teams, but they get a lot of fun out of it. Vic won the championship last year, but most of their team have graduated, so they will have to develop some new material.

Incidentally a small triumph has been scored for our own peculiar type of basketball. For the last few years, most teams in Ontario have been playing by the rules laid down by the American Physical Education Association, but these rules have not allowed for the Canadian division of floor-space into three parts, with each player allowed two-thirds of the floor. They allowed only for players playing one-third of the floor, or all of it. But this year the new rules make special mention of our Canadian system, so we have at last gained some kind of recognition.

The tennis team was out practising today, but seems to have suffered a let-down. The girls will leave Thursday afternoon for London, to do or die for dear old Varsity, with a hullabaloo. It has been learned with some regret that Ruth Fishleigh of Queen's will not be playing because of academic reasons. This seems rather a shame because a match between her and Claire Walsh or Ruby Barrett would have been very exciting. McGill are dark horses, because this is the first year they have sent up a team, and they will bear watching.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crocker

As yet very little has been said in this column about the big Red football team from down Montreal way. This is quite natural as in the last couple of years the McGill squads have been more or less fillers-in—they just didn't rate consideration as contenders for the intercollegiate title. However things have a slightly different hue this year. It seems that the advent of a new and quite capable coach has worked wonders, so much so that the Redmen will march out on the field of battle on Saturday as monarchs—at least monarchs for the time being. At first glance the new position of the Red and White crew in football circles is hard to explain as this year's squad is struggling along without the services of Don Young, that famous old Redman himself who was almost an institution on McGill's football aggregations, and that sensational newcomer of last year, California Joe Smith. It might possibly be that in the last few years the Redmen have placed too much of the burden on the broad and willing shoulders of the genial Young. The departure of Young may have been the cue for some of the others to discover themselves. In California Joe Smith McGill boasted of a starry footballer who knew all the answers on the gridiron. However, Joe had a habit of becoming undone all of a sudden. At any rate the McGill crew has risen to the occasion and have found that Young and Smith aren't indispensable.

At the present time the Montreal gridders are top dogs in many ways. Two of their members are at the top of the scoring list for the college circuit. The Red squad itself is the highest scoring outfit in the intercollegiate series to date and promise to stay at the top. The Redmen undoubtedly pack a lot of power in their line-up. Proof of this was first demonstrated when Coach O'Brien's charges walked all over R.M.C. to chalk up 35 points. Thirty-five points is a huge total when one considers that they were scored against the Cadets, who always manage to muster a tough, durable lot to enter the football wars. Then O'Brien's charges outlasted Reeve's Queen's and followed this surprising victory by walloping the Mustangs to the tune of 21-7 right in London. Truly an impressive record, if you ask us. Riddell, Deynan, Ruschkin and company are a discouraging lot to move against for yardage and with the return of Herb Westman, their star kicker they're becoming an aggregation which has winning ways.

After an extra day of rest Warren Stevens had his big Blue squad out for a light workout yesterday. A cursory glance at the faces of the Blues at once revealed that they had been "taken through the mill" down at Kingston. However, the boys have left all thoughts of Kingston behind for the time being and to-day they'll concentrate on tuning up for McGill. Coulter, Witzel and Isbister were absentees last night. Coulter, although troubled with a leg injury, may be out for Saturday's game. Isbister is down with a knee injury while Witzel is expected to prolong his sojourn in the hospital for a few days yet. His injury is a little more serious than those of the others. Hugiie Marks substituted at quarter for Coulter last night and the squad was taken through a very light workout with Marks getting a lot of kidding as he tried to emulate Coulter's deceptive play. The good spirit which was prevalent among the Blues last night will help to make those bruised spots disappear a lot sooner than expected.

Tomorrow the senior tennis matches get under way down in Montreal. The Blue team was made up of five instead of four men, George Johnston being the addition to the team of Pigott, Crowson, Eaton and Tomlinson. Johnston holds the championship of the University of New Brunswick and should be a valuable asset to the Blue cause. Johnston will play in the singles matches with Tomlinson being moved to the doubles team where he is expected to team up with Pigott, the U. of T. champion. Under the guidance of Coach Dr. Art Ham, the Blue hopes for a tennis title have risen this year but unless members of the Blue squad display better form than they did in the interfaculty tournament they'll come home empty-handed again, we fear.

SOCCER COMMENCES AS DENTS TRIUMPH

Hold Advantage in Play Throughout Entire Game

STAPLETON LEADS SCORING

The interfaculty soccer season opened with a smashing victory for Dents over their Trinity rivals on the front campus yesterday, Ozzie Dykes refereeing. The final score of 8-0 gives some idea of the energy with which the Dentistry team carried the game forward. Trinity, however, did not seem to lose heart and maintained a stiff defence even when the score was decidedly against any chance of success.

Stapleton led the scoring for Dents with three goals to his credit in the first half, L. Mason contributing two. Valiquette added 2 and Brown 1 in the latter part of the game, making in all the final score of 8. Mason's second goal was headed in on a centre by Stapleton.

The advantage in play was held all through by the Dents squad and was maintained no doubt due to their better team work and organization in their attacks on the Trinity goal.

Dentistry: Cowan, Mason, Ballaff, Brown, Weslake, Mackie, Pon, Valiquette, Stapleton, L. Mason, Linkin. Trinity: Delaney, Huson, Clark, Kingston, Hindcliffe, Somerville, McAdani, Powell, McLeland, Gardner, Spence, Crean, Seggie.

JUNIOR MEDS SCORE DECISIVE VICTORY

Win Over Faculty of Forestry in Interfaculty Rugby Game

SCORE IS 10-0

Using powerful plunging tactics the Rosso-coached Junior Medical rugby squad yesterday hammered the Forestry team into submission in a colourful game on the back campus. The final score stood 10-0 in favour of Junior Meds.

In the first quarter Junior Meds blocked a Forestry kick on the latter's fifteen yard line. From here Bob Barron succeeded in plunging over the goal line for a major score which was not converted. In the second and third quarters the Woodmen took a new lease on life and pressing the Meds back within the shadow of their own goal posts, almost succeeded in scoring a try when a Lein-to-Cowan pass for thirty-five yards placed them on the Junior Meds eight-yard line. Clinkett ran an attempted placement out and promptly kicked on the first down to put his team out of danger.

Gathering power in the fourth quarter the young doctors backed Forestry to their one-yard line in a series of power plays and quarterback McGogey sneaked over for another major, which was not converted, to end the scoring for the session.

Clinkett's sensational plunging, together with that of Barron were important factors in the whitewashing suffered by the Foresters. The plucky resistance put up by the

ORGANIZATION MEETING OF VOLLEYBALL CLUB

Youngest Interfaculty Sport Has Made Rapid Progress

Another University fall sport to swing into action will be the Volleyball club who will hold their organization meeting in the Athletic Directorate Room on Monday, October 21st at 5 p.m. Although volleyball is the youngest of the interfaculty sports it has made remarkable strides and last year had an entry list of fifteen teams. New entries are expected this year from Dents, Pharmacy and St. Mike's. The games are played on the upper gym and the schedule runs from October until December. All faculties and colleges are urged to have representatives at Monday's meeting as groupings and practice hours will be arranged.

Butler University—in an effort to solve the eternal problem of matrimony, Butler is now offering courses in successful marriage. The professor is a 39-year-old, twice-wedded attorney, who has a wide experience in divorce cases.

Treemen was aided by Lein's kicking and passing. With Larson and Cowan on the receiving end Forestry completed two beautiful thirty-five yard passes in the third and fourth quarters.

Junior Meds: Flying wing, Moore; halves, Carveth, Clinkett, McKone; quarter, McGogey; snap, Allen; insides, Broadhead, Muller; middles, Barron, Graham; outsides, Belton, Lindsey; subs, Fleming, McCullough, Craven, Mahood, Marchand, Penfold and Jamieson.

Forestry: Flying wing, Sexsmith; halves, Ballantyne, Lein, Barron; quarter, Dargavel; snap, Grinnell; insides, Hyslop, Bayley; middles, McConnell, Bickertsh; outsides, Larson, Cowan; subs, Chalk, Reynolds.

HIGH HOPES HELD FOR TENNIS STARS

Intercollegiate Tournament will be Held in Montreal

FACE STRONG OPPOSITION

Now that the curtain has fallen on the interfaculty tennis tournament, the University of Toronto racquet wielders, consisting of Pigott, Eaton, Crowson, Johnston and Tomlinson, are anxiously awaiting the beginning of play in the coming intercollegiate tournament to be held at the Club Canadien d'Annisie, Montreal, October 17th, 18th and 19th.

Dr. A. Ham feels that his charges will show well in this year's net classic. Every member of the outfit is a polished court performer in his own right and capable of returning ace for ace, smash for smash and lob for lob with the best of net-men. As a result there is a high pitch of confidence in the Blue and White ranks.

The Toronto netmen will take the court with the following lineup: Pigott leading the singles parade, followed by Crowson, Eaton and Johnston respectively. The number one doubles team will show Pigott and Tomlinson, with Crowson and Eaton comprising the second doubles combination.

However, the opposition will be as strong as ever. Queen's shapes up well with their squad of Hunter, Chaput, Fisher, Finlay and Savard. McGill, the present holders of the cup, boast the presence of Bob Murray, the intercollegiate singles champion, who is easily the outstanding singles performer in this constellation of net artists, in their lineup. He is favoured to retain his title. The remainder of the McGill team

SWIMMERS HOLD INITIAL PRACTICE

Many of Last Year's Swimmers Are Still Eligible for Competition

AMERICAN TRIPS ARRANGED

A turnout of about forty expert swimmers marked the initial practise of the intercollegiate swimming club held in Hart House pool last evening. The combined efforts of the pick of last year's intercollegiate swimmers and an unusually capable crop of freshmen swimmers will, it seems, ensure a successful year.

Last year's swimmers still remaining on the competition lists include such aquatic notables as the McCatty brothers, who seem to be going better than ever this season. Winston McCatty is one of the neatest free style swimmers in Canada, as well as a consistent breast-stroke performer. Cressy can always be relied on to deliver the goods in the back-stroke races. Other swimmers from Trinity College, which seems to contain the cream of the swimmers, include Russ Dilworth.

New swimmers have been acquired from many sources, notably U.T.S. and the various Y.M.C.A.'s of the city. Arrangements have been completed for several outside trips, including two to the United States. The first is scheduled for the week-end of January 10th and will take in Harvard and Springfield.

The other American trip is slated for the following week-end. The team will be in Buffalo and Rochester for the Friday and Saturday evenings of that week.

Eaton Auditorium

Gertrude Huntly's piano recital at Eaton's Auditorium covered a wide range of composers though it was very little varied in mood. The selections were rather in the line of Debussy's Reflets Dans l'eau—delicate rather than powerful. This, however, took nothing from the finished artistry and the technique of the pianist, but rather limited the extent of her interpretations. The Prelude from Cello Suite C major by Bach was outstanding for the touch and outstanding skill of the pianist.

Fantaisie by Chopin, and several compositions by Brahms were charming but would have been better for contrast. Indeed, this writer feels that the music didn't seem to fill the hall properly. More was needed which indeed the pianist seemed capable of, but which was lacking from the program.

Apart from this the program was an enjoyable one, although as we have hinted, scarcely outstanding. In this case the work of the pianist transformed the somewhat unvaried fare of the evening by playing that was at all times good, by her skill in fingering and by her understanding of the rather meditative yet light mood of the pieces.

school in Ontario and an even larger response than in former years is expected.

The tenth annual Convention of High School Editors of Ontario is organized and run by the members of Sigma Phi, Women's Journalistic Fraternity. The fraternity arose out of the Women's Press Club and was started ten years ago. At that time Sigma Delta Chi, the men's journalistic fraternity, organized the High School Editors' Convention, with which the women helped. Two years later it was taken over by Sigma Phi and has been run by the women ever since. This year the Varsity men's Press Club has offered their assistance. It has been suggested by delegates in previous years that the convention be organized quite independently by its own members, but this has not seemed feasible because of the great distances separating the delegates and the lack of any centralizing agency.

As in former years, the convention will be addressed by excellent speakers, both academic and professional. Teachers who have been intimately concerned with the problems of editing a magazine, and business men who are well known in printing and publishing, will speak on the subjects with which they are familiar. The students will conduct their own discussion groups, under experienced leaders, to discuss particular problems and give each other help and advice. The addresses will include such topics as short story writing, features in the school magazine, advertising, art, format and the task of the all-important editor. Discussion groups will deal with circulation and finance, make-up, art, photography and other practical problems.

The convention programme is not entirely filled with speeches and discussions and some less intense amusements are being arranged. Part of the bers of the Spanish Department think it would be a splendid thing not only for the students but also for those Spanish-speaking people in the city. However, the expense attached to such an enterprise would be too great to be borne even by the greatest audience that could be expected. It was suggested, however, that the expense could be somewhat allayed if the films could be imported from New York at an absolute minimum of cost, because in that city the Spanish colony has its own theatre, showing only films in their own language.

The success of the French moving pictures at the Hollywood Theatre warranted the bringing of another series, those films now being shown every Saturday morning. Although the attendance last Saturday was considerable, it was not as large as was expected. A large part of the blame is being placed on the time of the showing. Saturday morning is not very convenient to a large number of those interested. The French Department, however, is contemplating engaging a theatre for a whole day and showing "La Mater-nelle", a film now enjoying a successful run in New York. This picture, according to Miss Macdonald, "is a sensation of the film world. In artistic value, in unusualness, it reaches the heights attained by 'Mädchen in Uniform'."

If the present series of French movies is successful a second series will be brought. These pictures are of great value to students of French because even if they do not understand every word their ears are attuned to French sounds. Also they will get a variety of vocabulary impossible to get in any other way. Two films have been added to the original list of the first series, "Knock" by the celebrated author, Jules Romains, showing the triumph of Medicine, and "Les Yeux Noires", using as its theme song that well known Russian melody, "Black Eyes".

WORLD NOT FACING MAJOR CONFLICT

power oppressing another. So far the League has agreed to aid Ethiopia with arms and to boycott Italy financially, and possibly put an embargo on supplies of certain essentials to Italy. Whether these measures will be sufficient depends on the loyalty with which they are applied by the members of the League and also on the stand which the non-members of the League—U.S., Japan and Germany—take. Violent measures might be applied in the event of these not being effective but it is not in keeping with the League's policy to apply such measures except as a last resort. The League has also the right to loan money to an oppressed nation, and if necessary, to take steps to cut off the food supply of the oppressor.

It is the opinion of Professor Mackenzie that Italy—that is, Mussolini—did not expect to conflict with Britain in Abyssinia. He chose Ethiopia for his objective because it would form a good base for his activities and because the Italian colonies of Eritrea and Somaliland were not sufficiently strong to safeguard themselves.

Regarding the position of France, he gave as his opinion that there is a strong suspicion that she has an understanding with Italy; if France keeps her hands off Abyssinia, Italy will aid her against Germany, in the event of an offensive war by that country.

So far, students who have been dated up seem to be very well satisfied with the results they have secured, as no complaints have been received from anyone who has gone out with a patron of the Date Bureau. A few cush calls come in, such as the man who phoned in yesterday at five, wanting a girl for the same evening, and got her. But for the most part the requests give time for careful selection of a partner.

The Date Bureau application form will be found elsewhere in today's paper. Any student who wishes a new friend among the opposite sex may secure one by filling in the form, enclosing a dime, and addressing it to the Date Bureau, care of The Varsity, Hart House.

a bad thing that the Liberals got such an overwhelming majority and that they will have no opposition."

Gordon Jack, president of the C.C.F. Club, had expected the result but had hoped that the C.C.F. would get nearly twenty seats in the house. However, although disappointed, the C.C.F. will continue with its program and begin preparations for the next election.

"The results simply vindicate my belief in the stupidity of the Canadian elector," the C.C.F. leader stated.

"I believe the overwhelming vote is a protest against the type of government that Mr. Bennett has been carrying on for the last five years," was the summary of Morris Wayman, the University's leading Communist, and he thought that the good showing made by the C.C.F. and Communist parties augured well for the future.

SYMPATHY URGED TOWARDS AFRICANS

Italy's Policy in Africa Has Been Strongly Condemned by J. H. Oldham

ND BLACK UPRISING

A strong plea for the adoption of a Christian-like attitude in relation to Africa on the part of the white races was voiced by Dr. J. H. Oldham, noted authority on that country, speaking in the Music Room of Hart House yesterday.

In opening his talk, Dr. Oldham mentioned that the thing which most amazed him about Africa was the fact that the greater part of it has been brought under European control within very recent years. This rapid colonization, he said, was destined to have tremendous effect, not only upon the Africans, but upon all the white races as well.

Dr. Oldham had a two-fold answer to Italy's insistence that her policy in Ethiopia is merely a repetition of former policies of other European countries. First, he said, there is such a thing as moral progress, and Italy's present policy is a definite setback to the moral advancement of the world. Besides this, Italy, together with the other nations of the world, has made a definite promise not to use war as an instrument of national policy; and her present action is a flagrant breaking of this solemn promise.

Mural Beautifies Theatre Foyer

"The Tempest" Portrayed Uniquely in Painted Linoleum

One of the most beautiful pieces of art yet seen in Toronto, was yesterday hung in the foyer of Hart House Theatre. Fred Coates, internationally known art director of the theatre, has finally produced his unique mural based on characters and scenes from "The Tempest".

The mural is carved out of one solid piece of linoleum and painted to give an effect of combining the best qualities of stained glass windows and worked leather. The mural measures about twelve feet by nine feet. It took Mr. Coates two full summers to complete. The first summer when he had plenty

HART HOUSE GLEE CLUB WELCOMES ENTHUSIASTS TENDERS ARE NEEDED

During the past three weeks Hart House Glee Club has advanced into full activity. At the rehearsal on Tuesday last there were about sixty-five members present, a substantial increase over last year. New music with a marked interest for both singers and audience gives promise of concerts which will be remembered.

Included in this season's numbers are Vaughan Williams' "Back and Side Go Bare (But Belly, God send thee good Ale)"; "Roll the Old Charlott Along"; Two Russian Folk Songs; "The Holly and the Ivy"; along with such successes of last year as "Hey, Robin"; "Down Among the Dead Men" and others.

The membership of the club has almost reached the maximum desired for this year. A few more enthusiasts, however, will be welcome; this is especially true of the first tenor section, where about five voices are urgently needed. While the club hopes to reach a high standard of performance, it is realized that many men have but little singing experience; for those members of Hart House who are really interested in learning more about part singing the Glee Club is an unequalled opportunity.

DARK CONTINENT GROWS DISCONTENT SAYS MISS WRONG

Development Under Europeans and Their Results Traced

MUST CONQUER RACIALISM

Benito Mussolini's Abyssinian Policy is Increasing Trouble

"For the present, we can only think of the future of Africa as a question mark," said Miss Margaret Wrong, former Dean of U.C. women and the founder of the Women's Union, in her speech at the Women's Union on Wednesday. Reviewing the situation in Africa today, Miss Wrong outlined the recent changes in African life: the improvements in transportation and in communication, which have led to increased industrial development; the development, by Europeans, of the country's mineral resources; the administration, by Europeans, of territories where once the native chieftains ruled supreme; and the great work done by the missions, not only in religion, but in education and medicine as well. Many improvements in native life have resulted from these changed conditions: the decrease of slavery, the improved treatment of hired labour, the eradication of ancient superstitions; but in some ways Western influence has been bad. "On the whole," said Miss Wrong, "the natives are in a restless state, anxious over these new developments which threaten to disorganize their lives."

MAGAZINE BARGAINS OFFERED AT SALE

"Something for practically nothing" will be Ross Workman's slogan as he takes up the auctioneer's hammer at the sale of periodicals in the East Common Room, Hart House, today at 12.15. The auction will be rushed through this year, with the result that many good offerings will go to the first bidder. Last year there were many bargains, as magazines worth several dollars were knocked down for less than one, and this time even better values are expected.

Ross Workman always gives free rein to his histrionic tendencies on this occasion, proving that more things have come out of S.P.S. than this world dreams of. Last year he was an inspiring spectacle, red of nose and clad in a natty rusty-green Prince Albert.

Ross's vocabulary is said to be without equal in the University, and he promises all those who are in the East Common Room at 12.15 an interesting time whether they are purchasers or merely spectators.

'Once in a Lifetime' Waxes Loud Loeb and Phillips Do It Proud

There was a sound of devilry by day as the drum accompanied saxophone wailed out its weird notes on Observatory Hill, and several necks were over-stretched peering from Hart House windows. Only once in a lifetime does such a spectacle come to the campus, and it comes when Once in a Lifetime comes to the campus, if the significance is borne in upon you.

Dressed in verdant Pre-Cambrian waistcoats and dainty trunks with enormous hats and implements of war, were strong silent Ensy Phillips and nimble, muttering, masterful Martin Loeb. As they preached their doctrine of non-resistance from this chaotic which the University had provided, the noble

RELIGION LINKED WITH PSYCHOLOGY

Reverend Geoffrey Allen Tells Relationship to Each Other

HAVE COMMON GROUND

The Rev. Geoffrey Allen, speaking on the Contribution of Psychology to Religion, before a large meeting of the Medical Students' Christian Movement at the Women's Union last night, pointed out that contrary to popular opinion salvation means health and that Christianity is primarily occupied with the health of the soul. He stressed the fact that Christianity has a great deal to say about mental illness, sins, doubtfulness, storms within the individual, and the conversion of people to a different kind of life, and in this way deals with the same kind of problems that the science of psychology attempts to solve.

"There is a threshold of conscious behaviour," he said, "with one face turned to the outer world and the other face half consciously turned inward and underneath it the drive of instinctive forces, and overshadowing it the pattern of ideal behaviour. The picture becomes complicated when you have conflict and warfare going on within the personality. Out of the conflict emerge the processes of repression. If those processes go on there results a starved personality."

Discussing dream psychology Rev. Allen claimed that it was a brilliant sort of creative, scientific work to invade the one field of behaviour where there is the irrational, the uncaused and the unknown to deal with. Dreams, he said, allegorized the pattern of behaviour in unconscious life. He then went on to commend the experimental and analytical work that Freud and his followers have done.

INTERCOLLEGIATE TRACK MEET RECEIVES OUTSTANDING ENTRIES

Opposition Tumbles Before Junior Blues

Westsides Put Up Game Fight, Yet to no Avail Against Varsity

PLAYED UNDER LIGHTS

Varsity juniors continued to toss for a loss the opposition supplied in the Toronto Rugby Union, when they downed Westsides 3-0 in a rough game played under the arc lights at Soldiers Field last night. It was the first experience for the Blue juniors under the artificial lights, and with a white ball, but the change didn't affect their playing or mar their effectiveness. The well coached juniors were invincible any time the ball came on their side of the centre chalk-mark, and their goal line was seldom threatened.

On the first play of the game Don Mumford, Hamilton Delta's contribution to the Varsity cause, crashed the Westsides' line for twenty yards. This flashy backfielder cracked the opposition's front wall for long gains all evening.

Sharp of Westsides matched punts with Ed Thompson and Isbister. This same Thompson proved as slippery as an eel to catch when he ran back kicks. At the other end of the field Redpath proved elusive and artful at snaring a

HART HOUSE DEBATE FEATURES SANDWELL

Prominent Speakers to Hear Italo-Ethiopian Crisis Discussed

Plans for the first Hart House debate of the year to be held Wednesday, October 27, were announced last night by the debates committee.

The Italo-Ethiopian issue will be debated, with the order paper reading "This house opposes Canada's participation in sanctions against Italy."

The debate will be essentially an undergraduate affair but several prominent speakers have been asked to attend. Among them are Escott Reid, secretary of the Institute of International Affairs, and B. K. Sandwell, Editor of the Saturday Night.

Speakers for the affirmative are Jack Graham, University College, and Ross Munro, Victoria College. Speakers for the negative are George Ignatieff, Trinity College, and Mervin Minsky, University College.

The debate will begin at eight p.m. and freshmen particularly are invited to attend this initial debate at Hart House for the current academic year. Saul Rae, University College, will be Speaker.

Blue and Whites Expect to Break Records in Sprints Friday

CDACH OPTIMISTIC

Hurdle Race a Feature — Canadian Champion to Compete

On Friday afternoon at approximately 1.30 p.m. the starter's gun will herald the beginning of the intercollegiate track meet at Varsity Stadium. Sixty-seven college representatives will seek points for their alma mater. Sprinters, middle distance and milers will vie for track honours, with powerful field men supplying interest in the field events. Only once every three years the track meet holds forth at the Blue and White Stadium and for this reason it is an outstanding feature on the intercollegiate sports calendar.

According to reports emanating from McGill the Redmen are well fortified and in an exhibition track meet several weeks ago smashed four records while the intercollegiate track meet at Varsity last week produced three new records, all of which points to high class competition for tomorrow's laurels.

"Hee" Phillips put the Varsity track team through their paces last night and an optimistic spirit reigns in the Blue and White camp, and dethroning of McGill's five times champions looks possible.

In the hurdles events Larry O'Connor, U.C. flash, looks like the class and his duel with the Canadian champion from McGill should prove the highlight of the meet. Charles Pocius and big Bob Isbister are entered in the field events, while Conway, who lowered the 880 yard record last week, will hear the Blue colours. For the sprints Caldwell and Ashenurst are entered and the former Olympic flash, Kibbellewhite, will compete in the three mile event. All in all, Varsity has nineteen track men of merit in the field.

HOPE OF LEAGUE IN NEW OUTLOOK

Miss Mary Dingman Stresses Necessity of Purging Selfish Aims

BETTER DISTRIBUTION

The responsibility for leadership which is thrust on those "who have" to aid those "who have not" at such critical times as the present, was the theme of the inspiring address which was given by Miss Mary Dingman to the Canadian Women's Club at the Eaton Auditorium yesterday afternoon. For such leadership to be effective, Miss Dingman thought that the most necessary thing was a spiritual rebirth which would purge the minds of the participants of selfish class and national interests.

Miss Dingman went on to outline aspects of world affairs where good-will and intelligent understanding are particularly needed. In the field of economics, we have learnt to produce so much that the needs of no one should go unsatisfied. Yet never has there been a greater contrast between potential wealth and existing poverty. The masses are ready to follow any leadership which gives them hope of a respite from their present condition and it is up to those people who have the means to study their problem to help to guide them to a satisfactory solution.

In the field of international problems Miss Dingman described the League

Drama Workshop

When the late George P. Baker founded his "47 Workshop" at Harvard some years ago, he started an educational experiment which resulted in the introduction of laboratory theatre groups into many colleges. The theatre was thus linked with the field of higher education, since practical courses in dramatic production were made a regular part of the University curriculum. The resultant stimulus to modern drama has fully justified Professor Baker's daring endeavour.

An increasing interest in drama laboratory work has been clearly shown in Toronto recently. The first experiments of many young Canadian playwrights have, for the past few years, been carried out in connection with Hart House Theatre. Many of these playwrights are recent graduates of the University, who would undoubtedly have carried on their experimental work in their undergraduate days had the opportunity been offered them. Yet no attempt has been made to convert Hart House Theatre into an experimental Little Theatre affiliated with the University itself.

The interest shown in all college dramatic societies is ample proof that the University can provide a nucleus for a play workshop similar to those at Harvard and Mount Holyoke, where all the aspects of play-writing and production are studied intensively and developed by means of actual experiment. Since students in college organizations here have, upon occasion, presented original plays, it is obvious that such a training-ground would be of great value. A play workshop would co-ordinate the efforts of all students interested in developing the drama.

At least two experimental groups have been formed in Toronto during the past year. The Unnamed Players is attempting to carry out Professor Baker's ideas by conducting groups in play-writing, directing, acting, costume designing, make-up, and the technical aspects of stagecraft; Mr. Herman Vanden, a former member of Professor Baker's workshop, and himself the author of several experimental plays, several years ago inaugurated night classes in dramatics, and this fall has formed a Playshop connected with the Central High School of Commerce. The progress of these and similar groups show definitely that Toronto provides ample ground for dramatic experiment.

It is surprising, and very regrettable, that no work has been done to make the University of Toronto the centre of these activities. Surely it would seem to be the logical home for progressive endeavours in this field. The University must not forfeit its place as training-ground for leaders. Baker's 47 Workshop produced its Eugene O'Neill and other playwrights significant in the development of the modern American drama; given capable leadership, a Toronto Workshop could do a great deal in formulating a truly modern Canadian drama.

U.S.A. Neutrality

In the wars of the past the rights of neutral states have always been a difficult problem, and not infrequently they have been violated by the belligerent parties. Whenever a neutral nation feels that it has a real grievance against a power engaged in warfare it can adopt one of two courses; either it can join arms with the opponents of this power, or wait until the conclusion of the war and launch an international lawsuit.

In the Great War of 1914-18, the United States felt that she had been wronged by Germany and as a result threw in her lot with the Allied forces. Should the present European situation develop into a war, the United States in all likelihood will be in a position similar to that of 1914. It is quite natural to wonder if, providing she considers that her neutral rights have been violated, she will again become involved in a struggle not of her own making.

A Columbia University professor of International Law recently gave a timely discourse on this matter to the 1400 women delegates assembled in New York under the sponsorship of the New York Herald-Tribune to consider current events. He emphasized the necessity of the United States co-operating with the League of Nations and stated that already certain commercial interests in New York were protesting the President's edict curtailing trade with Italy and Ethiopia. These avaricious business men do not seem to realize that war involves huge financial losses even for the victor, and that although their interests would be impaired by the enforcement of this edict, such losses would be small compared to those they would suffer if the United States became a combatant.

The point was well taken and if the United States is to remain free from European entanglements, the strictest neutrality must be maintained. If she attempts to take commercial advantage of European conflict as she did in 1914, her toes are bound to be stepped on and the result may cost the lives of thousands of her finest young men. It certainly should be the solemn duty of any government to prevent such a contingency by taking steps to reduce the possible causes to a minimum.

Failure Teaches Success

Throughout family and University life there is a tendency to protect the careers of youngsters. The theory is: keep the young folks on the straight and narrow path, prevent their failing; and eventually they will come to know the value of success—after they have ceased to have a desire to dissipate their health or neglect their education.

This is the theory of censorship in government. "Protect the people against themselves," is the cry. On the other hand, democracy in government and society is saying, "Let the people do as they please. It should be their right to act like jackasses if they want to. Eventually they will know the value of sanity, and through the lessons of their mistakes will make it a point to act sanely."

The University and most parents follow the first theory; they subscribe to the idea of a protected career. And in so doing they neglect one of their prime purposes—to train for life.

The University should allow more students to fail now—while they have no ruling desire to do otherwise. Lift the restrictions against failing, and the student will be more likely to overcome failure. More of them might then go out in life knowing the value of failure and the meaning of success.—Daily Texan.

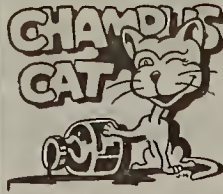

Teaching Humor

This idea, originating in Chicago, that the centenary of Mark Twain's birth should be commemorated by the establishment in colleges here and there of "chairs of humor," seems at first blush to imply a lamentable lack of humor in its sponsors. For, if you can teach humor in the colleges, so can you teach tragedy and piety; you can teach sympathy or the lack of it; you can teach compatibility of temper and cut down domestic strife by fifty per cent.

The gifts of the comic muse, like the gifts of the other eight, are bestowed upon mortals at birth. You could never teach a man to be humorous or to appreciate humor who, like the acquaintance described by Oliver Wendell Holmes, banished all gaiety from his heart and all joyousness from his countenance, and "no doubt would cut his kitten's tail off if he caught her playing with it."

There is this, however, to be said for the idea: if the colleges could take young men who have humor in them and teach them how to use it wisely, they would rid the world of heaps of rubbish.

Worse yet, most of us feel a little superior to the man who makes us laugh. We have a pleasant sense of patronizing him when we permit him to tickle our ribs. The born humorist, therefore, might profit by a course in college and be warned in time to avoid the pitfalls along his path of merry-making. In this field the colleges might do a noble work.—The Creightonian.

The burden of editorial responsibility lies so heavily upon our shoulders that not since the term began have we felt free to allow our attention to wander off the campus and concern itself with matters Torontonians—once our favourite pastime. True enough, of late weeks it has been very difficult to discover any report of civic activities in the local prints. Like all good metropolitans it used to be our custom in perusing the evening dailies, to first sample the trend of the day's news in the headlines, and then turn over to the comics. But since the recent advent of war and election we have found it rather confusing to know whether the front page of the first section or the rear pages of the second section of the Star are intended as that paper's comic supplement. The Tely's comic section, we note, has recently been reduced from three pages to two, probably due to the high cost of beam wireless and cable.

However, being in adventurous mood we last night dared to penetrate the entangling headlines of the front page jungle, pushing on to the utmost regions of the interior in an attempt to discover what's going on in Muddy York. Just in time, too, for we caught the City Council in the very act of passing a by-law prohibiting the use of automobile horns from eleven p.m. till dawn. Noise abatement? Faw! Soon they will be ordering that even curfew shall not ring tonight.

Toronto might well recall the embarrassment which Hamiltonians had brought upon themselves when they legislated that anyone found on the streets after midnight and not wearing a tuxedo would be charged with vagrancy. Not till too late did they discover their error, and ever since, come evening, the inhabitants of the Ambitious City have had to go out one at a time.

The eventual plan in Toronto, we understand, is to ban horn blowing entirely, which is sure to bring a protest of unfair business restriction from Langley's, who display a sign in the window of their swanky new dry cleaning emporium on upper Yonge Street. "Honk horn for curb service."

"Curb the horn and spoil the service." —The Yorker.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Miss Dorothy Walker yesterday directed Get out of your Cage, a one-act play by Mary Ploughman. The scene is laid in the staff-room of a girls' school and all the characters are school mistresses. The dusty and blue-stocked atmosphere was well suggested—possibly too well. The tempo was slow and the pace halting. Surely the most repressive academic life does not reduce teachers to such depths of gloom.

The action centres around the efforts of a young French teacher (Iris Gibson) to break away from the environment which she explains at some length, is stifling her. She favours a friendly colleague (Jean Snyder) with an account of her past happiness, present afflictions and future hopes. She is urged to present her resignation to the head mistress (Anita Foessler) but on the appearance of that grim and grey-faced lady, her resolution wavers and she is persuaded, against her wish, to remain. At this point the curtain falls.

Miss Gibson assumed the curiously pleasing accent of a Frenchwoman with complete success. Her actions were too subdued and indistinct, and there was no variety in her voice. All her faults were only those of inexperience, however, and she held the audience's attention throughout.

Poor stage management hampered all the players and none more than Miss Snyder. She made the best of a colourless character. Helen McEwan as the Games Mistress and Miss Foessler would have been more effective in their clearly-cut characterizations without the distraction of untidy make-up.

Promenade Concert

A grand farewell program has been arranged for the final Promenade Symphony Concert of this season, in Varsity Arena tonight. By popular request, Reginald Stewart has included Tschai-kowsky's Fifth Symphony as the important work of the evening.

Many distinguished citizens are expected—and in addition, a capacity audience anxious to pay tribute to Reginald Stewart, musical director, the orchestra members and the Toronto Musical Protective Association, under whose auspices the proms are given.

During the Prom. Series, which started last May 15th, 117 works by some 60 of the world's greatest composers, have been performed. Among the assisting artists have been Mark Hambourg, world-famous pianist; Berta Crawford, internationally known opera star; J. Campbell McInnes, baritone; Tanara Bliss, young piano prodigy; Boris Hambourg, 'cellist; Gwendolyn Burrell, coloratura soprano; Harry Neidell, violinist of New York; Chief Os-Ke-Non-Ton, the Mohawk baritone; Viggo Kihl, pianist; Elie Spivak and Harold Sumburg, violinists of the Conservatory String Quartet; George Lambert, young English baritone; Etta Coles and Naomi Yanova, two-piano recitalists; Adolph Wantroff, baritone; the London Male Choir; Guardsmen Octet and such exponents of the dance as Boris Volkoff, Saida Gerrard and Hazel and Klatoff.

Thus have the popular "Proms" served this community over a 23-week period, when, with the co-operation of the University of Toronto, the Varsity Arena has been the centre of the summer musical season, accommodating more than 100,000 music lovers, the great majority of whom were enabled to enjoy the concerts at a cost of only 25c (plus tax) each.

By Frank Lamberti

Tomorrow afternoon the vanguard of McGill's athletic exponents will line up for the starter's gun at Varsity Stadium in defence of their intercollegiate senior track laurels and the McGill Trophy. Led by Captain Frank Nobbs, nineteen men will represent the Red and White track men against Varsity, Western, Queen's and McMaster.

With a total of sixty-seven men competing, amongst which many former Olympic stars are found, track devotees will more than likely see a few records go tumbling.

With the anticipation that McGill may again capture the McGill Trophy for the sixth successive year and that the big Red machine may continue unbeaten in the intercollegiate senior rugby series, a large contingent of Red and White supporters will make the long jaunt to Varsity Stadium.

As predicted in this column last week, Group I in the Mulock Cup so far has produced some interesting anecdotes as Senior S.P.S. and Senior Meds battled to a nothing-all score and Dents, defending champions, failed to dent (no dunt intended) the score column against St. Mike's, the sixty minutes of play ending in a draw, while Victoria and U.C. started off Mulock Cup competition with a 1-1 count, giving a count of three draws out of five games played.

Today Father Haffey's double blue St. Michael's gridders line up against "Butch" Alison's Senior Engineers in what promises to be a real battle for first place.

Reverberations from that Queen's-Varsity tilt last Saturday at Richardson Stadium still ripples the intercollegiate senior ranks of both squads; but decidedly when the earmarks of the traditional intercollegiate rugby rivalry are liberally interspersed with solid defensive tactics without the Marquis of Queensboro rules in force we are wont to say "My, my, let's hire Art Donovan as referee".

That the intense feeling of rivalry finally flared up into a major offence with only one party being assessed points to something or other, in any case the official's admonitions towards both teams must have been feeble, for example, when a foul is committed, it is within the officials' jurisdiction to assess a major penalty of twenty-five yards and removal of the player committing the offence, with substitution, but surely a deliberate foul of any nature deserves the logical penalty as outlined above, just the same as the foul of fighting which was provoked on Saturday in which case both belligerents should have been sent to the showers.

However, there is no doubt that the whole situation was regrettable and the next game should more than prove to be the outstanding sporting event of the 1935 season with all the colour and glamour of a clean and valiant exhibition of what intercollegiate sport typifies.

Four men of the University of Toronto rugby squad have been chosen to play for the all-Ontario team which meets a similar aggregation of stars from Quebec at Oakwood Stadium this Saturday. The lucky men are Kyle, Stoddard, Hilliard and Coughlin.

By swimming 100 yards in 54 1-5 seconds Bob Pirie, Canada's outstanding free style swimmer, last evening broke the Canadian record for that race. The occasion was a farewell swimming meet held in honour of Tommy Walker, who is leaving shortly to assume new responsibilities in Winnipeg.

Another Canadian record was set by Jed Clawson, who swam the 200 yard breast-stroke race in 2 minutes, 38 seconds. Visiting aquatic stars from the Dolphinets and Hamilton Aquatic Club added great interest to the meet.

At the close of the races Bob Pirie presented the well-known coach with a replica of the Barker Gold Trophy, which Pirie has won on several occasions under Tommy's able coaching.

Giving the boys from Pharmacy a "dose of their own medicine" Wycliffe playing a fast and heady game, outscored their rivals two to nil. The play ranged from end to end with both teams looking to be evenly matched.

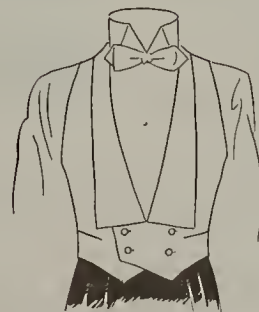

Toone opened the scoring midway through the first period when he kicked the ball past Gilbert in the Wycliffe goal and gave him no chance to stop it. There was no further scoring until Fairweather registered late in the second half. Wycliffe missed several good chances to add to their total when they "blew" their corner kicks, several missing only by inches.

Sully, the druggists' captain, who starred throughout, led many fast rushes, but they were turned back by the strong Wycliffe defence. Pharmacy's last minute rush gave the Theologians some excitement but Ruch in goal held lacrosse series.

In the second quarter, a Westside fumble, a long plunge by Mumford, placed the ball on the Westsides thirty from where Huston, on an attempted drop, kicked Varsity's second point.

Huston tried his specialty, the drop-kick, but it was blocked and the danger was over. Towards the end of the half Thompson made the best play of the game when he ran back a kick thirty yards, shaking off six tacklers during the journey.

Westside's blocked another Varsity kick when the Blues were in a position for a single soon after the last quarter started. Varsity threatened again near the end of the game when Owen went Usatis at quarter handled the Blue kids to perfection. He was given good support on the plunges by Mumford and Owen. Bull tackled well at his outside post. Thompson was a standout all evening with his all-round playing. Sirdevan was a tower of strength on the line.

lowers have done along this line. "In discussing psychology and religion," he continued, "one had to find the answer to the question, 'What can psychology do for religion?', and conversely, 'What can religion do for psychology?'" In answer to the former, Mr. Allen said that psychology could do two very big things for religion. First it could direct the mind of the person inward to help himself and second, direct it outward to help other people. While religion could aid psychology by bringing the individual into an environment of mercy, into a realm of forgiveness where they can talk their minds with no fear of consequences.

In conclusion he said that the last resort and the ultimate goal in religion and psychology is to have society go out living lives of greater enjoyment and no longer needing to care about self.

of Nations as an attempt to bring the world from a condition of anarchy into a style of international law and order by providing a means of solving international difficulties peacefully.

The League also must provide machinery for peaceful change and must not merely perpetuate an unfair status quo. Miss Dingman illustrated this point by referring to the dissatisfaction with which the Oriental races regarded the present immigration laws of western countries.

COATS' UNIQUE MURAL COLOURS THE FOYER of free time he drew a full sized sketch. This last summer he worked in the linoleum proper and finished the whole thing only two weeks ago.

Mr. Coates explained that he did scenes from "The Tempest" because that was the first play that he professionally designed. This play was directed by Bertram Forsythe and received recognition all over Europe; pictures of the production were clipped and sent from Rome.

People who have seen the art director's beautiful wall piece have suggested that similar works of art depicting scenes from other outstanding Hart House productions would be of great artistic asset to the theatre. These could be hung along the wall of the theatre where there is ample space. Such plays as "Peer Gyn" and "Faust" have been suggested as fruitful sources of material for these elaborate and fine murals.

Co-eds at the University of Washington were dumfounded when they entered their class-room one morning and saw a young man nonchalantly shaving himself. In reply to the women's queries, the professor informed them that the student was acting upon instructions. Tired of seeing the girls paint their lips and powder their noses during class, he took this means of teaching an example lesson—Southern California Trojan.

Varsity Celebrates Diamond Jubilee of Rugby Meeting McGill in Crucial Game of the Year

TITLE ASPIRATIONS AROUSE REDMEN TO SUPER EFFORT

McGill Squad will be at Full Strength with Return of Hedge

SUB. LINE IS STRONG

The Front Line Shapes Up Well with Stockwell Back in Form

By Doug Amaron

Montreal, Oct. 17.—Despite McGill's 21-7 win over Western on Saturday, the football club shows no over-confidence. Coach Joe O'Brien has his men keyed to a fighting pitch for the annual classic with Varsity in Toronto this week-end. There is an air of seriousness over the whole football camp, and a week of heavy practices has been scheduled for all the players.

The intermediate and freshman teams have been recruited for the week and scrimmages are a part of the regular nightly session. The wingmen are being groomed in tackling in anticipation of a busy afternoon with Toronto's highly esteemed backfield. Downfield tackling has been a regular feature of the practices.

There were no injuries reported after the Western game, and with the return of Hedge, who suffered a cracked wrist in the Queen's game, the squad will be at full strength. Captain Wigle will resume his old position at snap, taken over by Byrne. Riddell, whose two touchdowns were the highlight of the game Saturday, will remain at flying wing, for which position he is ideally suited. Westman, Anton and MacArthur are the remaining starting backfield men.

EDWARDS WILL BE PRESENT

Montreal, Oct. 17.—A month of heavy seasoning behind them, the McGill track team will entrain for Toronto Thursday, satisfied that it has done everything in its power to prepare it for the defence of the intercollegiate title on Friday. A full quota of 19 men will make the trip and the squad will be well represented in all the events.

Captain Frank Nobbs leads a well-balanced team of stars and near stars that in the past two weeks has smashed four intercollegiate marks.

In the exhibition race two weeks ago the Edwards-Hobbs-Bourne-Amaron relay team cut a fifth of a second off the intercollegiate mark set by McGill in 1931. At the interfaculty meet Thursday, intercollegiate marks were bettered in the shot put, javelin, and 440.

Edwards, a favourite with any track crowd, has shown better form than he has ever before shown at McGill. His record-breaking quarter mile on Thursday (Continued on Page 4)

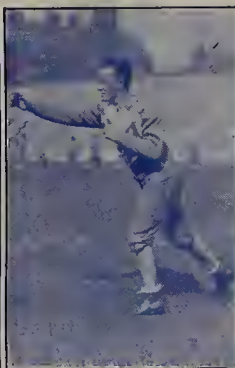

Orphans Strong In Former Years

Varsity Intermediates Replace O.R.F.U. Squad of Olden Days

FINE OUTLOOK THIS YEAR

A good deal of the football at Toronto University is played by the Varsity Intermediates, the Seconds, the fellows who are almost on the big team, yet who are paid little attention when the press reports come in. The old Varsity Orphans will be remembered for their team spirit and their unusual accomplishments in knocking off the better of their opponents in the O.R.F.U. schedule. The modern edition of the fighting Orphans is found in these intermediates who are now playing in an intercollegiate league of their own.

If it is considered that these men are the Orphans, and that if they were still called by that name they would be playing teams like Sarnia and Balmy Beach, the worth of the football players who make up this team will be realized. The league in which they play has such teams as McMaster, Ontario Agricultural College, and Western University in it.

BLUE WARRIORS IN TOMORROW'S STRUGGLE

In the top picture Coach Warren Stevens is seen giving his charges a last word of advice in preparation for tomorrow's game against McGill which will determine the league leadership. Below Captain Bobby Coulter and Gus Greco are shown. Coulter may not start in tomorrow's important tussle due to the leg injury he received in last Saturday's game against Queen's. Gus, shown in a characteristic pose, will be on the field tomorrow as usual doing his bit in the usual dependable manner.

A Message From The President

Today is to be held the Intercollegiate Track meeting and tomorrow will be played our Senior Football match with the McGill University team. I hope there will be a large attendance of students on both occasions, and that while we naturally give warmest encouragement to our own representatives and our own team, we shall give truly sportsmanlike applause to all good play.

We look forward to a fine clean contest between McGill and Toronto. Such has always been the tradition of our generous emulation. Our team will play its utmost to the very last minute.

We expect to welcome to our stadium, the new Principal of McGill University, Mr. Arthur E. Morgan. Let us make him realise that he is among friends and well-wishers, who bid him Godspeed in his important educational task.

Sincerely yours,

H. J. CODY, President.

BLUES MUST WIN TO STAY IN RACE FOR FIRST PLACE

Stevens' Charges Riddled by Injuries but Are Still Powerful

GRAY REPLACES ISBISTER

Varsity Has Forwood Pass Down Pat; Marks Near Perfect

This Saturday Stevens' injury-riddled senior squad play host to the league leading McGillsters in what bids fair to be one of the best gridiron tilts of the season. Starting the year with a third string club Joe O'Brien's men have won two straight games and a win this week-end will put them well out in front in the race for the title. Saturday's game marks the half way point of the intercollegiate schedule and the outcome is of vital importance to both teams, not to mention the third place Tricolour, 1934-35 champions of the college union.

With Bobby Isbister forced to watch the game from the sidelines Cam Gray is expected to take over the kicking duties. If he directs his punts as well as he does his placements Herbie Westman will have a real duel on his hands in this department. Gray is the third high scorer in the union and this opportunity may put the heady backfield back in the lead.

The forward passing of Hughie Marks has been just short of perfection in this week's practices and with Connelly leading the receivers the McGill defence will have to be alert or the yardsticks will be constantly on the move. Lynch at outside has shown no mean ability in snatching the oval out of the air of late.

Once again we refute the statement that Varsity is weak along the line and as proof point to the fact that the (Continued on Page 4)

Varsity, McMaster To Play Saturday

Winner to Take the Lead in Intermediate Race

GAME IN HAMILTON

The powerful Varsity Seconds run into their stiffest opposition of the current football season when they encounter the highly-touted McMaster squad at McMaster Field on Saturday. The "Macs", last year's champions, have another formidable array this year. They have lived up to advance expectations in their two games so far, smothering Western 39-1 and downing the strong Aggie crew 13-3.

While the Blue team's scoring record is not quite as impressive, being 30-5 against Western and 3-0 against Guelph nevertheless they loom up as serious threats to the supremacy of the Hamilton squad.

Unfortunately the Blues will not be entering the fray at their full strength. Barry Gray, starry quarter, may be with the Big Blues against McGill this Saturday due to injuries to Bobby Coulter and Whitey Miller. Gray played a major role in last week's 30-5 victory and will be sorely missed if he is moved up.

FIRST OPEN TRACK AND FIELD MEET AT VARSITY STADIUM TO-DAY

Mulock Trophy A Coveted Prize

Mute evidence of rugby history in the last four decades at the University of Toronto, the Mulock Cup stands foremost as an evergreen memento of football's former greats, clothed in the shielded plaques of silent testimony.

As the scroll is unfolded, we delve through the benign years which have rolled by, sweeping in their wake into the abyss of memories from the first champions until the recent one of last season, a veritable history presents itself. From its very inception the Mulock Cup has been the most sought after trophy in interfaculty competition, and the door of interfaculty rivalry has been opened to many, but many also have been turned aside by the fickle turns of fortune.

It was in 1894 after the formation of the University of Toronto Athletic Directorate that Sir William Mulock first presented the trophy for interfaculty rugby competition and since then many have been the challenges thwarted and successful.

Redmen Again Are Favoured to Take Laurels This Afternoon

BLUES STRONG IN SPRINTS

Varsity Stadium this afternoon will be the scene of the first open track meet in intercollegiate history. Since 1899 the intercollegiate track meet has been a three-cornered struggle between McGill, Queen's and Varsity. This year competition has been extended to include all universities and as a result McMaster and Western are sending teams.

McGill are stronger than ever, which means that only an upset will deprive them of the championship. The Redmen have held the track title since 1930, and their ranks have not been seriously depleted since last year.

McMaster have several outstanding athletes on their line-up, including Anps, pole-vaulter who competed in the last Olympic games. He is an almost certain point gainer for Mac.

Sixty Years of Rugby

This year the University of Toronto Rugby Club celebrates its 60th anniversary and enjoys the enviable reputation of being one of the oldest organizations of its kind in the Dominion of Canada as well as being one of the most successful in the realm of the gridiron pastime. In the year 1875 the first rugby team to don the Blue and White uniforms of this University trotted out onto the field to engage the Argonaut Rowing Club in a game that proved the making of history. Both these clubs exist today and still carry on the traditions of the sport which found its birth on the 20th of November of that year.

At that time the game was not like that which we call football today but it was an embryo of the king of sports which through many changes and stages has become the thrilling contest which we now witness every Saturday afternoon at the finest stadium in the country, a stadium which has been erected as a result of the universal interest in this most thrilling of all sports.

It is fitting at this juncture to bring in the name of a man who has done more, perhaps, than any other individual in the interests of sport at this University. The present Chairman of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto, Dr. D. Bruce Macdonald, for over 30 years Headmaster of St. Andrew's College, can be credited to a great extent for the erection of the Stadium, the Varsity Arena, and Hart House as well as the creation of the Interfaculty Rugby League and the donation of the Mulock Cup by Sir William Mulock, the present Chancellor. This same personage managed the U. of T. rugby team in 1895 when Varsity won its first Dominion championship.

Although we cannot be positive of the rumour as fact, we have been informed that Varsity won the game with Argos sixty years ago. Be that as it may, the most striking point of interest in this connection is the change which the rules have undergone since that memorable day. Probably English rugby has more similarity to the present game than that played in 1875. Nevertheless, the changes have taken place, and we think not to the detriment of the spectacle we now see on the gridirons of Canada.

It is with a feeling of pride that we point to the part played by the University of Toronto, its players and officials, both while actively participating in the sport and during later years of maintained interest, in the development of the game through its regulations and organization.

Few things, if any, can stand the ravages of time and rules of football are no exception. In that now dim and distant past the rules employed differed materially from the present code which governs this sport. The posts were placed at opposite ends of a field 200 yards in length, necessitating many a marathon for a major score. The number of players was unlimited. At times a lengthy lineup was what saved the day for an injury-riddled team because little or no precaution was taken to guard the physical well-being of those who dared to don a uniform and enter the melee.

The ball could not be carried but had to be bounced, batted or dribbled along the field. Hacking, tripping and charging from behind was the order of the day. These forms of expression of defensive tactics were considered as the fundamentals and played an outstanding part of the training and practice. Padding and protection of any kind as part of the uniform were not considered a necessity worthy of attention. At the inception of padding it was found to be more of a hindrance than a help because of its unwieldy bulk.

The first international matches were staged in 1879, featuring a clash between Varsity and the University of Michigan. Then it was that Canadian players received their first initiation into the type of play resembling that which they now use. The boys of that day and age must have been extremely apt pupils because when Michigan formed up they used the present snap system instead of the old scrum or scrum or scam. Quick to learn, Varsity adopted the same system and were successful in holding the athletes from Ann Arbor to a draw. In the following year they lost in Toronto. It may have been a case of self-consciousness caused by the presence of friends and family but at least they made a debut. Since that time the memorable record of the University of Toronto is worthy of note. In 1895 they annexed their first Dominion title and since 1898 have wrenched sixteen intercollegiate titles from their fellow students and six Dominion championships as well. Many football heroes have come and gone. Their shoes will continue to be filled by succeeding generations so that there is a possibility of our grandchildren being able to boast of sixteen more titles in the next three dozen seasons.

This year, the diamond jubilee of football at Varsity, we are looking to Warren Stevens and the present Blue and White warriors to bring another intercollegiate title to our venerable halls.

The Team

The annual football revue finds Varsity's 1935 rugby representatives one of the strongest squads that ever stepped on a gridiron to do battle for the alma mater. Ted Reeve, coach at Queen's and noted football authority, says they are the best team to wear the Blue and White in the last ten years, which is saying something when one remembers that this includes the great teams led by Jack Sinclair and Warren Snyder.

BOBBY COULTER, captain and quarter of the big Blue team, is perhaps the best broken-field runner in the intercollegiate circuit. Bobby isn't very big, just 5' 8" high and only weighs 150 lbs. but he certainly can slip past tacklers.

JOE CONNELLY teams up with Bobby Coulter on the backfield on extensions and runbacks. Joe is also found on the receiving end of Blue forward passes.

HUGH MARKS who, along with his mate Connelly, has this year donned a Blue football uniform for the first time is one of the best forward passing stars in Canadian rugby. Hughie stands 5' 11" and is good enough looking to be anyone's football hero. Both Connelly and Marks are Rochester, N.Y., lads registered at St. Michael's.

BOB ISBISTER, 6' 3" and 200 lbs., is the big boy on the Varsity squad. Although only 20 years old Bob is now in his second year as a Senior Blue griddier. Still a kicking star, Bob has now developed into a very effective plunger.

BOB WEBBER, a husky young man of 170 lbs., plays on the half-line and is one of the most dependable men on the squad.

CAM GRAY, a 19-year-old lad, is the placement-kicking star of the team. Cam is an all-round performer on the backfield.

WHITEY MILLER is the relief quarter-back and player of no mean ability. Whitey doesn't get much of a chance to show his stuff when Bobby Coulter is fit and ready but will be expected to carry the master-minding load tomorrow due to Coulter's injury.

MIKE VALERIOTE, a far better than ordinary half, is a player who has had a lot of experience on the gridiron. Mike is a neat plunger and a fine defensive player.

AL WILLIAMS, steady and durable snap of the Senior squad, is a tower of strength on the defensive. Al is supported on either side by brother TURNER and JACK WITZEL, two dependable linemen.

EUGENE GRECO, known to the fans as Gus, partners up with "GASH" OAKLEY at the middle wing berths. Both lads are pillars of strength on the line and when tired are relieved by KUNTZ and McLACHLIN.

JACK HOLDEN and JIM BURKE are the out-sides of the squad. Both are nearly 6' in height and weigh about 180 lbs. each. Opposing backfields admit that the two lads are deadly tacklers.

IVE EDWARDS, LARRY LYNCH and BUCK round out the tackling brigade and what a brigade!

The prize faux-pas of the week was committed by a Western halfback in last Saturday's soccer game. With the flush of victory upon his brow, while McMaster looked on, he called for three cheers for O.A.C. McMaster scowled, recovered and retaliated by giving three cheers for Varsity.—Silhouette.

Something TO THINK OVER . . .

The business or professional man knows the true value of a sound banking connection . . . it is an essential part of his daily life. You, also—when college days are over—will learn the importance to you of your banker.

It is never too early for the student to form this contact. During college days a banking connection may be established which will prove useful now in helping you to build up a "success" fund and as a place to deposit money from home, and of advantage later when you enter business or professional life.

The Bank of Montreal—Canada's oldest Bank—welcomes your account while you are still at college, and—with its long experience, great resources and nation-wide organization—it is in a position to give you helpful service wherever you may live in later years.

The manager of any of the branches mentioned below will be glad to discuss the matter with you.

That Often It Isn't a Student's Brain but his Pen that Runs Dry—causes Failure—in Classes and Exams!

So he invented this sacless Vacumatic, and Parker engineered it to perfection—gave it 102% more Ink Capacity—made its Ink Level VISIBLE, so it suddenly can't go empty!

YES, a scientist in a famous university was amazed to find how pens that run out of ink slow down classes, demoralize thinking, and bring marks that no student wants to write home about.

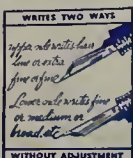

His observations led to the birth of the revolutionary Parker Vacumatic. This miracle pen writes 12,000 words from a single filling—shows when it's running low—tells when to refill! Any good store selling pens will show you how the Parker Vacumatic eliminates 11 old-time parts, including the lever filler and rubber ink sac found in sac-type pens. And due to this, it has double room for ink, without increase in size.

But don't think that sacless pens containing squirt-pump pumps are like Parker's patented Vacumatic. This new creation contains none of these. That's why it's MECHANICALLY PERFECT!

Go and try writing two different ways with its Reversible Point—solid Gold combined with precious Platinum—skillfully fashioned to write on both sides—so beautifully made that it cannot scratch or drag, even under pressure! Do this and you won't let an old pen impede your learning another day. The Parker Fountain Pen Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George C. Vair

TAKE your choice. The battle for the leadership of the inter-collegiate union on Saturday between the Blue team and the crown-crowned crusaders from Montreal looks like an even money bet but just the same we call Varsity to win. Why? First they are playing right in their own backyard and secondly we think they are the best team. In spite of the fact that injuries have riddled the squad in the past week Coach Stevens will field a team that should make the best of them step. Witzel is definitely out while Captain Bobby Coulter and Isbister are still on the doubtful list. Whitey Miller is expected to start at quarter while Cam Gray will in all probability handle the major part of the kicking chores. Barry Gray, who has led his intermediate squad to two consecutive victories, will remain with the Blues while the seconds play in Hamilton. This week may see Barry get his first chance with the seniors and may he be successful. He has everything that is required in a quarterback.

However, one never knows what is going to happen in a rugby game and don't forget that the same officials who were with us in Kingston last Saturday are scheduled to be back on the job this week.

Varsity's chances to annex THE McGill trophy, emblematic of intercollegiate track and field supremacy suffered a rude jolt when Worrall of O.C.E. was declared ineligible since he is not taking a full course at that college. Last week Worrall broke the existing records for the 120 and 220 hurdles at the interfaculty meet. Worrall, a former McGill student, was slated to run against the Canadian champion from that city. However, Varsity still has a good hurdler left in Larry O'Connor, who ran second to the high stepping teacher last week. Bob Isbister, of rugby fame, may be forced to default in the field events because of an injured knee received in that polite tussle at the Limestone City. Yes, we know it's history by now.

Phil Edwards will make his last appearance for the REDMEN when he competes in the 440 and relay race. Better take advantage of the half holiday and amble up to the stadium for an interesting afternoon.

While the tennis team is in London, sports at the University go on. Victoria's baseball teams are hoping to play their inter-year games off next Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday. St. Mike's have practically all their old players back again this year, and from the looks of things now, they will be a serious menace to the present champs at Victoria.

In the meantime the Scarlet and Gold basketball squad is turning out to practice enthusiastically. Marion Best, Muriel Beaton, and Eleanor McIntosh are demonstrating real team-work already. The U.C. Juniors have had their practice hour changed to Friday from 6 to 7 instead of Monday from 8 to 9. Juniors please note.

The praises of myself I now shall sing;

A poet; rarer spirit ne'er took wing.

And if there were, I would not care a dam.

Full many a chalm of fair and classic verse

QUEEN'S TRACK TEAM

Fritz's performance by winning three sprint titles in Kingston Monday, will start in the 100 and 220 partnered by Vic Knowles, Science freshman and former EOSSA sprint record holder.

Another freshman, Parry, is expected to do well in the mile run, while MacDonald in the broad jump looks good to Tricolour supporters. Stevenson will enter the quarter mile and will fill a place on the mile relay, along with Parry, Young, and Running.

McGILL'S TRACK TEAM

day was the fastest race he has ever run at that distance. Edwards is signed up for a busy afternoon on Friday and is in his last appearance in intercollegiate competition. He will be out to set up several new records.

McGill is very strong this year in the weight events, and will be out to make amends for the trimming handed to the squad last year in that department. Record, who last winter won the Canadian indoor hurdles championship, has been displaying championship form in his workouts this fall, and will be aiming at the titles won by Worrall last year.

Of last year's squad only Worrall and Sampson are not with the track team, though several of the men who competed last year were displaced in the trials this year.

In anticipation of a busy and in hopes of a successful week-end, a large number of McGill students are taking advantage of the special excursions to Toronto, and the Red and White will be well represented in the stands at both the track meet and the football game.

VARSITY'S TRACK TEAM

young Neil Patterson, the Ontario sprint champion. Other stalwarts calculated to gain points for the Purple and White are Loaring, a capable hurdler and 440 runner, and Fleming, who struts the 220 and 440.

Larry O'Connor is a highly capable performer in these events and is expected to win these for the Blues. Hamilton and Cooper are also timber toppers of the first order. The latter, along with MacGuire, will contest the broad jump and attempt to better the record which has stood since 1906. Pocius will carry the main burden in the weight tossing events.

Varsity has a much stronger track team than field team and here lies their chief hope for the precious points. Caldwell and Ashenhurst are sprinters of the first order and will give Patterson a tough duel in the sprints.

The outlook in the quarter, half and mile sprints is rather dull due to the presence of Phil Edwards, coloured star from McGill, who was the foreign sensation at the last Olympiad. However, Conway, Sandwell and Wishart are better than ordinary runners in the first two events, while Rankin and Huether will contest the mile. The presence of Kibblewhite, ex-Olympic runner, in the three mile event, lends an air of optimism for the Varsity cause. Forrest will also contest this event. The relay team will be chosen from Conway, Sandwell, MacGuire, O'Connor, Soper and Ashenhurst.

BLUES MUST WIN TO STAY IN RACE

Blues smashed the Queen's line for twelve first downs last week to three for the "gentlemen" from Kingston. The linemen opened up holes big enough to put Man Mountain Dean through in the Limestone City and this is no easy feat against a team which specializes in defensive tactics. The Redmen are reputed to be a line smashing outfit but they will meet plenty of opposition in men like Oakley, Turney, Williams and Greco.

EVERY STUDENT SEEN AS POTENTIAL CITIZEN

Much Impressed by Hart House, by Students' Courtesy, Says Dr. Morgan

By W. B. Reid
"It is better even that students should have a wrong-headed view of political questions than none at all," was the verdict of Arthur Eustace Morgan, M.A., newly installed President of McGill University, when interviewed Friday night.

"I see every student as a potential citizen," went on President Morgan, "and it must be realized that under any democracy every citizen shares responsibilities. I believe that students should be politically minded in the best sense of the term and that they should take an interest in all political questions."

In reference to his new responsibilities as President of McGill, Mr. Morgan said that he found many differences between education in Canada and in England, but maintained that the difference between any two systems did (Continued on Page 4)

MRS. PYPER APPROVES: "STUDENTS' FINE ACTORS"

When questioned by The Varsity as to the possibility of instituting a drama workshop in connection with the University, Mr. W. J. Dunlop, Director of University Extension, thought the idea a very reasonable one.

"I think a course could be arranged somewhat similar to the Physical Training course," Mr. Dunlop stated. "It could be taken along with a pass course for three years and another year might be added, at the end of which one could get some kind of diploma."

"The developments would take some working out but if there were enough (Continued on Page 4)

MUSIC in Hart House

The Friday afternoon series of recitals in the Music Room of Hart House will start on Friday of this week when Sir Ernest MacMillan will discuss "The Instruments of the Orchestra." These recitals are entirely informal and smoking is usually allowed. Their purpose is to present to the students what is best in the world's music and thereby to provide an hour of true enjoyment. They are made possible through the kindness of musicians of Toronto who willingly lend their talent without material return.

On Sunday evening next the first Sunday Evening Concert in the Great Hall will be given at 9 p.m. On this occasion Mr. Viggo Kihl, pianist, will be the artist and will include in his programme Beethoven's Sonata in A (Continued on Page 4)

PUBLIC LIBRARY GIVES CHILD DRAMAS

Misses Trotter and Thompson, After Study Abroad, Work in Boys' & Girls' House

Recently, The Varsity had a conversation with Miss Frances Trotter of Toronto Public Libraries, about the work in dramatics being carried on at Boys' and Girls' House, the libraries' well-known children's department.

Miss Trotter and Miss Jean Thompson have been spending a year in England and on the continent on a Carnegie Scholarship given by the American Library Association. They have been studying methods used in dramatic work in schools or theatres, wherever such work is being done with or for children. In an interview Miss Trotter said that a great deal of work is being done in England, particularly in the schools. The children's libraries make very little effort to interest their patrons in dramatics. In France, the only organization that has attempted anything is the Boy Scouts. In Russia there are professional theatres for children. It is interesting, Miss Trotter says, to notice the return of fables and (Continued on Page 4)

Redmen Win Easily on Points, Though Sensations Come from Elsewhere

McMASTER AND WESTERN IN MEET FOR FIRST TIME

By Clarke Hood

The Red and White band of sturdy track athletes fro m old McGill captured the supremacy of the intercollegiate union for the sixth successive year by easily winning the intercollegiate track meet at Varsity Stadium on Friday afternoon. The Montrealers garnered fifty-six points during the competition as against thirty-two for Varsity, their closest pursuer. Phil Edwards, dusky runner, was the leading point gainer for the winners with eleven. Gord Meiklejohn, prominent hockey star, southpawed his way to first place in the discus and shot-put to gain ten points. The outstanding performer of the afternoon was young Johnny Loaring from Western, who led the opposition home in three final events. He captured the 100 yard dash, the 220 low hurdles and sprung the surprise of the afternoon by leading Edwards to the tape in the 440 yard jaunt.

"In the past, U.C. has not given the attention to student publications that such efforts deserve," was the opening comment of Claude Bissell, fourth year English and History student, and the editor-in-chief of the Undergraduate, when interviewed yesterday as to that magazine's new policy. "Last year, however, an extremely fine magazine was produced, one that should inaugurate a definite policy in the college. Along with last year's editorial staff, (Continued on Page 4)

IRON HOOPS ON IRON STAIRS

By D. P. F.

In the small hours of this morning the internecine strife between South and East Houses continued. This time it was South's move. And what a move! The leaders of South House decreed that the large and aged horse (weight 1900 lbs.) that lives in the Stadium should be pressed into service and lodged on the third floor of their rivals' domain. Ponderous and dismayed the huge beast was pulled down Devonshire Place, and like the wooden Horse of Troy, led inside the walls of the enemy. Corridor doors had been safely barred and with tremendous thumpings Dobbin was finally coaxed into the upper regions.

Elated with their success the South-erners sought further amusement by transposing the piano of the common (Continued on Page 3)

Fumbling at Wrong Times Puts Varsity on Short End of 29-8 Score

RIPLEY AND GRAY OUT

Playing without Ripley and Barry Gray, two regular backs, Varsity Seconds were thrown for a 29 to 8 loss against McMaster in Hamilton on Saturday. Loose ball handling by Varsity men was responsible for the seemingly bad showing. At half time McMaster was leading by 11 to 7.

In the third quarter the Blues went into the game ready to fight for every inch of the way, but fumbles at the wrong moments ruined their chances. In the last ten minutes of play McMaster scored two touchdowns that put the game on ice. The final score was McMaster 29, Varsity 8. Mustard and Jarvis played well for Varsity. In spite of the defeat the Blues are confident that next Saturday will tell a different story.

McMaster: McAdam, Moore, Palmer, Apps, Cox, Hibbens, Lennie, Benson, Sepleton, Murray, Low, Campbell.

Varsity: Warren, Bowen, Jarvis, Mustard, Taft, Beatty, Gibson, Van-Allen, Bridle, Powell, Schulken, Jacobs. Officials: Harper, Walker, Lalonde.

S. F. Rae is the 1935 holder of the U.C. Cup, symbolic of the University College singles tennis championship, as a result of his win over Maynard Kert, played Saturday. Rae won in straight sets by scores of 6-3, 6-2, 6-2 in the match played on the courts of the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club, to regain the title held by Jack Brunke last year. Play in the men's doubles will be completed by Monday of next week.

Varsity took undisputed leadership of the intercollegiate union when they defeated a powerful McGill squad 11-7 at the Blue bowl Saturday before 13,000 fans. The Redmen, outplaying the homesters along the line, almost snatched the game in the dying minutes of play when they had possession 20 yards from Varsity's touchline by virtue of a blocked kick but their crashing offensive crumbled at the crucial moment and Coulter took an onside kick which Gray booted to mid-field on the first down to relieve the pressure.

VARSAITY JUNIORS TRIM BALMY BEACH

East-Enders Outclassed as Smooth Working Collegians Take 4th Straight Game

SCORE WITH DROP-KICKS

Varsity Juniors chalked up their 4th straight victory Saturday afternoon at the expense of the Balmy Beach football team, winning quite easily by the score of 7-0. Two beautiful drop-kicks from different angles by Huston paved the way for the victory. The final point was a single by Isbister, who incidentally, played a bang-up game both offensively and defensively.

The east enders were outclassed by a well-drilled team that was functioning on all cylinders. Usatis, at quarter for Varsity, intercepted three forward passes in the last half that pulled the Blues out of a few tight spots. Sirdevan worked like a trojan and kept his Varsity mates pepped up at all times. Thomson and Turner played their usual brilliant games.

For Balmy Beach, Rose, Noble, Hardy and Vautier played well. The Beaches fielded a poorly drilled team that made the only fumbles of the (Continued on Page 3)

S.C.M. NEGOTIATING JOINT COMMON ROOM

The University may have a men's and women's joint common room for use by all members of all faculties, if present negotiations are completed, a member of the Student Christian Movement recently revealed to The Varsity. This group, which is searching for a suitable place, is endeavouring to establish the proposed common room. There are few extra-curricular activities on the campus, save those with a specific purpose in view, such as club meetings, play-acting, etc., which give the men students a chance to meet the women students on an equal footing. Such a common room would fill a long felt need. Victoria College has been recently donated a men's and women's common room by its alumni.

The Blues, without the services of Al Williams, regular snapback; Witzel, inside; and Isbister, kicking half, were forced to shuffle their line-up and the resulting changes made a difference in their offensive and defensive tactics along the line. Consequently McGill made 187 yards through the line as compared to 157 for Varsity.

The presence of Coulter at quarter gave the fans something to cheer over and although confined to the hospital for almost the entire week he led the team for 55 minutes. Connolly gave him a rest when McGill were on the offensive by playing the safety position.

Throughout the first quarter Varsity had the ball in McGill territory for the greater part of the time but sloppy ball handling kept them off the score sheet. At one point in this quarter no less than four fumbles occurred in less than one minute of play.

Shortly after the opening of the second stanza Westman got away a beautiful hoist from his own 50 yard line and it bounced well over the touch-line. Connolly wisely played it safe by carrying it over the deadline to give McGill a point. On the next play Westman pulled down Buck, who was in position to receive one of Marks' long (Continued on Page 3)

SIR EDW. PEACOCK NEW QUEEN'S HEAD?

Name Prominently Mentioned to Succeed Dr. Fyfe as Principal

WOULD FULFIL AMBITION

Kingston, Oct. 20.—For the second time, there is a persistent rumour that Sir Edward Peacock, Queen's '93, will be named principal of his Alma Mater. The first was when Dr. Bruce Taylor resigned as principal five years ago, the second is now, since Dr. William Hamilton Fyfe has resigned the post to become principal of University of Aberdeen. Sir Edward once mentioned to friends that his ambition, when he retired, was to settle in Canada as principal of Queen's.

It is expected that the new principal, wherever he may be, will be sought in England or Scotland. Sir Edward is now royal appointee as Bursar of the Duchy of Cornwall, and is connected with the Bank of England.

University authorities, who have yet to meet and formally receive Dr. Fyfe's resignation, hope he will complete the present session before leaving for his overseas post.

Shame, Varsity Sportsmen!

Friday afternoon we witnessed one of the most interesting and successful track and field meets it has ever seen our pleasure to attend. The occasion was the annual intercollegiate meet and for the first time in history McMaster and Western were competing in senior company. In the realm of sporting activities it was certainly a special occasion. The faculty in order to co-operate and foster a feeling of goodwill between the competing Universities, granted a half holiday to allow the students to attend. Everything pointed to a successful meet. And the meet was a success with one exception. The students did not attend.

This to us appears at least to be an act of ingratitude. Holidays are granted for a purpose, and when the students fail to appreciate the act of generosity on the part of the faculty and direct the holiday toward a purpose of their own, there can be only one result. There will be no more holidays of that nature granted.

Friday's track meet was certainly deserving of the support of the students. Only once every three years does such an event take place at Varsity Stadium. The weather was perfect. Track and field stars known throughout the world were competing. Three records were broken. But the students of the University of Toronto deemed it beneath their notice. Most of them regarded it with magnificent indifference, overlooking the purpose for which the holiday was granted. Others went on hikes, a slightly more objectionable manner in which to spend a free afternoon, granted by the faculty that they might attend the intercollegiate events.

We can scarcely assume that students who will abuse a privilege of this sort will not act similarly about others. Nor can we accept their vocal avowals of loyalty to their University when they manifest such a lack of interest in events concerning the University. Neither can we reasonably expect the faculty to continue their generosity regarding holidays when the purpose for which they are granted is abused.

A Powder Barrel: Military Sanctions!

It has been common in the present crisis to hear people invoking "League Honour" and the "Honour of the British Empire" as a basis for Canada's participation in military sanctions. It should be plain that the vital issue at the present moment is not the honour—or even the existence—of the League of Nations, nor the honour and prestige of the British Empire or of France. The vital question is peace—simply that, peace. We do not deny that the League is the most efficient and the most hopeful organization the world has yet seen for the abolition of war. But we should not be carried away by this fact to a blind acceptance of League policies. Insofar as the League is instrumental in securing peace it is to be trusted. But certain considerations should cause us to pause before following it in the application of military sanctions. It should be unnecessary to point out that Canada is not obliged under the Covenant to adopt military sanctions, whatever the League Assembly may decide.

In the first place, a good case could be made out as exemplified in Current History for October, to show that the primary function of the League has been its use in the hands of France to isolate Germany. At the same time its other major function has been to constitute the chief British weapon for the maintenance of the status quo. The interests of France and Britain in these connections do not require elaboration.

The second contention is roughly this. When the League was founded it was assumed that all the important world powers would sign the covenant. The isolationist position of the United States made the position uncertain at the outset. The recent defections of Germany and Japan make it positively precarious. As long as there are three first-string nations outside the League; as long as there is one potential ally of Mussolini, the path is cleared to another world war.

A possible outline of future events should military sanctions be imposed might run as follows: Italy is blockaded and the Suez Canal is closed. Mussolini, helpless with the canal closed, strikes at the British troops in Suez. With Britain and Italy this occupied the Nazis repeat their attempts to capture Austria. France is alarmed and issues an ultimatum to Germany. Britain backs France against her (Britain's) natural industrial rival, Germany; France backs Britain against Italy, as the price of Britain's partnership. Italy and Germany are then forced to come to an agreement on the division of Austria, the only thing that holds them apart. Hungary declares for the central powers. So does Albania. In conjunction with Germany's new-found friendship for Poland, the way is now clear for Hitler's openly avowed desire to trade White Russia and the Ukraine for the Polish Corridor (keeping, of course, slices of Russia for himself). And so Poland and Rumania, ancient enemies of Russia, also join the Central Powers. At the same time Japan swings into action in the far east—the process has apparently begun already according to latest press dispatches—stabbing Russia in the back. By this time the world is in the midst of the bloodiest, most brutal international conflict in history.

We do not claim to be prophets. We only suggest that events may happen as we have outlined. But we do wish to point out how the application of military sanctions may very easily be the fuse that will fire a whole train of incidents that can end only in the Second World War. The danger of military sanctions lies not in the fact that they are morally wrong, or that they are essentially the wrong line of action for the League to take. The danger lies in the fact that the League is not a league of ALL the nations. Military sanctions mean handing over the destinies of Europe to Germany; and Germany is in the hands of a group of the most fanatical militarists that the heaving agonies of Europe's politics have yet thrown up.

Towards A Campus Theatre

The other day we made the suggestion that a course in dramatic art is something that this University has sadly neglected. The University has answered that they have no guarantee that there would be enough students to make such a course financially and popularly successful. One very important dignity of the University has been quoted as saying that the students are not interested in the drama. We believe this to be a misstatement but we could not prove it so. The point is that students have never had a real chance to show any enthusiasm in this field.

In the past Hart House Theatre has not only neglected but actually snubbed the students. The new director has definitely interested herself in the student body as an integral part of her theatre. But have the students any confidence in Hart House Theatre? We think not. Although the student night was well attended it was nothing like it could be or should be. Again the idea that students are only allowed student rates one night a week is a bit hard to take. The theatre is responsible to the Board of Governors and is, therefore, considered by the students to be a part of the University.

We do not, however, wish simply to be critical of the sloppy fashion in which Hart House Theatre has been run. We believe Mrs. Pyper to be sincere in her desire to interest the student body in the theatre. But we would like to suggest that Hart House Theatre have some one, preferably an undergraduate, as a sort of student director. He would be consulted in the casting of any regular Hart House productions. He would also give a helping hand in all student productions in the theatre, arrange dates, give advice in costs of sets and generally keep in touch with all student groups interested in the drama. In short, he would be a liaison officer between the students and the theatre.

A friend of ours has a mild fascination for words, and makes a hobby of tracing their descent, lineage and general history right back to the original cave-man's "Ugh!" The other evening the pursuit of his hobby carried him to the beginning of the "S" section in the Oxford Standard Dictionary, where he found a list of the many ways in which "S" may be used in abbreviations, such as S.E. for south east, and S.S. for steamship. But it was with hilarious visions of solemn faced Oxford scholars painstakingly assembling the data on "S" abbreviations, that he pounced on one particular item.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Conservatory String Quartet

Last Saturday evening the Conservatory String Quartet played their first concert of the season. A comparatively recent contribution to Toronto's collection of first class musicians, this group has been steadily rising in importance for several years. It augurs well for Toronto's musical history that she now supports two string quartets, each presenting a full season of concerts, for chamber music cannot depend on the popular fancy as the Promenade concerts have done. The string quartet is the highest refinement of musical expression and, as such, requires an educated taste to enjoy its rather subtle beauties.

Let's Go Places

The plays of William Shakespeare run the gamut of human emotions. He was and is the world's unchallenged poet of the drama. But of all his masterpieces, there is none that can approach in fantasy, in humor and in imaginative qualities, his "A Midsummer Night's Dream", which, produced as a motion picture by Warner Bros., will open at the Royal Alexandra Theatre on October 21st.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" is a play of fancy and a plea for fancy. It is a dream within a dream, in which the dreamers themselves form a definite part of their own dream world. Perhaps its greatest lesson—perhaps indeed—what Shakespeare intended to convey is the fallacy of taking ourselves (Continued on Page 4)

Correspondence

GENTLEMEN, THE DATE BUREAU!

Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Since "A Varsity Fan" has brought forward the suggestion that your paper should receive a few pats on the back for its excellence, may I add my little word of appreciation for that unique feature of the paper, the Date Bureau.

When it was first started last year, I was among the first to register, more as a joke than anything else. I was put in contact with a girl whose home was about fifteen miles from my own home town, and we went dancing one night (Dutch, in case you are interested).

The net result, strange to relate, was that the girl was a peach of a kid who had (strangely enough) sent in her name as a joke, and we have kept up the friendship through the summer, and have no intention of dropping it.

There may not be anything unusual about this expression of appreciation, for no doubt you get many of them. But if pats on the back are in style, I just want to say that I think your Date Bureau is a darn good idea.

Yours sincerely,

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

The tennis team has come back from Western, bringing with them the intercollegiate championship, which Queen's has held for the last three years. They played beautiful tennis, had a grand time, and are dead for sleep. London is famous for its hospitality, and they entertained the teams royally. Claire Walsh came through, as everyone expected, and clinched the title, earning ten points on her own hook, or rather racket, but Polly Shaw and Ruby Barrett and Velma Richardson all contributed the points necessary to take the championship.

Fashion highlights: McGill were the cynosure of all eyes in their bright red shorts and blazers, and white shirts. McMaster wore their maroon-coloured tunics as they did last year. The other teams all wore orthodox white shorts or dresses, and Barbara Chubb did not appear in the white flannels which were so much of a sensation last year. Other highlights not quite so fashionable were various Western boys sweeping dead leaves off the courts. It was no easy job Friday morning after the rain. All the games were played on the cement courts of the London Tennis Club, since the University courts were too windy.

The inevitable marathon in the tournament was that between Helen Bryce of McMaster and Romola Girvin of Queen's. It lasted for almost two hours and went on and on and on. It was expected that the match between Sybil Ford-Smith of McMaster and Marg Hart of McGill would also be a long struggle, but Marg was too tired to do much. The McGill girls entered this year for the last time. They travelled all day Thursday from Montreal by bus, slept Thursday night in Toronto, got up at the crack of dawn to catch another bus for London, and played shortly after they arrived, losing all their matches in about an hour and a half.

Jean Atkinson threatens that unless more girls on the U.C. senior team turn out, there will be no senior team. Only one girl turned up for practices last week. This sounds incredible in a college as large as U.C., but it happens to be true. It seems a shame, especially with such possible intercollegiate material. How's about it, U.C.?

University of Minnesota—The university's biggest feat, those belonging to Ray Trampe, tackle, caused a lot of trouble recently when he injured his foot in varsity practice. Taken to the X-ray laboratory, medical technicians found that his foot was too large for the plates available.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George Vair

The officials who handled Saturday's Varsity-McGill game must read the newspapers. Anyhow they were the same three men who officiated at the Varsity-Queen's tea party when the penalties amounted to 120 yards. Saturday's tilt was a kindergarten party compared to the former week-end and yet McGill were penalized 105 yards for their transgressions while Varsity lost 85 yards the same way. Ideas regarding high tackles, piling on and rough play have certainly suffered a rude change in the past week and it is all for the good of the game (also the players).

Some grandstand quarterbacks will have it doped out that Varsity got the breaks and were lucky to win Saturday's fast moving game. But did you stop to figure out the conditions under which the Blue linemen were playing? "Turnie" Williams, regular inside, was shifted over to fill the snaphack position, a job which is no easy task for a regular since the odd mistake will cost a game. Turnie took it and made a first class job of it besides playing a spectacular game on the secondary. Give him credit, boys. Gus Greco, veteran lineman, filled so many holes on Saturday that he reminded us of the little Dutch boy who once saved Holland from a flood by plugging a hole in a dike. Gus saved Varsity from a flood of a different nature but by the same method.

Varsity's intermediate tennis team came through with a triple win in their court championships held at Hamilton last week-end when they captured the team championship with a total of 14 points, the singles title and the doubles. McMaster, last year's champions, netted 6 points, while Western were third with 5. Ken Brunke defeated his team-mate Bob Young in the semi-finals and went on to take the singles crown from Judge of McMaster, three straight sets in the final. Ken Faux and Bob Young combined to win the doubles, breezing home in convincing fashion, 6-1, 6-1 and 6-4.

The senior tennis lights were again forced to bow to the stronger McGill squad in the intercollegiate matches at Montreal. Bobby Murray won the singles championship and was a member of the winning doubles team. It rained in Montreal Friday, causing the postponement of the matches until Saturday and Sunday. Playing on Sunday must have got the Toronto boys down, or was it Montreal?

And what crime had been committed by East House to deserve such treatment? A monstrous one indeed. No less than the varnishing of certain cytological ovals, very necessary in the economy of South House. Unsuspecting, the Southerners had used these ovals in the customary fashion, with the result that several sterna were seriously incommoded. Wasn't the revenge justified?

tional. In the 100 yard final they ran one, two, defeating two Varsity men, including the highly fancied Caldwell, who captured his heat in commanding fashion. In addition to the wins chalked up by Loaring, Patterson captured the 220 yard sprint, and came second in the century and third in the broad jump.

Edwards started the record breakers on their way by clipping 1 1-5 seconds from the previous mark in the half-mile run. In the high hurdles Larry O'Connor bettered the old mark by 3-10 of a second. The javelin thrower introduced a keen duel between Loughren and Moore, both of McMaster, who bettered the old mark by fifteen feet. The previous holder of the distance record, Abe Zvonkin of Queen's, also competed, but couldn't even get close to the sensational youngsters from Hamilton.

The Blue and White athletes proved better than generally rated. O'Connor started the Blues on their way with his record breaking high hurdles race. Truster and Hamilton hopped to first and third in the pole-vault. The performance of the former vaulter came as a welcome surprise to Varsity fans. In the broad jump Cooper just failed to reach the thirty year old mark by 1-4 of an inch. In the half mile run, Conway ran a spectacular race, forcing Edwards to a new record and bettering the old mark himself. This same conscientious runner placed third in the 400 yard race and ran a fast quarter in the relay. Caldwell accounted for two thirds in the dashes. But in both cases he made it very close. The three mile run was productive of a surprise also but this time the highly fancied Kibblewhite was led home by Todd of the Redmen and Forrest of Varsity.

During the afternoon President Cody introduced A. E. Morgan, the recently installed chancellor of McGill, who was given a rousing ovation by the crowd.

WOMEN'S NET TITLE COMES TO VARSITY; FIRST SINCE 1932

Brilliant Play of Claire Walsh
Cinches Trophy, Adds to Her Laurels

COTTEE, CHUBB OF QUEEN'S ARE DOUBLES CHAMPIONS

Eloise Tennent of U.W.O. and Sybil Ford-Smith of McM. Shine in Singles

Claire Walsh of Varsity added another title to her already lengthy string when she defeated Eloise Tennent of Western in the finals of the Women's Intercollegiate tennis tournament. She is now Intercollegiate and U. of T. champion, and junior champion of Quebec, Ontario and Eastern Canada. Her final win was responsible for bringing the tennis cup to Varsity for the first time since Bea Symons, now Mrs. Gilbert Nunn, graduated in '32. She piled up ten points by herself, Velma Richardson earned two, and Polly Shaw and Ruby Barrett won four, to make Varsity the winners with sixteen points. Queen's were second with ten points and the doubles triumph; Western came third with six, and McMaster and McGill tied with three apiece. All McGill's points were made on byes, which had to be allowed them, since they did not arrive until Friday noon.

Claire had little difficulty in her first two rounds. She defeated Norah McCormack of Western 6-0, 6-1, and Evangeline Gervin of Queen's 6-0, 6-2. In the third round, the steady stratosphere strokes of Sybil Ford-Smith of McMaster worried her and she lost the first four games, but then her drives and cross-court shots began to come inside the tapes, and she ran off six straight games to take the set, and went on to take the match.

Eloise Tennent gave Claire her first real opposition. She played a beautiful game but faded in the second set, after forcing Claire to extend herself in the first. Neither girl was very consistent at the beginning. Both lost their first serves, took their seconds and then lost their thirds. Claire then took Eloise's at love, held her own, and broke through Eloise's again with some brilliant cross-court shots, to take the first set. Claire was much steadier, ran through five games, to lead 5-0. Eloise was still hitting hard and well, however, and took her own service at love, but was unable to do any more. Claire took her own service at love, and won the second set 6-1, to clinch the match and the cup.

The doubles team of Polly Shaw and Ruby Barrett reached the finals by means of a win over Western and a bye. They defeated Corinne Cherry and Jean Patterson of U.W.O. 6-2, 6-4, with Ruby putting over some beautiful net shots, and Polly playing steadily from the base line. However, they were unable to take the Queen's team of Helen Cottee and Barbara Chubb, and went down to defeat, 6-3, 6-4. They lost the first set through their own errors and the net play of Helen Cottee of Queen's. The second set was a server's battle, with neither side able to break through, and nearly all the games going to deuce. Queen's led 5-4, when Ruby Barrett began to serve. The Tricolour girls then put on the pressure, and took her service at love, to win the second set and the match.

Velma Richardson, Varsity singles player number two, earned two points with a bye, and a clever win over Beth Fraser of McGill. The McGill girl was brilliant in spots, but was too erratic in returning Velma's lobs. Velma met Eloise Tennent of Western in the third round, and put up a good fight, but was unable to return Eloise's deep drives to the baseline.

have fond summer memories, still comes to us through the mail each Thursday, bringing with a welcome breath of simplicity and sincerity after a week's gorging on the local headlines. The small town streamers aren't so big or so black as the daily variety, but are even more productive of unconscious errors. For instance, in last week's newsmagazine—

HALIFAX EXPLOSION
SPRINTER TURNS UP
He had been running ever since.

It was our fran' Counterfeit who was so annoyed by a news-reel sequence showing a recent polo match in which, according to the commentator, no quarter was asked or given. "Tell me," demanded the Count, "was there ever a game in which any quarter was asked or given?"

All we could do was remind him that, should the Varsity Blues get into the playoffs, his Student Ticket will admit him to the stands only if he forks over another two-bits. At regular games, however, no quarter is asked or given.

At that, the possibility of such additional outlay isn't going to worry us much, until we see what happens next Saturday at Montreal. Supposing they take that boy Anton off the sub-line and really put him to work?

ART, MUSIC AND ORAMA

work, typical of Brahms, is restrained, even austere in style, and hence, requires careful control in interpretation. The players tell a trifle short of this, particularly in the first movement, lacking that unity which, of four musicians, makes a quartet. The work improved as it progressed, however, although there was a tendency toward over-emphasis throughout.

A group of three small pieces, distinctly modern, contrasted with the massive opening number. The group consisted of two exceedingly clever musical satires, punctuated by a rather pleasing berceuse. The first, "Valse Ridicule," was a witty parody of the Strauss-type waltz, and the third, a painfully realistic impression of the modern fox-trot—from the frenzied rhythm of the opening bars to the last carefully calculated discord. Both were ably interpreted, with appropriate gestures, by the quartet. The berceuse, "Ninna-Nanna," was a pretty example of the modern tone-poem. These pieces, by the Italian, Alfredo Casella, show such able workmanship that one wonders why the composer has written very little music of a more substantial type.

The Beethoven Quartet in D, which closed the program, was from all points of view the best work of the evening. In this work, his first string quartet, Beethoven follows the strict formal style set by Haydn and Mozart. Nevertheless it already evidences the dark majesty of his later works. The players gave an excellent version of the work, showing more certainly than in the

Eaton Auditorium

Shakespeare's Julius Caesar is being presented at Eaton's on Saturday afternoons, chiefly for the benefit of Matriculation students. The production is not interesting from a technical point of view and lacks even the clever grouping and scenic effect one associates with Brownlow Card's work.

Easily the best of the cast of sixty was Bruce Honeyford as Caesar. His interpretation had all the dignity traditionally associated with the role. Of the rest of the cast, one can only say that they had their moments. Raymond Card's Brutus was weak. He was one of several who were badly miscast. Cassius (Wilson Knight) was anything but lean and hungry. Frederick Mann as Antony was inaudible during the best speech of the play, "O pardon me, though bleeding piece of earth". He lifted the part of a mediocrity by a clever Funeral Oration.

The costumes were excellent. They were frequently spoiled in the night scenes by the light in which the stage was bathed, a light which never was on sea or land.

The pace was commendably rapid. Because a play is a tragedy, there is no excuse for it to crawl at a snail's pace. Mr. Card's insistence on speed is especially fortunate when the audience is prone to giggle at the sight of Brutus underclothing and when Cassius announces that Brutus has done him wrong.

Students interested it could ultimately be accomplished."

Mr. Dunlop explained that the University would permit him to arrange new courses of this kind as long as the revenue would meet the expenses. That would be the chief difficulty standing in the way of this course.

Nancy Pyper, Director of Hart House Theatre, was also enthusiastic about the proposed project.

When questioned as to the use of Hart House Theatre for such a purpose, the director thought it the ideal place for experimental work in drama. "Students are the logical people to act in an experimental setting, for not only are they in a position to know the dramatic literature of the past, but they are also young enough to have the ambition and enthusiasm needed to make a success of such an experimental enterprise."

Mrs. Pyper felt that students had not been encouraged to act in Hart House because people in general thought that anything produced by student actors could not help but be amateurish.

To overcome what Nancy Pyper thinks is this mistaken idea, she hopes to put on a performance at Hart House this year not only with the entire cast chosen from the students or faculty of the University but also with the sets designed and executed by student architects, engineers and other capable people.

"I am going to make this performance a success," Mrs. Pyper stated. "Once the University sees that there are sufficient students seriously interested in dramas they will be forced to take notice. A chair in dramatic art will have to be founded."

not mean that one was better than the other. "Every system of education," he stated, "has its roots deep in the soil of tradition. I have seen enough of Canadian education to see what a fine growth it is. I am not one of those coming into a new country and trying to import all my own ideas into the system of education in that country."

I am here as an observer and a learner; but later perhaps I can try to strengthen and improve. The things that have undoubtedly impressed me most are the fine spirit of the students, their loyalty, keenness and manliness and their delightful courtesy." This last point was keenly stressed by the President. "I really mean that you know," he said. "Nor do I find it the prerogative of one university. The courtesy of Canadian students gives me the greatest pleasure."

President Morgan stated that, although this was his first visit to Toronto since his installation at McGill, he had been here some twelve years previously, and both at that time and at this, he was much impressed by all that he saw—particularly by Hart House. "I have a great feeling of gratitude," he said, "for the kind hospitality shown me, and am particularly glad that I am able to be here this week-end when our two universities engage in friendly rivalry. I believe very much in such competition if it is conducted in the friendly sporting spirit that it should be."

PUBLIC LIBRARY GIVES CHILLO DRAMAS

fairly tales under the Soviet system. During the first years of that regime, the children were not allowed to read any of the traditional fairy tales. Even now the fables are given a modern interpretation, but the fairy tale plays seem to contain no worse caricatures of kings and queens than in any other language.

At Boys' and Girls' House, all the dramatic work produced is for children's audiences entirely. Here the work with plays must be only a part of the main function of the library, and also there is no constant group of children, since they have little time to spend on acting. Nevertheless, in the past there has been a great deal of work along this line for child audiences and child actors, and in this way the children's interest in the reading of the stories or ballads from which the plays are adapted, is increased.

Among the puppet shows given last year was The Sleeping Beauty, presented by a group of boys. They made the stage and equipment, held by the librarians. Shadow plays and ballads dramatized are quite often used, for instance, parts of the Lady of the Lake were given as a play last year.

At Boys' and Girls' House there is a Little Theatre outfitted with stage and lights, and very informal scenery. Inevitable gaps in the setting are bridged by the children's imagination, and the amount of satisfaction that children get from a simple sort of production is amazing.

STUDENTS RECOUNT FOREIGN WANDERINGS

Seventy-Five Dollars Total Cost of Year's Trip to Toll Brothers

FAVOUR HITCH-HIKING

Any young man, or even woman, equipped with good health and a fair amount of optimism, can travel around the world as cheaply as he can live at home, in the opinion of Leroy Toll, first year Emmanuel student. And he ought to know, if a 364-day, 30,000 mile world tour, with a transportation cost of $75 is any criterion.

The story of Toll's wanderings is one long series of adventures. Starting out from Toronto with his brother Ellsworth, he hitch-hiked to Montreal, from whence he took a cattle boat to England. The boys then invested in a tandem bicycle and camping equipment and went for an extended tour through England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, following this with more wanderings through Holland, Belgium, Germany, and France, to Paris.

Selling their bicycle in the gay city after having chalked up over 3,000 miles on the cyclometer, the boys set out to hitch-hike through France and Switzerland to Italy, in spite of official assurance that such a thing could not be done as nobody used such a mode of travel in those countries.

Staying in Italy long enough to be arrested three times, once as foreign spies, the boys took deck-passage to Greece, and thence to Palestine, arriving in the Holy Land after having spent (Continued on Page 4)

Part time employment during the University session, and full time work during the summer months is being arranged for undergraduate students by the Students' Administrative Council. The work was taken over by that department last year from the Alumni Federation, and has come to be one of the most important of the S.A.C.'s activities, Mr. E. A. Macdonald said yesterday.

Last year nearly four hundred and fifty students were registered and every one was referred to some kind of a job at one time or another during the session. The jobs available cover a wide field of activity, including book-keeping, automobile driving, collecting, janitor work, journalistic work, night teaching, orchestra work, selling, tuition, typing, and waiting on tables. The cover and format will be changed and the motif for 1935-36 will be "strength and clarity, peppered with protest", the editor stated.

GOthic ARCHITECTURE RELATED IN DESIGN TO TUOR FURNITURE

The furniture and interior decoration of English homes in the period from 1550 to 1600, with references to the architecture of the same time was discussed by Miss Ruth Home at the museum yesterday afternoon. Many examples of this furniture, which is made of oak, may be seen in the museum. By distinguishing between methods of decorating, such as inlay work and veneers, the approximate date of the furniture may be estimated.

The lecture brought out the fact that the decorations of this period consisted of the old Gothic style mingled with the new Italian ideas interpreted by the Flemish people

LIBRARY HAS 60,000 TUNES

By Harold Taylor
After responding nobly to questions which have probably been asked of him twice a day for eight years, Fred Waring, one of America's foremost orchestra leaders, was kind enough to extend through The Varsity last night an invitation to all the students of the University of Toronto to come to a midnight show tonight at Varsity Arena. This midnight affair will be a repetition of his nine o'clock Ford broadcast, given at a later hour for the benefit of all the west coast listeners. Although harassed by a continual stream of reporters, press-agents and assorted autograph seekers, and troubled by an eight-hour rehearsal schedule yesterday, Mr. Waring found time to talk to The Varsity about himself and his orchestra. In 1918, Fred and his brother Tom, with Poley McClintock and a banjo player played at (Continued on Page 4)

New Schoolmen Wax Enthusiastic Reception Cordial But Fantastic

"What are these,
So withered, and so wild in their attire,
That look not like the inhabitants of the earth
And yet are on't?"

Just 250 odd sackcloth-clad embryo engineers wending their way into Hart House to meet the reception committee. Tussling for ties amid the mud and mire, the sophomores showed their early superiority. The frosh were put through the mill in a mass production endless belt fashion, with the intention of producing superior Schoolmen.

We got "received" too (twice), and was our face red? They bandaged us, and twirled us round and round, and then they threw our watch on the floor, followed by our pens and pencils and us. We crept and we crawled and we squirmed, affectionately guided by the sophomore who held our left ear, and encouraged by another who massaged our right. Our feet going skyward, our chin caromed a cushion, and we received many pats on the back—with a two-foot rule.

After Work Abroad

NEW COURSES OFFERED

Five distinguished scholars of St. Michael's College have returned this year from their studies at various famed universities to take up duties at the Institute of Medieval Studies at that college. They are Father Flahiff, and Father McLaughlin, who were awarded the Carnegie scholarship by St. Michael's College, which entitled them to five years study abroad, Father Denomy who received the Sheldon scholarship from Harvard which entitled him to one year of foreign study, and Fathers Kennedy and O'Donnell.

Father Flahiff studied one year at Strasbourg and four at Paris, where he received the distinguished degree of Archiviste Paleographe from the Ecole des Chartes. He will instruct in Medieval History at the Institute. Father McLaughlin, who studied three years in Paris and two in Strasbourg, where (Continued on Page 4)

FRESHETTES ELIGIBLE

The activities of the Women's Debating Society of the University of Toronto begin this year with a meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the Women's Union, at which an impromptu debate will be held. The University Debating Society is composed of the separate debating societies of Victoria College, Trinity and St. Michael's, and although University College has no society of her own, she nevertheless forms a part of the larger one.

Miss Marion Ridout, IV Moderns, president of the society, stated that the programme this year will be a most ambitious one, and will include a debate in November between Victoria and Trinity, a debate in January between (Continued on Page 4)

OPINION FAVOURS STUDENT DIRECTOR

Duty to Represent Interests of Undergraduate Body in Hart House Theatre

BANISHES FORMALITY

The suggestion advanced in an editorial in yesterday's Varsity that an undergraduate be appointed to act as a student director for Hart House Theatre met with approval by all the student authorities on dramatics consulted on the matter. Students agreed, however, that a course in dramatic art would probably not be advisable in the University. "Although I would like to see the idea explored as it doubtlessly has unlimited possibilities," remarked Rex Boyd, president of Victoria Dramatic Society.

"The chief difficulty regarding the student director," Mr. Boyd continued, "would be to get someone to represent the dramatic clubs of the University as a whole. Each of the clubs is a separate unit and it would be a major problem to get someone to co-operate with them and Hart House with no discrimination between them." The main value of such an officer, Mr. Boyd believed, would be to aid in publicity schemes for the theatre.

"It seems too bad that Hart House Theatre, in the midst of some seven thousand students, should play no active part in their college life," said Lloyd Somerville of Trinity Dramatic Society, when questioned on the subject, "and I think it would be an excellent idea to have an undergraduate to represent the interests of the student (Continued on Page 4)

MISS MARY DINGMAN WILL ADDRESS W.U.A.

Twice Decorated for War-Work
Speaker Has Had Varied and Extensive Career

All undergraduates are looking forward with interest to Miss Mary Dingman's lecture today at 1.30 p.m. in the Women's Union, which is under the auspices of the W.U.A. Her chief aim is expressed in her lecture, "The Cost to Youth of a New Social Order."

Miss Dingman's varied and extensive career has given her an unrivalled knowledge in economic and industrial affairs. She was twice decorated by the French government for her work done in France during the war. Her travels have taken her all over the world, giving her an opportunity to investigate economic conditions in such distant places as China and the Near East. One of her most outstanding achievements was in connection with Y.W.C.A. work in London and Geneva. Miss Dingman has also taken great interest in the disarmament question, being the chairman of the International Disarmament Committee which has worked in co-operation with the League of Nations for the past eight years. In this capacity she stands as head of the representatives of various women's organizations all over the world.

Miss Dingman is making Toronto one of twenty-five stops in her trans-Canadian tour. She already has addressed several organizations and will terminate her lecture series here with a speech at the Jarvis Collegiate youth rally this evening.

Necessity for Able Director

LACK OF FUNDS DRAWBACK

Would Give Students a Chance to Judge Own Plays When Produced on Stage

When approached by The Varsity with reference to the establishment of a theatre workshop at the University, similar to the "47 Workshop" which has been successfully conducted at Harvard for some years, Melville Keay, Executive Secretary of Hart House Theatre and former manager, said that while the idea had been thought of at various times, the opportune moment never seemed to present itself, due mainly to the fact that professors objected to students spending their time in dramatic work.

"It would certainly be a fine thing for the University if such an idea could be carried out, but it has been found very difficult to have students take part in plays, since exams are always interfering.

"I think such a course should be recognized as a part-time course since an idea would never work until the Board of Governors recognized the value of dramatic work in the curriculum. That is at present the most serious drawback to the undertaking of such a project, in addition to the lack of funds which would be necessary to finance it. The real solution would be (Continued on Page 4)

WOMEN LACK CREDIT IN OUTDOOR SPORTS

Inadequate Grounds Make Training Compulsory for Co-eds

NEEOS CENTRAL LOCALE

"Why shouldn't women get credit for sports like badminton and tennis in their first year physical training?" This question was addressed to Miss Coventry, superintendent of women's athletics. "We have not adequate outdoor grounds for such sports as tennis and we have only one under sized gymnasium," was the immediate reply. "We could substitute basketball, baseball, volleyball, tennis, badminton, archery, etc., for the compulsory two hours a week in the first year," she stated. "I believe that the women's course should resemble the men's. The boys are encouraged to participate in sports and compulsory P.T. is only meted out to those who do not take part in any outside sport."

Miss Coventry thinks that P.T. should take the form of recreation for the girls and considers it from the point of view of health. The minds of the girls are under a continual strain while they are in the gymnasium, as they are worrying about being late for a lecture in some other building, remote from Bloor St. "We should have a central location (Continued on Page 4)

Canada's 21st Birthday

In these days when all eyes are drawn to the African situation and thence on to Geneva, we Canadians would do well to pause and consider our own situation with regard to international policies.

Canada is a part of what has come to be known as the British Commonwealth of Nations. Our representative signed the Versailles and other international treaties, and it was our representative, if the downtown press are to be believed, that proposed the application of sanctions in the ever-present case of Italy. Canadian trade has made its mark on world statistics,—wheat and nickel are fast becoming Canadian monopolies. Already we have our ambassadors, our trade commissioners, our great steamship and rail companies,—in short, all the earmarks of a nation. All that is, but one,—and that an important one. Canada, a so-called Commonwealth nation, a nation within an Empire, the country that dared to propose sanctions against Italy—sanctions that may lead to War!—Canada has no self-protection, no means of imposing those sanctions.

Surely the time has come for Canadians to stand upon their own two feet in this matter of self-protection. We talk of the mutual understanding between the U.S.A. and ourselves, of the distance between our coasts and those of Japan or even of Europe. But if Canada seeks to enter the ring of Powers, if Canada wishes to take her proper place among the nations at Geneva,—then the time has come for us to build a fleet, train a navy, air-force and army, and no longer to hide behind the skirts of the Mother Country. We have grown from childhood through youth to practical adolescence. Now we must stand up and give and take with the rest. Canada, in other words, has reached her twenty-first birthday.

A Trifle

Ocasional we stifle our dignity to discuss trifles. Our justification for doing this is that trifles, when totalled, may become important. The season is approaching when many of us will be subjected each day to enough changes in temperature to drive a faithful thermometer into a state of nervous prostration. We may leave a comfortable lecture room, dash off a ten minute walk in five minutes, and arrive in another room decidedly chilly. From there the route may lead to one overheated. And so it goes. But such differences in room temperature are not the usual; even if they were, it would be a matter of small concern. To the variety suggested, voluntary subjections are added in the form of work-outs in the gymnasium, and finally cold showers. So variation in temperature doesn't actually concern us. What is of importance is the terrible ventilation which exists, especially in some of the large lecture rooms. Most of them are filled three or four times in succession each day, while little opportunity for a renewal of air exists. The result is that the room usually reaches a degree of stuffiness which would make a panther drowsy in five minutes. What is the result? The lecturer is talking to a crowd whose wits become duller and duller for the plain want of air. The most alert are affected.

We don't know what can be done about it but there should be some very economical way of keeping a supply of fresh air in any room. The lecturer cannot be expected to have any attention for such a trifle as room ventilation. He is too occupied. The caretaker might be able to do something about it, but naturally, he isn't exposed to the stuffy condition for any length of time and isn't aware that it exists. The only suggestions immediately at hand are hardly plausible. We have visions of miners carrying canaries in cages. The delicate birds are very susceptible to impure air and soon collapse when forced to breathe it. However, it is hardly to be expected that a professor will carry a bird from room to room as a means of observing the atmospheric conditions. For one thing, it would be hard on birds. Then there are the Engineers, who tackle all sorts of knotty problems. Couldn't this one on ventilation be added to their list?

At any rate, it appears that we all suffer patiently and quietly. But it is to be hoped that something will be done. If not, students may find it necessary to adopt that disreputable Cantorian method of going into a huddle and hollering, "We want air".

Pity the Lender!

Of all human weaknesses perhaps the most difficult to explain is that of borrowing books and forgetting to return them. Books are a possession with which one would like to be generous, but a few experiences of having them depart never to return is enough to convert the most magnanimous person into a positive miser.

To the newcomer the fines imposed by the University libraries may seem exorbitant but it is the only method at all effective, of insuring the return of their books. Our friends would no doubt be horrified if we were to charge them a fifty cent a day fine for the books they borrow from us and so blithely forget to return. Yet it would be only fair if we did for failure to get back a book within a reasonable length of time frequently necessitates the purchase of another copy.

No one should be more appreciative of the value of books than University students. Actually, no one seems to be more negligent in their care. Akin to this carelessness in returning books is the atrocious habit of defacing them, an occurrence which the libraries find extremely prevalent among the students. Last year the University Library carried an exhibit of books, marked and torn by careless or thoughtless individuals, as a horrible example of what not to do. One of the amazing facts disclosed at that time was, that in underlining passages and inscribing comments on the contents professors were the worst offenders!

This lack of respect for other people's property is hard to explain. Whatever may be the reason, if you have any books that do not belong to you, better return them to their rightful owners.

English "Fair Play"

Two days after the declaration of war on Germany in 1914, England severed the telegraphic communications of her opponents with America. Thereafter continental news came through English press offices. That was 1914, and war, and United States was fair game.

On the eve of the definite break of hostilities between Italy and Ethiopia, Baron Aloisi attempted to present the case of his country to the American public. But for one slight miscalculation the message might have reached us: the best trans-Atlantic broadcast facilities are normally in England.

Great Britain, as many of her Oxford scholars remind us, has an attitude that characterizes her foreign policy. And because of that attitude her motives have often been misunderstood, especially by Russia, the Boers, Germany, Japan, or whoever her opponent might be. It is called "fair play", bound up with cricket and things English. When it prevents the adversary, as in the case of Italy, from presenting its views to our public, we are driven to the conclusion that the English and American languages are already poles apart. And unless Britain is forced to amend her policy we can look forward to a repetition of the sporting code of 1914.—Minnesota Daily.

We consider it monstrous that a nation (Great Britain) which dominates the world, refuses a small morsel of land under the African sun.—Mussolini.

Fifty-one nations of the League have voted to apply sanctions against Italy. Apparently the voice of the "Journal" has not gone for naught in the large arena of world affairs.—Queen's Journal.

ADONIS

Within the shelter of these sick-green walls

I sit me at my desk in mournful mood,
The Don of all these residential halls,
Confin'd by duty's calling, to my brood,
No single youth here harboured 'neath my care

But nightly goes his gladsome am'rous way,
While I, his Don, must constantly beware

Lest should I, weakening in my conduct, stray,
And fairer favours seek.

But now the blood tumultuous through my veins

Doth pulse and surge and send a spreading glow

That bids me burst convention's binding chains

And go my way, tho' all the world shall know.

Why should I, master, humbly master-ed be?

The powers of censor languish in my grasp

So that my charges know all liberty,
And check-reign ne'er exerts restraining clasp

Except to throttle me!

Let Gossip's blushing cheeks turn deepest hue

As she with coyest whisper cries "For shame!"

Let students o'er each coke and coffee brew

Fan up the spark until it breaks in flame.

Call forth the college bards and grub street hacks

So they may fling their vitriolic darts
And, tongue in cheek, pen forth their witty cracks—

While I, a Don, ignoring stings and smarts,
A cold take to tea.

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

The H.C. Players' Guild

This Wednesday the Guild is presenting a hilarious melodrama, "The Stranger", from the French of Tristan Bernard, translated and directed by Betty Clawson and Mary Greey. The play is a clever parody of those Grand Guignol "shockers" which occupy in the French theatre a position like that of the melodramas of the "nineties" in our own. A plot involving several violent deaths, jewel thieves, apaches and illicit amours, promises plenty of excitement. The cast includes two experienced actors, Constance Lailey and Gordon Robertson, and three newcomers—Mary Scarfe, John Pearson and John Aster.

Royal Alexandra

At last a picture lives up to its advance publicity. Under the stimulus of Max Reinhardt's brilliant direction, Warner Brothers have presented Hollywood's most imaginative film. Even those who regard Shakespeare as sacrosanct will find little to cavil at in A Midsummer Night's Dream. The plot has been preserved intact, and there is hardly a line that did not come from Shakespeare's pen. All the cuts necessitated by the demands of the films and the expansion of certain aspects of the play were most skillfully made.

Film-goers who remember with a shudder The Taming of the Shrew, when they were forced to take what Shakespeare they could find and be thankful, have nothing to fear from Reinhardt's Dream. He has not been content merely to photograph a stage-show. He has translated the play to a new medium which, with all its limitations, offers unparalleled opportunities in many directions. We do not mean to suggest that the movies supply the ultimate in Shakespearean production. Indeed most of his plays are quite unsuited to them. But there can be no doubt that under clever direction much

Hollywood Theatre

A movie that is completely satisfactory is a "rara avis"; the few films that have such pretensions are over-publicized and usually very disappointing; Maria Chapdelaine, shown at the Hollywood last Saturday triumphed over all its advances and came through as a first rate film.

Photographically Maria Chapdelaine surpassed all the English and American films this reporter has seen, Man of Aran included. The camera man reproduced the heavy cloud formations, the wheat silhouetted against the sky, the swiftly flowing rivers and the dense yet scraggy woods as we see them when interpreted by Gagnon or the late J. E. H. MacDonald.

The film follows the book religiously. It translates into impressive pictures the profound emotions felt by these French Canadian peasants, more accustomed to work than to defining their sentiments; their fear of the solitude imposed by winter; their joyous welcome of the first signs of spring; the shyness of the men and the placidity of the women.

All credit is due to Director DuVivier for not Americanizing the film. We appreciate the restraint of le pere Chapdelaine at his wife's bedside; the child chosen for her sweet voice rather than her beauty; and the careful arrangements of French Canadian folk songs for the incidental music.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents seuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

O.A.C. Has Slight Edge on Victoria

Despite a thrilling last period rally, Victoria lost out to O.A.C. by 4-3 in a Mulock Cup game played on the Vic campus yesterday afternoon.

O.A.C. had a good edge on the play during the first half due to the fact that they completed five forward passes in five attempts. This gave Thiel a chance to kick for three singles in the first half. O.A.C. added another point in the third quarter and then just barely managed to keep out in front until full time.

AD HOC COMMITTEE TO PRESENT REPORT EARLY NEXT WEEK

The Ad Hoc committee constituted to investigate the 20 per cent increase in fees is continuing its research activities on the question and will have a complete factual report ready in the next few days, the chairman of the committee, Paul Bridle, III U.C., stated yesterday.

The committee has held several meetings since that of Friday, September 27th and the next meeting is scheduled to take place early next week. VICTORIA TAKES LACROSSE OPENER

St. Michael's Quintet Lose Hard Fought Contest
by 9-3

GAME WITHOUT PENALTIES

Victoria and St. Mike's prided off the lid of the Interfaculty Lacrosse League last evening in Hart House gym, with the final whistle finding Victoria on the long end of a 9-3 score. Despite the seemingly one-sided score, the contest was comparatively close all through and although not outfought, the losers were outclassed. The gem of the fracas was the fact that there was not one penalty imposed by Referee Alison—something rare, indeed.

The St. Mike's quintet, newest addition to the league, showed intervals of speed and power, led by Read and Finan, whose spectacular dashes saved the losers from complete rout. The double blue presented a team studded with individual stars, but failing to show a well-balanced smooth-working aggregation.

In this department the victors shone. The teamwork of Victoria proved the deciding factor of the issue. They have a great passing combination and in Burgess, McClelland and Holman, present a formidable offensive threat.

Burgess of Vic was, by far, the outstanding man on the floor. He bulged the twice four times with some tricky shooting. Holman and McClelland also showed well.

Finan and Read looked best for the losers on the offensive and were it not for McGlynn's brilliant saves in goal, Vic might have piled up an even larger score.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crockower

Today Warren Stevens will have his men back in action again starting the three-day grind in preparation for Saturday's return engagement with McGill down in Montreal. This tilt will again be a struggle for the league leadership as the victor will assume top rating in the college circuit. Because of the importance of the game Blue officials are expecting a large following of Varsity supporters in the stands at Molson Stadium. Last week-end McGill sent along an army of students which occupied fourteen coaches and as this week's game is just as important as last week's, supporters of the big Blue team will no doubt give the Varsity aggregation as much, if not more, vocal support as McGill received last Saturday.

As we glanced through various written reports of last Saturday's McGill-Varsity game we notice that nearly all the cheers are given for the backfielders. Connelly, Marks and Gray certainly did turn in wonderful efforts for Varsity and without a doubt carried the Blues to victory. However, what of Greco, of Oakley, Kuntz, Turney Williams and the others along the line? The roving Gus was a tower of strength on the front line. When McGill's Mr. Anton began tearing large holes in the Blue first line of defence it was Gus who finally stopped the threat. A few hard tackles and Greco slowed Anton up to a walk. Anton wasn't very effective at all in the latter part of the fourth quarter. Greco and Oakley played the full sixty minutes of the game and had they let up for a few moments it would have been all over for Steve and his men. Turney Williams, moved over from inside to the snap position, displayed a great deal of what it takes when he also stuck it out for the full hour of play, although he received two nasty wallops which put him hors de combat for a few moments. To us Kuntz was the prize package of the game. After a McGill play had been stopped at the centre of the line, we noticed time after time, that a Varsity player with number 25 on his sweater had brought the ball-carrier down. As the number 25 was not down in the published lineup most of you probably failed to identify this lad. Kuntz deserves a lot of praise for Saturday's performance.

The Mulock Cup struggles are again supplying very good entertainment for the few faithful who turn out every night to watch the interfaculty rugby games on the back campus. The Rosso-coached Jr. Meds aggregation turned in their second straight victory last night at the expense of the Junior Schoolmen who were probably saving a good deal of their fighting spirit for their so-called reception at the hands of the sophomores last night. The young Meds squad, finalists last year, will again bear watching. Purely by accident we happened to recognize Bob Galloway on the Jr. S.P.S. backfield. Young Bob is a hockey player of star calibre and will no doubt be a welcome addition to one of Coach Bailey's squads this coming winter.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

If any of you girls are interested in the terpsichorean art, now's your chance. Miss Forster, the women's physical training instructress, is starting classes in tap and ballroom dancing, which will be open to girls of all years, provided they pay their four dollar athletic fee. These classes will go on for about ten weeks. After that the enthusiasm of the students will decide their fate. If you want to join these classes, sign the lists outside the Lillian Massey gymnasium immediately for if not enough girls sign, the project will be dropped. The tap classes will be on Wednesdays from three to four, and the ballroom dancing on Thursdays from four to five. Miss Forster expects to have the classes under way by Wednesday, so any coming Ginger Rogers should sign up now.

The basketball schedule will be out any time now. Vic had eleven girls out to their senior practice last night, and they went through a brisk workout. Maisie Cowan, Louise Prior and Hazel Brown are playing on the senior team this year. St. Hilda's also had a good practice. They have more or less decided who is to be on the teams, and the seniors will practise this Wednesday, and the freshies on Friday. The Nurses have uncovered some good material, and are coming right along. Household Science are combining with them, but the team will still be mainly Nurses.

Vic are playing off their inter-year baseball games this Tuesday, Wednesday.

PHARMACY SOCCERITES LOSE TO S.P.S. TEAM

Front Campus Scene of Close Struggle with Final Score, 3-1

School's soccerites defeated Pharmacy to the tune of 3-1 on the front campus yesterday afternoon. The game was close, with the players on each team fighting furiously. The first half saw School surge to the front on the crest of a two-goal drive.

In the second half Pharmacy crept within striking distance when Ramsay slipped one by the School guardian to make the score 2-1.

For School, Woods, Selvey and Mudie stood out, while Cushing, Sully and Wineberger shone for the Druggists.

day, and Friday. The finals will probably be on Friday. St. Mike's have most of their last year's team back, and should have a good squad. The schedule is not out yet, but we'll let you know about it.

We wish to correct an error which appeared in yesterday's issue. It was stated that McGill entered a team in women's intercollegiate tennis for the last time. What we meant to say was, that they had entered for the first time. More power to them, and we hope they'll be back next year.

their meals, by looking after the furnace and like tasks.

Interesting work during the summer months is often obtained. Mr. MacDonald told of one School man who was obliged to remain out of University during this year in order to obtain money to go on with his course. Through the activities of the Bureau he has been placed as tutor with a student from Upper Canada College, whose ill-health necessitated his going to a southern climate. The School man is now in Hollywood with him, and will spend the winter on a ranch in Arizona. Another student—a Med—spent the summer months running a motorboat for a doctor, on the Severn River.

The Employment Bureau is conducted as a service to students and is free of charge. Men students who wish to secure part time or summer employment should go to the S.A.C. office in Hart House and register there. The women students are registered at Room 82 in University College, where the work is directed by Miss Parkes.

CHANGES WROUGHT IN ACTA VICTORIANA

unit of the magazine with a new cover, designed to epitomize the editorial policy for the year.

Eight pages will be added to each issue to provide space for a new department of music, film and drama criticism. The magazine will lay emphasis on purely local affairs than on material of artistic and intellectual value and above all criticism, the editor said.

"The aim of the department of music, drama and film will be to achieve a sort of criticism more penetrating and less hysterical and laudatory than the usual sort," it was stated. "Finally there will be a definite policy of vigorous criticism of the affairs of the college; it being our conviction that a constant stream of intelligent and dignified protest is essential to the health of any college."

Taylor said the staff hoped to transform the Acta from a mere Victoria institution, taken as a matter of fact, and merely glanced at for jokes and gossip, into an alert monthly of definite artistic and intellectual worth.

The masthead for this year includes J. C. Taylor, editor; Bob McRae, associate editor; Louise Prior, women's editor; and Art Kearns, business manager. The first issue is expected to be out by the end of this month.

body in Hart House Theatre."

B. P. Kearney, manager of dramatics for the Faculty of Dentistry, also considered this an excellent idea. "At present Hart House Theatre is not part of the University to the average student, but I believe the presence of a representative from the undergraduates would tend to take away some of its aloofness, and create a sort of kindred spirit between it and the students," he said.

THEATRE WORKSHOP WINS APPROVAL to install a Chair of Dramatics at the University and have some permanent person appointed, who would undertake a large part of the responsibility."

Ray Purdy, Director of the Dickens Fellowship, told The Varsity that in his opinion the scheme was entirely sound, but that to have any success it would have to be under proper guidance.

"The students certainly should be interested—they are the ones who would profit by it. But its essential success would lie in able direction. Students should have a chance to see their own plays acted. A play on paper is vastly different to a play on the stage."

Nancy Pyper, new director of the Hart House, hopes to revive the interest in the theatre among the students and this undertaking would certainly be of great value in so doing. Jack Graham, president of the U.C. Players' Guild, feels that this undertaking might introduce the student atmosphere in Hart House and that "Hart House will assume its rightful function and become the focal point for drama for the entire University."

Rex Boyd, president of the Victoria College Dramatic Society, feels that in the past the students have been too apathetic with regard to dramatics, and it has been difficult to arouse enthusiasm. This movement to make Hart House a University rather than a Toronto theatre may give the desired impetus to the college societies on the campus, since if Mrs. Pyper puts over her idea it will be of benefit not only to herself, but also to the student organizations.

James Cagney as Bottom made by far the best performance. This actor, whom we have come to think of as the crook with a heart of gold, has interpreted the vain amateur actor very plausibly. He resists the temptation to overact in the play scenes, a temptation to which Joe E. Brown as Flute succumbed. Overton (Victor Jory was impressive, aided by the best photography Hollywood has made for a long time. Puck, played by Mickel Rooney, was not the true Robin Goodfellow of the author's creation. He was forward and given to peals of mechanical laughter. This distressing malady he shared with most of the other players. Also one wonders if his voice did not break during production. The lovers were not as good as the comedians of the fairies. They did not speak the blank verse with much fluency. The Quarrel scene, however, was good.

Mendelssohn's music was given in full, with some additions. Dancing played an important part in the production. The ballets were skilfully planned and executed, though they tended to slow down the action of the play. On the whole, the balance of romantic, comic and fantastic elements was well preserved. While there was a slightly saccharine taste at times, Reinhardt did not reduce the play to the usual milliner's dream of paradise. G.H.R.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Toronto—Premier Hepburn has announced that the proclamation of the law voiding the power contracts with the four Quebec private power companies has been deferred by the cabinet. Plans were completed for a conference scheduled to take place this morning at which Hydro engineers are to meet with men from the power companies and present data to serve as a basis for a compromise offer.

London—In the opening debate in the House of Commons on the international situation, Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, stated that Britain had no intention of resorting to arms to settle the Ethiopian dispute. He also described the League as a bridge between the continent and Great Britain and hinted at an isolationist policy if the League failed.

Rome—The threat of a European conflict has diminished with the report that Great Britain and Italy have nearly reached an agreement on the recall of the British navy from the Mediterranean.

Addis Ababa—Emperor Haile Selassie has declared that he would not negotiate peace terms with Italy before all Italian soldiers leave his country. He refuses to state what terms would be acceptable to him.

Ottawa—The Honorable Charles Dunning has accepted the portfolio of Finance in the King cabinet and will seek election to parliament in an Ontario or Quebec riding.

Armistice Service May Be Duplicated

PLAN SEPARATE SERVICE

Possibility that two armistice day services would be held on the University of Toronto campus on November 11 loomed as a possibility following the announcement of a committee of the Student Christian Movement that their protest about the presence of the C.O.T.C. at the regular service had been turned down by the Alumni Federation.

Wilfred Smith, spokesman for the special committee of the S.C.M., said last night another service would likely be sponsored by the S.C.M. this year either in Convocation Hall or in Hart House Theatre.

Believing the C.O.T.C. lent too military an atmosphere to the armistice day service at the Soldiers' Tower, the S.C.M. last week sent a protest to the Alumni Federation, which is in charge of the ceremony. Yesterday the Federation informed the S.C.M. committee they could not ask the C.O.T.C. not to attend the service because originally it was inaugurated by that organization itself.

"Our protest to the Alumni Federation was unavailing and so we will hold a special service ourselves and avoid all militaristic display. It should be emphasized our service will not be in opposition to the regular service at the Soldiers' Tower which the C.O.T.C. will attend, but will rather be for those students who dislike the military aspect of the ceremony usually held," Smith said.

Through the generosity of the Massey Foundation and a group of friends, Hart House has become the possessor of a valuable consort of viols. They are contained in an old oak chest which bears the name of the original owner, Margaret Platts, and which is dated 1673.

The chest, which is itself carved and inlaid in old English woods, is fitted with three plush-lined trays at three different levels. These trays contain the instruments which are: a Viola da Gamba, which is a kind of cello, but has six strings; a Petite Virole de Gamba, which is in the nature of a viola, but has five strings; and four viols which are somewhat similar to a violin but have six strings.

Interviewed by The Varsity yesterday in connection with the suggestion of a student director of dramatics, Nancy Pyper said, "I certainly think it is a sound idea. Several students have been to see me, representing the various college organizations. Why can't we form a committee of these representatives, elect a chairman, and unite in a University organization those who are really interested?" Mrs. Pyper went on to say that University students are the very people who should be active in the drama. "Those who study languages and the very best of English poetry and prose are the very ones who should use the stage for self-expression."

In lamenting the lethargy of undergraduates in dramatic art, Mrs. Pyper inquired, "Why can't we produce an all-student play that will show the whole city of Toronto that students are

The curtain was then drawn before an improvised stage. The plot, briefly, —played by Miss McKim—who was (Continued on Page 4)

Music Conducive to Indolence

The Vic Women's Lit. held its first meeting of the Music Appreciation Group yesterday in Wymlywood. The society has been fortunate in securing Miss Wilma Stevenson, prominent Canadian pianist, as director of this group. In her first recital-talk Miss Stevenson traced the history of music from its origin in the voice tone to the appearance of counterpoint. In succeeding groups Miss Stevenson will expand the introduction which she made yesterday to listening to music. "To listen requires the co-operation of the mind and the ear," she said. While it is very pleasant to let music drift into you over you it is conducive to indolence.

At successive meetings therefore Miss Stevenson will direct the group in a study of symphonies to be presented in Toronto this coming year. Miss Stevenson will illustrate her talks with her able performance of music.

FAVORS NEW SOCIAL ORDER

"It is a question whether the groups and nations of the world will have sufficient wisdom and sacrificial devotion to read the handwriting on the wall and to make changes in the social order which if it is not made peacefully will be made by warlike means." Thus Miss Mary Dingman, in a lecture yesterday afternoon at the Women's Union, challenged the youth of today, and in particular the students of the University to grapple with the problems of our present day world. Students in the process of being educated are often so wrapped up in the study of the past, that they are apathetic about what is happening today, when they should be aligned with the foremost thinkers of the world, said Miss Dingman.

The problems with which the world is faced are of vital importance to the young people and students because it is on them that the future depends. One quarter of the unemployed in Canada are below the age of twenty-five, and a comparatively large percentage of these are graduates of colleges and universities. It is this gnawing sense of futility, and the feeling that the world has no use for them, which is so dangerous for the students who have spent four years in preparing themselves to be better citizens and better prospects for a job.

in Production of One-Act Plays

STRESSES SIMPLICITY

At the meeting of the Women's Press Club, which took place on Tuesday afternoon at the Women's Union, Miss Margaret V. Ray, librarian at Victoria College Library, spoke informally on the one-act play.

Miss Ray has studied the one-act play, among other literary subjects. She has been conducting experiments in the writing and producing of one-act plays as one of a group called the Playmakers. This group was founded by Miss Ray to write plays and read or present them for criticism.

The Playmakers held their presentations at first in a private house. The type of play written was naturally conditioned by this fact. Plays of two or three characters, with no ambitious costuming or setting were recommended as most satisfactory for the purposes of the group. Later they moved to larger quarters and attempted plays with more characters, but expenses were thus incurred and the group was (Continued on Page 4)

ETHIOPIA'S TWO CHANCES

Isolationist Pacifism "Out" in Crisis of Today

Professor N. A. Mackenzie, speaking at Hart House Theatre yesterday on the possibility of peace in Abyssinia, declared the whole European situation "a mess". The chances for a satisfactory solution are slight since governments and leaders have taken a position from which there can be no withdrawal without serious consequences.

However, there are two possibilities which Abyssinia can look forward to as means of affording her peace. The first is the conquest of Abyssinia by Mussolini which, although not particularly pleasing to Abyssinia, would probably satisfy Mussolini temporarily, even if it did not provide an ultimate solution to Italy's problems. The second possibility would be the success of the League through the policy of economic sanctions together with the possible assistance of the British and French navies. Nor does this second possibility offer any permanent solution; it would not necessarily remove the cause of the present crisis and has possibilities of trouble between Italy and Britain and France; it even suggests the possibility of trouble in Italy itself in the very probable collapse of Mussolini and Fascism which would entail chaos in that country and would be ex- (Continued on Page 4)

VOADAN ADVISES ON DRAMATIC ART

Universities Must Supplant Leisure Class in Art Production

GIVES COURSE IN ACTING

Since Canada has no leisure class with either the time or the inclination to devote itself to developing the arts, it is the duty of the universities to step into the breach thus created, Mr. H. A. Voadan stated in an interview yesterday regarding drama at the University. Only from them can sound artistic impulses emanate, and there can be no real progress in the arts in the universities till they are treated not as embroideries, but are woven into the pattern of the University curricula, he said.

Mr. Voadan, who spent a year at Harvard studying at the Play Workshop under Dr. Baker, is head of a similar group held at Queen's during the summer and of another meeting at the Central High School of Commerce in Toronto on week nights. This group is comprised of about sixty persons, some of whom are Varsity graduates.

In the course are included voice diction, play producing, the history of drama, and play writing. Regarding this last, Mr. Voadan was of the opinion that it should not be included in an undergraduate course but should be undertaken only in postgraduate work. The great need of the present, he said, was for experienced teachers in the secondary schools who could interpret plays to their classes. Interest in drama has grown rapidly in these schools and the number of teachers trained in voice diction and the producing of plays is not large enough to provide proper instruction. In this respect especially, University courses would be of great benefit.

Bill Shakespeare No. 1 Continuity Man

It is interesting and gratifying to have one's little prophecies come true. Two or three years ago the writer, in the course of an essay, went at some length into the idea of a motion picture being made from a play of Shakespeare's. With reckless abandon (for first year Pass English), he exclaimed, "With modern motion picture sets and sound equipment, costumes, lighting and natural colour photography, a production could be made directly from Shakespeare's text, with not a single major alteration in continuity."

And behold, it has been done.

Shakespeare was the first motion picture continuity man in the English language of whom we have any permanent record. Had he lived in this century, he would have seized with joy on the movie as the perfect medium for expressing the vivid images that tumbled in torrents from that marvelous imagination. As it was, the Elizabethan theatre was the second best, for even that crude and bumpy channel was much superior for the purpose than the conventional "realistic" scene-shifting stage that held ponderous sway over legitimate theatre entertainment for two centuries and more. For two hundred years the cumbersome business of shifting scenes has squeezed and compressed unfortunate dramatists' imaginations into the necessity of crowding all action into the least possible number of stiff, unchanging environments bounded by three walls and a row of footlights.

To be sure, the realism has become all that technical ingenuity can make it, until now the stage, plumbing runs hot and cold water and the very telephones jangle and squawk convincingly, but nevertheless the fact remains that the cash customers, jealous of their entertainment, become quickly restive and even noisy if the thread of action and excitement is broken too oft or too long by periods of staring at folds of velvet curtain.

The results of keeping the gamut of human passions and extent of human wanderings confined in the above trammels are not hard to find in their sad effects on good continuity or even a probable course of events, and where a novel has been made into a play, it has frequently been pretty hard for the novelist and his more ardent readers to keep the tears back at sight of the horrible mutilations suffered by the darling offspring of his labored genius.

Shakespeare was weighed down with no such shackles. The Elizabethan stage (Professors of English please omit this paragraph) was a very carefree affair, with no scenery whatever as a rule, and only the furniture necessary to the action. If it was a night scene, they generally put up a black flag. If it was Paris or Rome or London or Verona (a favorite and delectable spot), they sometimes stuck up signs saying so. Otherwise you used your imagination, which at any rate probably produced more satisfactory results than painted backdrops, rendered slightly unreal when actors' shadows move about with abandon upon clouds and distant mountains.

Shakespeare would have gone mad trying to write for a modern stage. That mind, which roamed like a peregrine falcon over thousands of miles of Europe, Asia, Africa—though the body never left a compass of a hundred or so miles in the south of England—cared for nothing but continuity and dramatic effect, let them take the scene where they would. Say "place of action" rather than "scene," for there were no formal "scenes" in Shakespeare's writing. The ones we find in present editions have all been put into their strangely illogical places by subsequent improvers. Full dramatic effect was often achieved by a line or two spoken in one place, a jump of a few hundred miles, a few lines there, then back to the first location. The last acts of Antony and Cleopatra, which the writer used to illustrate the mentioned essay, leap about with tremendous acrobatics, fantastically out of reach of "realistic" (!) stagecraft.

Now, Reinhardt, a director with singular perception, has taken one of these beautiful, neat, ready-cut scripts, called A Midsummer Night's Dream, thawed it out from the frigid suspended animation of conventional staging till it again flows in rippling delight.

Headlines and The Reading Public

Behind the Ethiopian conflict, behind the battle of headlines, behind the walls of the buildings that house our great daily newspapers, there is being waged a ruthless, merciless war, a circulation war of which the headlines describing the present world crisis are merely unimportant skirmishes. Those who followed the tragic pictures of the Great War recently run concurrently in the Star and the Telegram can readily realize how terrible a circulation war can become.

And who is to blame for this enervating strife? The greatest part of the blame must undoubtedly be laid at the door of the reading public. The newspaper profession is, on the whole, governed by an ethical code stricter than that of most of the other professions. But newspapers must pay as any other business. And in order to do so they must, within bounds, write what the public seem to want. But, as a newspaperman remarked some time ago, "What the public seem to want is news not facts!" Thus it is that when a war threatens to be settled peacefully the newspapermen must make headlines while the star of Mars still shines. Even we, far removed though we are from ordinary circulation problems, instruct our cub reporters, "No news is not good news on The Varsity."

This situation has led to the most profound ignorance of what is going on in the world, notably of the activities of the League of Nations. Everyone has heard of the war between China and Japan; few have heard of the prevention of the war between Greece and Bulgaria. Nearly everyone has heard of the recent conflict between Bolivia and Paraguay; practically no one has heard of the League's action in the cessation of hostilities between Columbia and Peru. Nor is this surprising. One of the League's own publications, "Ten Years of World Co-operation", explains it quite effectively,—

To nip a conflict in the bud before it takes shape is not exciting and may be ignored or curiously dismissed as a simple affair. News of failure, leading to an acute situation spreads like wildfire to the ends of the world. Yet the prevention of a conflict before it reaches a critical stage is obviously the first endeavour, and to see the effect of success requires a little imagination if it is not to be dismissed as negligible. The prevention of the war of 1914-18 a month or two before it broke out might have been so disdained.

The public buys from the advertiser who shouts the loudest; and the advertiser shouts the loudest in the newspaper which has the loudest circulation figures; which figures are attained partly at any rate through the use of headlines. We therefore have the headline "menace" which frequently results in exaggeration and misinformation. This is not the fault of the newspapermen. It is the fault of the reading public for "he who pays the piper calls the tune."

"Had I not had much experience in public affairs, I would hesitate to come before the Canadian people now and tell them what I think should be done. But I have been for fifteen years the leader of my party, and for nine years was Prime Minister. As a young man I was in the Cabinet of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and learned much from the older men who were my colleagues."—W. L. Mackenzie King.

"The functions of Government must be readjusted from time to time to restrain the strong and protect the weak."—Herbert Hoover.

"No dictatorship can afford to put its ultimate principles to the test of analysis."—Harold J. Laski.

Dear Colonel Stoopnagle and Bud;
We are writing to say just how much we enjoyed your brief visit and that we do hope you will return to this village another time. Indeed, we are told that you will be back with us in a few weeks, along with Mr. Waring and his friends, to visit one of our theatres, although Messers Federation for Community Service did their best to keep it a secret until they got theirs. However, if we don't see you again that soon we hope that present dickerings with the C.N.E. will be satisfactorily concluded, and that next fall you will succeed Rudy Vallee & Co. and those two funny fellows Tom and George, at the Ex Ballroom.

Before you leave for New York, however, our Iran' Counterfeit wishes us to call to your attention the crying need for some non-inventions. He says there are many things which it is high time somebody did not invent,—such as celophane dinner plates so you can't cover up spots you make on the table cloth. Counterfeit is just full of such stuff, except he can't think of any more just now. You really should add him to your staff of gag men, although it might be embarrassing of a Tuesday afternoon before a broadcast if he couldn't think of any then, either.

So maybe we had better keep Counterfeit cause he is the only gag man we own, and you have lots. And lots and lots of gags, too, which everybody up this way get a big kick out of every Tuesday evening. And if you'll excuse our closing this little note so abruptly, we will answer the telephone which has been ringing for five minutes. If it's Santa Claus, you can depend on us to do the right thing.

Fanatically yours,
The Muddy Yorker.

Trinity Dramatics

Tonight the curtain will go up on the first production of the Trinity Dramatic Society for the current year. For the first of six plays to be produced, the Trinitarians have turned their energies to good use on "The Monkey's Paw", probably one of the best known of the one-act plays. Valentine Barrow in the sole female role has given advance notice of an excellent performance, while both Ken Venables and Bill Greenfield showed, in the dress rehearsal last night, that the play will not suffer from lack of good acting. Other members of the cast are Rupert Schieder and Sid Johnson. The play is to take place in Trinity College at about half-past seven tonight.

Jack Benny, popular radio comedian, comes to bat as newspaper reporter at Loew's this week in the current production of Broadway Melodies of 1936. Song hits and wisecracks feature the performance, which brings Eleanor Powell to the front as leading lady in the dancing display which has seldom been surpassed for dramatic excellence.

Jack Benny, as the dirt columnist who attempts to be a rat of such proportions that he can wear a saddle, writes himself into several husky socks in the region of his molars before finally seeing Eleanor Powell crash her way into the leading part in the stage production taking place in the same town in which Benny plies his typing trade.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

It is with much regret that we announce that U.C. will have no senior team this year. Only four of last year's team turned up at the last practice, and two others. So there will be no senior team, and the six girls who are enthusiastic will probably play on the junior team. This withdrawal will mean a reshuffling of the schedule. Ten teams are now entered, two from Vic, two U.C., one St. Mike's, two Trinity, one Meds, one Nurses, and one Occupational Therapy. It is not yet definite whether Trinity will enter two teams or one.

All basketball representatives of the various colleges and faculties are asked to attend a very important meeting at five o'clock tomorrow in the Women's Union. It is essential that all representatives be there, because it is hoped that the schedule will be out on Friday.

The proposed tap and ballroom dancing classes seem to be going over in a big way. A great number of girls interviewed today said that they intended to join. All we hope is that the enthusiasm will not die after the first few weeks. Miss Forster and Miss Coventry are arranging these classes out of the goodness of their hearts, and deserve a vote of thanks. Let us show them that we appreciate their initiative.

U.C. WINS HECTIC GAME OVER TRINITY LACROSSE

Rough and Tumble Affray Ends with Score of 12-10

U.C. and Trinity opened their group schedule at Hart House yesterday in the interfaculty lacrosse series. Trinity finished on the wrong end of a 12-10 score after a battle in which the score was tied until the last five minutes of play.

The game was a rough and tumble affair with many penalties and two bloody noses. Trinity found the zone rules troublesome and received penalties which cost them the game.

White and Smith showed up well for U.C., accounting for nine of their goals. Martin played a good game in goal for Trinity but he was handicapped by a cracked nose in the last period.

U.C.: Kirt, Smith, Sharpe, Williams, White; subs, Self, Bissell.

Trinity: Martin, Millyard, Burchell, McCreary, Grant; subs, Cox, Bosley, Foord, Botterel.

Blue and Whites, Victorious 4 Years out of 6, Again Favoured

McGILL TEAM TO BEAT

In the past six years the Varsity soccer team has carried away the intercollegiate soccer title no less than four times. Last year McGill scored the only goal of the deciding game in the last minute of play to win the game and cup. Varsity trimmed R.M.C. with a score of 11-0. With such a record as a background for future successes, and the team Varsity has to put on the field this year, prospects for bringing the championship trophy back to Varsity seem particularly bright.

When Varsity meets R.M.C. at Kingston next Saturday (Oct. 26) it is reasonably boasted by those who should know that Varsity will carry the day by a very considerable margin. Just what Varsity will do in the clash with McGill no one cares to predict. However, general opinion has it that the Blues are really good this year. The back and forward lines are particularly strong, the halves have not yet been definitely picked but there are several men from which to make a selection.

There is one thing Varsity has had to buck in the last few years. McGill players have stepped onto the field a well-practised and well-worked team to face the Varsity line-up who have had considerably less experience in working together. This is due to more lenient rules concerning players in outside leagues playing on the University team, exercised in that district. The handicap will not be so great this year, however, on account of the stiff workouts the Varsity team have been going through every day under the very able coaching of Dave Rowland and Jimmie MacPherson.

Whichever team Fortune favours to win the championship, Varsity supporters can be assured that their representatives on the soccer field will not succumb to anything less than a first class team.

OENTS TRIM MEOS IN SOCCER CONTEST

Lankin Wins Game for Dents by Scoring Two Goals

Dents soccerites defeated Meds representatives in the interfaculty loop in a keenly contested game played on the front campus yesterday afternoon. The final score was 3-1, but judging by the play it should have been even closer.

The game started with Meds pressing hard. Dents retaliated, but neither team was able to get a shot on goal. Lankin then replaced Rockman and led the Dents up the field to score the first goal of the game on a nice shot on which Seymour, the Medical goalie, had no chance. For the remainder of the half play ranged back and forth, neither team having any marked advantage.

The second half commenced with Meds again pressing hard, but they missed several good scoring chances through lack of finish around the goal. Dents then came to life again, and after several dangerous rushes Valiquette scored when Lankin centred nicely. About thirty seconds later Lankin scored Dents' third goal from a scramble after a corner kick. Meds narrowly missed a whitewash when, in the last five seconds of play Low dribbled the ball about 50 yards and prices will prevail but through the scored the nearest goal of the game.

Dents: Cowan, H. Mason, Ballaui, Brown, Mackie, Rockman, Weslake, L. Mason, Pon, Stapleton, Lankin, Valiquette, Rourke.

Meds: Seymour, Singer, Park, Robertson, Black, Cathie, Epping, Roger, Sinclair, Townsend, Joseph, Green, Low, Sneed.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George Vair

With the weather about the right temperature for baseball, cup-roving-coaches around the University are busy figuring out this year's squad. Already the water polo enthusiasts under the excellent guidance of Doug. Light, former Montreal star, are figuring out ways and means of taking the Redmen in their first game. The presence of such agile fin-stars as the McCarty boys and Man Mountain Murphy of last year's club, augur well for the Blue swimmers. The junior team shows good promise and expect to be the tops in the Ontario Water-polo League.

* * *

Mac McCutcheon must figure on getting the jump on rival netters since he has called the first meeting of junior basketball for today, and regular practices will be held. Lew Hayman, whose Double Blue footballers are as yet undefeated, will have a tough job building up a senior team to compare to last year's champions who won something like 15 out of 16 games. However, with such men as Marks, Connolly, Bodrug and Gordon still eligible things shouldn't look too bad. "Lofty" Willis, regular centre man of two years ago, will also be out for a position on the squad. Last season the lanky Victoria star helped to bring home the Ontario intermediate crown to the S.M.C. entry besides coaching their ladies' team to an unsuccessful but well deserved place in the Ontario finals.

* * *

The Varsity Arena is scheduled to open next week and it won't be long before "Ace" Bailey has the boys cutting up the ice. The senior squad has been depleted by the graduation of a number of men, the failure of others to return to University, and the departure of Charlie Sweeney and Maxie Fullerton to Switzerland and Ernie Rey to Sudbury. Nevertheless there should be plenty of material from last year's senior B squad who reached the play offs and certain new men. Ace Lenihan, fleet wingman of former Blue teams, and Jack Oakley of rugby fame are two likely candidates for the 1935-6 edition of the Varsity seniors.

* * *

Providing the good weather keeps up Thursday's Balmy Beach-Sarnia tilt at the Stadium bids fair to be one of the best crowd-drawers of the season. Some will go because it is a holiday and there is nothing else to do, others just to see the Canadian champions in action, but we are willing to wager that the biggest percentage will go to see the Balmies topple the Imps and this seems in no way impossible. With Ab Box handling the team and kicking, the easterns stand a perfect chance of handing the Oilers their first defeat in a league game in two years. Figures are never reliable in comparing two teams, but just turn that 34-0 win over the Cubs in your mind before laying your money on the line.

Here is an excerpt taken from a letter we received yesterday from a Toronto graduate and now prominent Toronto business man giving his opinion of last week's intercollegiate track meet. This gentleman is well-informed regarding track meets, having represented Varsity for four consecutive years when an undergraduate and therefore we do not hesitate to print his letter in part in this column. "The whole thing was being handled too much from the standpoint of the competitors. I suggest a reduction in the number of trials of field sport competitors, a snappier handling of the whole meet, and some dramatization to the event, as one sees done in the remarkable school meet run in Hamilton every year. I refer to the way officials march on the field, the salute to the winner, etc.

"The complete disregard for the standpoint of the spectators was evinced by the fact that there was no score board showing the standings of the universities, and I only heard the relative score called through the loud speakers once during the hour and a half I was there. You could only expect a fanatic on the subject to stay in that stand from half-past one until something after five.

"My only purpose in writing this letter is because I think both the sport and the high standard of the competitors in this meet deserve something better."

ERRORS GIVE GAME TO SENIOR DENTS

Rugby Contest Keenly Fought Despite One-Sidedness of Score

GARTSHORE'S MIGHTY BOOT

Taking advantage of fumbles committed by senior S.P.S. enabled Dents to emerge victorious in 4-0 in their interfaculty rugby game yesterday afternoon on the back campus. Outside of these costly errors the game was evenly fought with neither team being able to make substantial gains through the line. The tussle resolved into a kicking duel between Gartshore and Jack Garret.

Just once in the first half did Dents get the better of the kicking exchanges, but Gartshore booted a mighty one to put the teams back on even terms. Play all during this half ranged around centre field and first down was made only once.

The break finally came in the third quarter when School failed to give yards on a kick. Dents gained possession on the twenty-five, from where Jack Garret bounced his punt off the U.C. wall for the opening point. Before the half ended Dents had another point due to a blocked kick which put the ball in position for Garret to boot his second point.

In the last quarter a School fumble put the ball on their three yard line with Dents in possession, but the School line rose to the heights and held Dents out on three successive plunges. However, when School attempted to kick to trigger the kick was blocked and the ball rolled out for a safety touch to end the scoring.

Sr. S.P.S.: Ballantyne, King, McArthur, Gartshore, Jacobs, Press, Holt, Thompson, Wilson, Clarke, Phene, Lilley, Davidson, Sherwood, Latimer, Gooch, Walker.

Dents: Dswald, Speers, Jack Garret, Peterson, Singer, Jim Garret, Hamblly, Tritt, McCaul, McCasual, Mueller, Ryan, Parish, Smith, Cope, Andrews, Squires.

SR. MEDS GRIDMEN DEFEAT ST. MIKE'S

King Stars in Line Play and Plunging; Slemmon's Boot Counts

WELL PLAYED GAME

By virtue of their 7-3 win over St. Michael's in a regular Mulock Cup game at Trinity Field the battling Sr. Meds gridmen entered into a tie with the champion Dents squad for first place. The first quarter saw the Senior Meds press play into St. Michael's territory, enabling Slemmon to kick a placement from the twenty-five yard mark, but St. Michael's retaliated in like manner after a series of well executed plays. The feature of these was a thirty yard pass from Finan to Sonberg, putting the ball on the Meds' twenty, from which T. Sullivan kicked a placement.

Again in the second quarter Meds, by superior line play and plunging tactics, with King starring, advanced the ball deep into St. Michael's territory. From the twenty yard line Slemmon kicked another placement, to put the Meds in the lead enough to gain the victory. The third and fourth periods, Meds pressed their advantage and Bill King intercepted a forward to bring the ball to St. Michael's thirty and on the following play, on an attempted placement, Slemmon kicked a safety. The ebbing moments of the game saw the embattled St. Mike's putting up a valiant finish but it was nullified when a St. Mike's forward pass was intercepted.

For Meds, King's plunging and Slemmon's accurate placement kicking stood out, while for St. Michael's Finan's forward passing and Aulenbacher's plunging, along with Sonberg's steady tackling featured.

treat the experiment with respect and reverence," she said. The League is definitely an experiment and as such has great possibilities. There is too much talk about the things which the League has not done, and a feeling that the idea of a world without war is the naive dream of Utopia. One of the landmarks in the progress of the League was the stand of moral condemnation taken against Japan. Nevertheless the failure of the League in the case of the Sino-Japanese war, probably led Mussolini with the idea that he could get away with his present aggression. Will the League be used as an instrument by the nations who have room to expand, to hold down the nations who have no such opportunity? That apparently, is the attitude which is being taken by nations which wish to disagree with the League," Miss Dingman said.

"It is often the people with the latest in bathroom tiling, the latest fashions in clothes, and who in general regard themselves as modern in every respect, who have 18th century opinions," said Miss Dingman, and it is against these people that the students should be campaigning. It is the challenge for the youth of today.

PRESENTATION MAOE OF ANTIQUE VIOLS

The chest was one of two marriage chests belonging to Margaret Platt and it was subsequently fitted up to hold the six viols. The late Sir Ralph Littler, a descendant, and at one time one of the leaders of the parliamentary bar in England, presented the viols to Mr. and Mrs. Howard Head, now living in England, who brought them to Vancouver in 1913. Shortly after the War there was some question of the viols being sold in the United States, but they were retained and were later presented to Hart House.

A chest such as this was found in every gentleman's home during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries and these instruments probably date from the seventeenth century. The Oolmetsch family of Haslemere, England, the founders of the famous school of medieval music, and also Dr. E. H. Fellowes, consider this collection of viols to be of extreme value.

They have been played in a Conservatory quartet in 1932, accompanied by a harpsichord, and Mr. Biekereth hopes that they will be played in Hart House on some Friday evening during the season.

MICHELL DESCRIBES FAILURE OF GREEKS

Economic History. He is an authority in his field, having written many articles on economics and he is now engaged in an extensive survey of economic affairs in ancient Greece.

Professor Michell outlined the course of economic troubles when glaring pauperism contrasted with lavish ostentation and an extravagance that reached tremendous heights. The state of labor and agriculture was beyond repair while kings and wealthy middlemen dissipated the wealth of recently conquered Persia. Artisans lived at starvation wages while courtesans squandered fortunes on transparent silk dresses. "Wealth was there but it was not properly circulated, and so the social system broke down under its own weight."

"The old view that this was a period of cultural decadence must be abandoned," said Professor Michell. Then Euclid laid the foundations of geometry. Archimedes heralded the advent of integral calculus. Hero experimented with steam. Only the nobility of the Greeks to master the problem of vacuum may have caused their failure to anticipate the invention of the steam engine by seventeen hundred years. Science reached great heights in many other fields also. "This brilliancy, however, was illusive," he said. "It failed entirely to reach the people as a whole."

The meeting closed with a vote of thanks from staff and pupils for Professor Michell's kindness in giving the lectures.

nical perfection of his instrumentalists and the pleasing personality of Fred Waring himself. He sent shivers up and down the spine of the student body when he led in an inspiring Varsity yell, followed by the good old school song, played in a medley with the songs of the other colleges of Canada.

The part of the program which was appreciated most was the work of Stoopnagle and Budd. With their ridiculous ideas for the formation of companies for providing fringe for towels and curtains, fuz for overcoat pockets, sheep for people to count who are unable to get to sleep, and with their edifying speech concerning the intricacies of stoopnagery, the Colonel and his partner earned their title as the cleverest comedians of the North American continent. Asked about the city of Toronto as a place to visit, the Colonel turned to Budd and said, "Say Budd, Toronto is a peachy place."

no longer private and self-supporting. Also the intimate critical element was lost. "Mob criticism is, of course, the ultimate test which every play must meet, but our idea was to criticize the mechanism of the plays," said Miss Ray.

In the meetings of the Playmakers, the chief points noted were probability, characterization and motivation. It was found that it was more difficult to judge a play from the reading than from the acting, where the deficiencies would be more noticeable. A play was only produced if it passed the initial stages of reading and discussion.

"The chief mistake of an amateur playwright is in introducing too complicated a plot and too many characters. If you want to write a good one-act play, have it as simple as possible, using nothing that will detract from the main theme, and adopt no theme that you cannot develop reasonably in a half hour," Miss Ray advised. A certain one-act play failed to pass criticism because it was written in two scenes, and there was a definite break in the interest and coherence was lost.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

MACKENZIE DEPLORES EUROPEAN SITUATION

tremely serious for Europe in view of the latter's economic condition.

Professor Mackenzie believes that the theory of pacifism is a long-term policy and in this case is "out". It did not help the Chinese in Manchuria and is no guarantee that any country in the future encouraged by Mussolini's example will not do likewise.

The isolationist or North American policy, which means to wash one's hands of Europe and Asia and leave unto oneself at least politically, is a possibility and if the League fails in this issue and seems unlikely to succeed in the future, Mr. Mackenzie would suggest that it be given consideration for the problem of peace.

The third policy which is that of peace on a general scale, Professor Mackenzie believes to be the only adequate solution. Our support should be given to constructive policy until this has been proved useless.

In the immediate question of Italy and Abyssinia Professor Mackenzie believes Italy has not a leg to stand on but that there is an adequate explanation for what she has done since she is under supplied in an industrial way. Mr. Mackenzie believes that the markets for obtaining what is necessary to life ought to be opened to Italy; by high tariff walls the other nations of the world have refused her these markets and she is facing a serious economic and financial condition. Under this pressure Abyssinia looked like easy prey and she pounced upon her.

ART, MUSIC AND ORAMA

hear Miss Lehmann in a solo recital. Her reception as soloist with the Symphony last year was most favourable and her distinguished career as a singer continued to heighten our anticipation.

With respect to her voice, despite the fact that she may at times have been in slightly better form, its natural richness and almost contralto tinkle is remarkably beautiful. It has the bigness, warmth and flexibility that are associated with the Wagnerian roles in which she excels. There is a particular fascination in the prospect of a leader recital by one who is first and foremost an operatic singer. It is first of all unusual and most welcome. It is an art form so different that it does not necessarily follow that success in one implies success in the other.

The programme was far from daring. Indeed if our familiarity with the song literature were wider we would not hesitate to call it hackneyed. The best known songs of Schubert and Schumann, Strauss, Gretchenhof, Rachmaninoff and Brahms comprised this whole programme. Not even the greatness of a Lehmann could redeem the ballad song of the accompanist from the most trivial commonplace. While her singing of the lieder was undeniably beautiful it was rather the result of the medium of exquisite tone than any subtle and specialized treatment of the lieder. Though the singing was at all times completely satisfying it hardly breathed that exaltation of spirit with which a few exponents of lieder singing have imbued it. F.B.S.

STUDENTS REJECT MILITARISTIC ARMISTICE CEREMONY

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Rome—Mussolini has formulated a peace proposal which will put Ethiopia under League rule, with an international control of the territories by the countries which are interested in them. Rome wants the zone she is now occupying as well as the areas given her by earlier treaties. Assab, in Eritrea, is to be a free port, thus giving Abyssinia an outlet to the sea.

Athens—A republican revolt in protest to the monarchist dictatorship of Regent George Kondylis is sweeping over Greece. The situation is most serious at Crete.

Toronto—Premier McPherson has begun an investigation to stamp out any alignment between beer interests and hotels. A report on Mohawk Investments, Ltd., will be given very shortly.

Stockholm—Hans Spemann, professor of zoology in the University of Freiburg, has been awarded the Nobel prize in medicine for his work in embryonic evolution.

Ottawa—The new Dominion Cabinet has already begun work, tackling the Dominion-Provincial conference, and plans for the national unemployment commission.

Toronto—A record Canadian vote of over four million was cast in the recent federal election.

BROADCASTING WORK DONE BY STUDENTS

Experimental Station Operated by Central Technical School

VARSLITY STATION NOT USED

Learning that Tufts College, Massachusetts, had recently opened a radio station for the use of students interested in broadcasting, The Varsity tried yesterday to discover whether any similar developments had taken place here. Mr. Bailey, of the Electrical Engineering staff, said, when questioned, that there is a small experimental station here, but it is not yet in operation, and so far is not being used by the students in connection with practical work in any course. It is of 100 watts power, and is on short waves, under call letters VE 3 KI.

Inquiries were also made at Central Technical School and it was found that there is a radio station there, which is active in the winter months, and will be on the air in about a month's time. It has a transmitter rated at 250 watts, and its call letters are VE 3 ED. Mr. Hanes, who is in charge of the station and of the work connected with it, said that it is used in the industrial courses: aircraft, electrical engineering, and so on; the students, realizing the value of such work, especially in connection with aircraft, are showing great interest. The station was only founded a year ago, but it is hoped that it will become much more active in the course of the next few years. The group working with it this year, said Mr. Hanes, are very much interested in it, and four of them hold amateurs' licenses.

The other technical schools in the city, according to Mr. Hanes, have classes in radio work, but no broadcasting station.

RIDDELL DISCUSSES PEACE SITUATION

Militarist, Communist and League Theories for Peace Nullified

LEAGUE UNSATISFACTORY

That a general movement for peace is growing throughout the world was the opinion expressed by R. G. Riddell in his address to the Student Peace Movement Wednesday night. Almost every government is being obliged to take cognizance of the strong force of public opinion on peace.

Mr. Riddell discussed the various solutions which have been offered for maintaining peace and pointed out the flaws in most of them. "Pacifism seemed to me for a long time to be the best solution offered," he declared, "but I realize that under the emotional stress aroused by a war crisis it is apt to break down." He spoke of the militaristic and the Communist proposals for insuring peace and showed how in each case their respective arguments prove illusory.

"There remains, therefore, only the League of Nations," affirmed the speaker. "Yet the League has proved itself unsatisfactory in many respects. He discussed the reasons why the League has failed as an effective force for world peace.

SECURITIES COMMISSION EXPOSES STOCK FRAUDS

Commission's Advisory Capacity Stressed by J. C. Godfrey at Law Club

The work of the Ontario Securities Commission, the exposing of "gold stock gangsters" and "boiler rooms," was discussed by Mr. J. C. Godfrey at the Law Club on Wednesday night. "The boiler room" clean-up was one of the Commission's greatest efforts," said Mr. Godfrey. "We discovered that watered stocks and false securities were being sold by telephone. Huge chambers containing 50 to 60 telephones over which smooth-tongued salesmen sold their 'stuff' were disclosed. By a check-up on the Bell Telephone Co. tolls and a stiffening of company regulations, thousands of dollars were recovered and these 'boiler rooms' were cleaned up. One company had spent $16,000 in a single month cheating the public by telephone.

"I must say, however, that our greatest work is not in running these artful dodgers out of the country. We are schooling the Ontario people in the art of knowing what stocks and bonds really are, the principle of capital dividends and other technicalities necessary for their own safety. They are even being aided by a close perusal of all advertising matter dealing with securities.

Explains His Conception of Individual Psychology in Interview

DIFFERS FROM FREUD

Dictators Confuse Group
Egotism and Social Interest
Says Democrat

By Nora Leeb

In an exclusive interview with The Varsity, Dr. Felix Adler outlined his singular position in the broad psychological world.

The open friendliness of this Viennese doctor, famed for his invention of the term, "inferiority complex", immediately relieved us of any of the inferiority complexes we might have had as we shook hands with him in the lobby of the Royal York Hotel.

After enjoying an hour of his magnetic personality we could easily understand why people from all over the world have come to his clinic in Vienna to be cured of their neurotic complexes and to again find an interest in life. Such has been Dr. Adler's life work. To make an individual a help and not a burden is his slogan.

"Just what is this Individual Psychology which you invented, Dr. Adler, and how does it differ from the Freudian?" we asked, after this kind-hearted gentleman, elderly in age but youthful in enthusiasm, had placed us at our ease in an inconspicuous corner of the hotel.

"Individual Psychology differs from other psychologies, in that it is a working psychology, interested in how an individual reveals himself to outside problems. The others are theories, interested in mental contents, such as drives, instincts, reflexes or unconscious." (Continued on Page 4)

WOMEN DEFEND MODERN MUSIC

"Jazz an Expression of Lowest Instincts of Human Nature"

MOTION UPHELD BY HOUSE

"Music such as the Wedding March is a necessary complement to the great moments of life," stated Anne Ferguson of University College, in upholding the resolution "That modern jazz is better than no music at all," at a meeting of the Women's Debating Society on Wednesday afternoon.

The speaker went on to demonstrate that not only was a world without music an unthinkable prospect, but that jazz helped to inculcate "those virtues after which we are all striving." She pointed out the impulse towards personal neatness fostered by "Tie-in" my white tie, brushin' off my tails" and the recommendation of sound conservatism contained in "Honey, take it sweet and slow."

"Jazz is not an expression of thought, or even feeling, but of the lowest instincts of human nature," said Elsie Chisholm of Trinity College, the speaker for the negative. She asserted that corrupted ideas were worse than non-existent. "Moreover jazz is only a technique for playing music, not music itself," the speaker declared.

After an open debate the motion was put to the meeting, and the devotees of Fred Waring et al gained a substantial majority.

UNDEFEATED BLUES FINISH SCHEDULE WITH 14-0 VICTORY

Mumford Stars as Juniors
Outclass Eastsides on Thursday

ALL SCORING IN FIRST HALF

Blues Favourites to Trim
Rivals in T.R.U.
Finals

Varsity's smart junior rugby team handed Eastsides a 14-0 trimming on the back campus yesterday morning to finish the T.R.U. schedule undefeated. The Junior Blues showed strength in all departments of the game and must be favoured to win the T.R.U. finals, with Eastsides probably, beginning next Wednesday.

Varsity scored all their points in the first half and for thirty minutes completely outclassed the boys from the east end. The Blues completed passes and moved the yardsticks in senior style while the Eastsides struggled hard but ineffectively. Mumford of Varsity climaxed a splendid series of line plunges by barging through for a touchdown, and a few minutes later Owens bucked his way over the Eastsides' zero line for Varsity's second major score, which was not converted. Forcing the play and taking advantage of their opponents' fumbles, the Blues forced the Eastenders back to their one-yard line and broke through and held them for a safety touch. Thompson of Varsity kicked a point to complete the scoring.

Eastsides launched a strong offensive from the first of the second half and had Varsity on the run for a few minutes. They made yards and completed two forwards in a row but lost the ball trying to make the third down near the Blues' line. The play was very close at this point and the tackling hard.

For Varsity, Mumford, the plunging half, was a standout, cracking the Eastenders' line again and again. Sirdervan, captain and middle, was the spark-plug of the team and kept the Blues' front line functioning. Owens played a steady game at flying-wing, and plunged well. Thompson kicked well and consistently, and Fennell, outside, did some fine tackling. Nickle, Walden and Martin looked best for Eastsides.

VARSLITY SECONDS MEET M'MASTER

Full-Strength Blue Team Will

Saturday

GRAY AND RIPLEY BACK

Varsity's unsung band of gridders, the fighting Seconds, meet the Mc-Master footballers in their most crucial test of the season this Saturday at Varsity Stadium. It will be do or die for the Blue lads, a loss will practically put them out of the football picture for another year. So if the Toronto lads have any championship aspirations they will have to leave the Maes on the short end of the score.

Although the Hamilton crew will enter the fray slight favourites, due to the 29-8 drubbing the handed the Blue representatives last Saturday, they will find a much stronger opposition on their hands. The Blues were severely handicapped last week when two of the main bulwarks of the team were moved up to the senior ranks. These players, Barry Gray, quarter, and Ripley, half, will again be with the seconds when they line up. Whether their addition will be enough to enable the Blues to hand their opponents their first defeat of the season will have to be seen. The (Continued on Page 4)

Alumni Federation Unable to Exclude C.O.T.C. from Own Service

Since the Alumni Federation have rejected its petition to exclude the C.O.T.C. from the Remembrance Day service the Student's Christian Movement will hold a service of its own on November 11th. This announcement was made Wednesday afternoon following a lengthy meeting of the executive. The service will be probably held in Hart House Theatre from 10.50 to 11.05 on Armistice Day on entirely non-militaristic lines.

In announcing the service, S.C.M. officials stressed the fact that it was not to be considered as an opposition service to that conducted by the C.O.T.C. It is felt that there are a number of students on the campus who deem the ceremony as it has been conducted in previous years not in keeping with the spirit of Remembrance Day and who favour a peace service. It is to fill their need that the S.C.M. has taken this step. Peace throughout the world will be the theme of the service, and an effort will be made to get as many (Continued on Page 4)

Varsity Reinforced For McGill Battle

Williams and Witzel Back in Game to Bolster Blue Defense

ISBISTER OUT

By W. A. Croshaw

Strengthened by the return of two of last week's absentees the University of Toronto Blue and White gridders departed for Montreal this morning fully confident of taking the measure of McGill's Redmen at Molson Stadium tomorrow afternoon. The game will determine the leadership of the college circuit as the Blues are now but one point ahead of Coach Joe O'Brien's charges.

A. Williams, regular Blue snap, and Jack Witzel, regular inside wing player who were out of the line-up last week due to injuries received at Kingston, have recovered sufficiently to warrant their return to the Blue and White front line. The return of Al Williams to his snaphack position will allow Turney Williams to revert to his regular inside wing berth after a hectic week at the centre position.

Big Bob Ibsister will be an absentee for the second week in succession, his injured leg having failed to come round completely. The big Blue kicking star has returned home for the week-end to allow his leg to get as much rest as possible. Captain Bobby Coulter has now recovered sufficiently to allow him to resume his position as safety man on the Blue backfield. Joe Connolly, heady star of the Stewens' running corps, will thus be moved up closer to the line where his smart tackling and knocking down of forward passes was missed last week.

With the Blue first line of defence finally patched up Coach Stevens will be reasonably sure that Andy Anton will not run wild as he did last week. Anton was the Blues' chief menace last (Continued on Page 4)

No Lurid Headlines For 'Toronto the Good'

The title, "Toronto the Good", has come to be applied to our city in a somewhat sarcastic tone by our neighbours to the south. Such an epithet may not, under some conditions, appear attractive, but it is at least comforting to know that in some respects the city earns it. This is strikingly exemplified by a casual glance at yesterday's Buffalo Evening News. The front page of this paper, which boasts a relatively large circulation, carries seven assorted stories of violence and death. The murder of the "Dutch Schultz" gang rates an eight-column line, while vivid accounts of narcotic raids, murders, gang killings and kidnappings occupy most of the front page. Toronto's morning papers have no such stories of Canadian hoodlum acts of violence to carry, and make only casual reference to those committed among our neighbouring citizens who choose to sarcastically call our city "Toronto the Good".

Some Information On Armistice Service

A propos of the Armistice Day Service at the Memorial Tower, the President of the Alumni Federation has furnished us with the following information:

After the war it was thought that some permanent memorial to those University men, both graduates and undergraduates, who died in service, should be erected. The graduates of the various colleges and faculties had already their own alumni associations. The various alumni associations co-operated and committees were formed for collecting subscriptions. Several hundred thousands of dollars were subscribed, but there was no corporate body to administer the funds.

It was then, in the year 1921, that the Alumni Federation of the University of Toronto was incorporated, for the purpose of administering these funds. Since then there has been considerable expansion in its activities.

The Memorial Tower and the Tablet Arcade were completed in 1924. In the fall of that year, at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Alumni Federation, the matter of a Memorial Service at the Tower for the fallen men was brought to the attention of the Board. It was understood that such a service would be held annually on Armistice Day when the funds were handed over to the Federation.

As practically all of the undergraduates and some of the graduates who enlisted were members of the C.O.T.C., it was thought that the service should probably be under the auspices of the C.O.T.C., and the President and the Secretary of the Federation were delegated to confer with Colonel Lang in regard thereto. Both bodies co-operated in the arrangements for the service, but it was in reality a C.O.T.C. service, although the Alumni had built the Tower.

In the fall of 1925 it occurred to the Board of Directors that the undergraduate body should have some part in the service. Lt. Col. (now Mr. Justice) McFarland, was delegated to confer with Lt. Col. T. R. Loudon, second-in-command of the C.O.T.C., in regard to this, and the S.A.C. was approached with a view to enlisting the co-operation of the undergraduates. It is understood that the matter was discussed at an executive meeting of the S.A.C. in October, 1925, but nothing was ever done by that body.

Gradually, it was left entirely to the Federation to make all arrangements for the service. The Federation Directorate was always anxious that the undergraduates should participate in the service, and arrangements were made for suspension of lectures for two hours to afford the opportunity to the undergraduates to attend. There was never a large attendance of the undergraduates. This year suspension of lectures is for 35 minutes only.

A few years ago the Federation Directorate felt that the service might be made more simple and impressive. Up until then the entire battalion of the C.O.T.C. paraded. Colonel Cockburn was quite in accord with the suggestion that a guard of honour only of the C.O.T.C. be present at the service, and this arrangement has been followed in the last two years. Also, the placing of wreaths at the foot of the tablets was discontinued as a part of the service. The Federation Directorate is very grateful to the Victoria College Music Club for leading in the singing, and sincerely hopes that the undergraduate body will feel that this is their service as much as that of the graduates, although the Federation still believes it is its own responsibility to conduct the service.

After the building of the Memorial Tower and the Tablet Arcade a considerable amount remained, and several War Memorial Scholarships were established which are granted by the Alumni Federation.

This explanation of the origin of the Tower and of the service is given in view of an apparent misunderstanding which exists fairly generally among the undergraduates.

Another Viewpoint On German Situation

The Varsity recently published an editorial dealing with the political situation in Germany, in which it was suggested that all was not serene within the realm of Hitler. The information upon which this editorial was based came from a reliable source, but presented only one side of the picture. As there are two sides to every issue, we take the liberty to publish here another point of view, expressed by one of our reading public.

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

The editorial in a recent Varsity, on the decline and fall of the National Socialist government in Germany, has interested me greatly. I have been in Germany in the past two summers and my observations do not correspond in the least with that of your informant.

I found tremendous enthusiasm for Hitler and his ideals everywhere. I have talked with all kinds of people—well educated and travelled members of the upper class speaking half a dozen languages, Storm Troopers and black-shirted S.S.-men, common landmen in a village Bierstube. They all say the same thing—Hitler is the best for Germany. These people all freely expressed their opinions of the country's leaders. The Austrians are far more afraid to speak out than the Germans. The editorial said that "it is officially estimated . . . that Hitler is lucky if he possesses the confidence of 54 per cent of the masses." I would like to know by what process of mathematical intuition this figure was obtained. Why not 55 per cent? And who does the "official" estimating?

To quote again from The Varsity, "Foreign trade has fallen off and in reality the increase of jobs . . . is not very great." In the October 1935 issue of Current History Paul Einzig, the foreign editor of the London "Financial News" and of the "Banker", says "The economic recovery in Germany since the beginning of 1933 has undoubtedly gone further than in any other country. . . . the extent of trade revived has been spectacular." He goes on to say that there has been a remarkable decrease in unemployment and unemployment support and an increase in taxation revenue. The banks have liquidated their frozen credits. Again, "Economic conditions under the Hitler regime have continued to improve." These quotations were preceded by the statement that "National Socialism in Germany stands or falls with the success or failure of the efforts to improve economic conditions." Surely then the 54 per cent seems a little weak.

It is difficult when travelling through a country to obtain much accurate information about its economic and political state. Yet it is most amazing the way casual Anglo-Saxons travelling through Germany on their way to Salzburg, with a copy of Pierre van Paassen's latest pipe-dreams under their arms, and glorying in their ignorance of any foreign language, can tell you anything you want to know about Hitler and prophesy his fall. As to the tense atmosphere and lack of smiling faces and conversation in the trains, have you ever ridden in a Toronto street-car?

The anti-Semitic drive is being carried on and intensified and the lot of the Jew is hard, but when one hears the German's side of the case, the sympathy that has been built up by blood-curdling reports in the American and Canadian press wanes.

It is high time that we Canadians examined our weird ideas of modern Germany and their sources, instead of hysterically condemning the country and its rulers.

I am, sir,

Of human gore.

Today's after dinner story concerns a young lady, Varsity graduate and resident of this village, who had the pleasant experience of a head-on collision while she was driving her car home from a frat convention this summer. Upon the sudden impact of her head against it, the shatterproof windshield cracked neatly in four directions, cutting her up somewhat and putting her in the hospital most of the summer. To put you at ease, she has now safely recovered, but the other day a boy friend of hers kindly offered to take a bus down to the town where the accident occurred, and bring home the car (Continued on Page 4)

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Eaton Auditorium

Cornelia Otis Skinner presents a program of Cornelia Otis Skinner. Peculiarly this is enough, for this artist with but a minimum of properties can create more mental agility in the audience than could be expected. And not only is it her acting that charms, her material is also a considerable asset.

The secret of her appeal is in the combination of her talent with her script. At times the lines are so funny that her audiences will continually interrupt with applause. Yet she does not allow herself to become a mere teller of stories. Her most hilarious sketch, "Being Presented", was the most popular. It found her in the role of a woman from the Middle West, this is a type with which Miss Skinner finds herself at home.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Nothing very new has turned up over Thanksgiving. Twelve girls attended the tap class on Wednesday, and are very enthusiastic about the whole scheme. There should be an even bigger turnout next Wednesday. Several girls are planning to attend the class, and then go for a swim afterwards. It's quite an idea. By the way, we hear that there might be an intercollegiate swimming team this year. There's nothing definite about it, and it's only a vague possibility, but at least it is a possibility. We have some first class material around this University, that would be right at home in intercollegiate swimming circles. The aquatic stars would then have a chance to earn their senior T's. Right now, only the tennis and basketball players have a chance.

Vic have been having a lot of fun with their inter-year baseball games. The freshies went to bat against the sophomores the other night, and defeated the latter 20-15, which isn't bad for beginners.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crocker

With ideal football weather prevailing, about twelve thousand fans jammed the gates of Ross Workman's bowl yesterday afternoon to witness, what we believe, one of the best played football games of the current season between Sarnia Imperials, the Dominion champions, and the Balmy Beach aggregation. The game had just what it takes to make an ideal crowd-pleaser. There were the inevitable fumbles which gave rise to renewed hope in some fans and despair in others. There were many beautiful forward passes and crushing plunges through the line which brought the fans to their feet cheering excitedly. There were towering spiral punts which travelled more than sixty-five yards. In short the game lacked nothing to make it interesting. One thing went wrong as far as Toronto's end was concerned. The final score was in favour of the Sarnians. However, with but a few "breaks" in luck Toronto's Easterners might be singing merrily today. Had the Beach squad had less butter-fingered gentry on the receiving end of some of their forward passes the score might easily have been reversed. At that the feature of the game was the throwing of Ab Box. Boxie is as good a finger as anyone in these parts, even rivaling our own Hughie Marks. With the O.R.F.U. play-offs still to come Coach Alec Ponton's charges may yet be able to stop the Imperials.

Going into the final half of the schedule Warren Stevens' Blues find themselves at the top of the intercollegiate standing with a single-point lead. McGill Varsity's closest rival, will have a royal chance of again assuming the lead if they can down Varsity tomorrow at Molson Stadium. However, the Redmen's chances of accomplishing this feat are very slight right now as two of Varsity's absentees of last week have returned to the wars. The third won't be missed too much. Al Williams, snap, and Jack Witzel, inside, are the two lads who have returned to the fold and this means that Steve's front line is once again back to normal. Anton, McQuarrie, MacArthur and pals will no doubt find the going quite different from last week. With Coulter fully recovered the starry Blue captain will again be back as safety man and this means that most of Herbie Westman's towering punts will be run back for large Varsity gains, thus nullifying any advantage the Redmen may have in the kicking department.

Big Bob Isbister, Hamilton's gift to Varsity, will again be missed from the line-up. His injured leg has failed to heal completely and as a result Coach Stevens proposes giving the booting star another week's layoff in preparation for the Queen's assignment next week. Cam Gray will thus be given another opportunity of displaying his versatility on the Blue backfield. The youthful Gray is as good as they come and Stevens is quite fortunate in having a replacement of Gray's ability. Cam showed last Saturday that he can hold his own against the great Westman so that Stevens should have no kicking worries. As a final word on the game—Steve is very optimistic about tomorrow's game and when Warren is in an optimistic mood there can be little doubt as to the outcome.

Don Graham's Varsity Juniors are still unbeaten. The young Blues chalked up a 14-0 win against Eastides yesterday in the final game of the T.R.U. junior schedule. Coach Graham deserves a lot of credit for the work he has been doing the past few years in building up championship junior aggregations, thus supplying Varsity's senior squads with the necessary replacement material year after year.

The U. of T. English rugby squad, intercollegiate champions for the past two years, will inaugurate their season's schedule with a game in Kingston tomorrow. This tilt will, however, only be an exhibition affair as several of the Queen's players are ineligible for intercollegiate competition. However, the game will serve as a sort of test of the Blues' power. Queen's held McGill to a 7-6 score last week and the final score of tomorrow's engagement should reveal Varsity's chances of holding the title for a third successive year.

Interfaculty Soccer

The interfaculty soccer game between U.C. and Knox on Wednesday afternoon on the front campus resulted in a smashing victory for the U.C. squad. In the first half U.C., fighting against a very heavy wind as well as a strong team, aided Errington to score the first goal.

In the second half, with the wind behind them and a strong defence to guard their goal-posts, the U.C. men swept the field, Bryden and Custens each contributing one goal, making a total of 3-1 in favour of U.C.

Basketball Schedule

INTERMEDIATE MEET HELD AT HAMILTON

This afternoon the track and field season officially ends with the intermediate track meet at McMaster. The Seconds get a real break this year because McMaster and Western sent their best men to the senior meet here, and will not be allowed to use them again. This means that Varsity has a good chance of winning the title.

Coach Phillips is taking seventeen men to Hamilton and several of last year's point winners are included. Harris and Hawker, who placed 1st and 2nd in the sprints last year, are expected to place again although Ray Schicfle of McMaster may give them a lot of trouble. Delaney, a freshman, and Fleming of S.P.S., will take care of the middle distances, aided by Thompson, who is also running in the three-mile event. Burton, who was Thompson's team-mate on the Senior Harriers last year, is also in the three mile run.

In the field events Russ Eaton is expected to bring home some points, and he will be well supported by Rowell and Dempster. Sproules, a Hamilton boy, will compete against his home town in the broad jump.

McMaster squad is strong in every department and will certainly be a tough nut for Messrs. Gray, Taft, Jarvis and company to crack.

Although the Varsity squad is not quite as strong as at the beginning of the grind, since Edwards and McGlavin were elevated to the big time, they are still able to present a formidable front to any team. Gray is a sure-fire senior prospect for next year. Jarvis is one of the best line smashers in the league, while Bowlen and Ripley can match punts with any of the opposition. Powell and Shukun at end are fine tacklers; Beatty and Willoughby are a tower of strength along the line. These men plus their battling teammates will doubtless make the going plenty tough for the McMaster gang.

S.C.M. CONDUCT SEPARATE SERVICE

Students from other lands to take part as possible, in order to give the service the international atmosphere which is intended.

The Alumni Association, in turning down the plea of the S.C.M. for a University non-militaristic service, have issued a statement explaining that, while not adverse to such a service, they are not in a position to exclude the C.O.T.C. from participation, as the usual services, generally thought to be under the direction of the University, were inaugurated and are still under the sponsorship of the C.O.T.C. The impossibility of excluding them from their own service is obvious, but it is felt that the Peace service of the S.C.M. will fill the needs of those students who do not care to participate in a military remembrance.

"Individual psychology differs from Freud's in its fundamental explanatory principle. Freud tries to explain everything by showing how a libido or a desire changes. It is not the libido but the creative power of a child that produces all the difficulties in an individual's behaviour and causes mental disorders.

"Every school of psychology mirrors the person who starts it, and the psychology of Freud is the psychology of a pampered child." Dr. Adler said, with sympathy rather than disgust. "Freud has a great many followers because there are lots of pampered children in the world. Their point of view towards life is, 'What can we get out of it?'. To justify this view is to justify the existence of the destructive type of individual, and the result will always be war and tyranny."

"Are Hitler and Mussolini pampered children?" we queried.

"Yes," this Austrian believer in democracy declared. "These two leaders lack the right degree of social interest and hence their activity goes all wrong. They try to fool the people, by making them believe there is no difference between group egoism and social interest. Ultimately they will find that they are only fooling themselves."

"Did Fascism develop because there were men like Hitler and Mussolini eager for power, or did the situation make the men?" we asked.

"It was the latter," Felix Adler declared. "People were suffering, and the outlook for the future was not pleasant. The simplest way for the individual to get things was to take them from the weaker persons or groups. Hitler and Mussolini were stronger than the rest of the people, and so they reached the top first and took the most. In Germany it is not because Jews are Jews, and Catholics are Catholics that they are suppressed, but because they are weaker than the group in power and Hitler can take from them more easily."

"The trouble with the people who are socially interested is that they take action too late. Because they know they are right they think that that is all that is necessary to get people to flock to their side. Consequently, the unsocially interested have very little opposition in their climb to the top."

"Is the League of Nations socially interested, do you think, Dr. Adler?" "Only partly so," was his reply. "They are socially interested in that they do not want war but each country is always looking to its own advantage."

"Do you place any value in the other psychologies?" was our last question. "Yes, other psychologies have contributed something," he said. "I am not hostile to any psychology. If you look at the history of psychology you look at a cemetery. Each psychology buries the other. I, myself, do not want to be a grave-digger."

Maple Leaf Gardens

Toronto is the only city outside of New York to be favoured with a performance by the Radio City Music Hall Ballet. This marvellously trained organization is to appear here at the Maple Leaf Gardens tonight and Saturday. Reginald Stewart and his orchestra of one hundred players has been engaged to support the dancers as well as to delight the audiences with well known orchestral selections. There will be a complete change of program each night.

Co-eds' Gym Seems Inadequate

The inadequacy of the Lillian Massey Building, as the centre of the women's physical training activities, has long been a target for adverse criticism in female circles at the University. Gymnasium work is compulsory for first year students only, and these too are excused if they can manage to dig up a cold or a head-ache as an alibi, and persuade those in attendance at 44 Hoskin Ave. that they are badly in need of one of those famous "rest-periods".

The "coeds" themselves are not entirely to blame for this apathetic attitude; even the most enthusiastic are a little dampened after a few weeks at school. In order to take the physical training class, the student must rush up to the Lillian Massey Building, at Bloor and Avenue Road, (possibly from Baldwin House), she must hurry to change and be ready for the class; all in the space of ten minutes. After the class, she has then to take a shower, change clothes, and rush back in time for the next lecture.

Not only is the Lillian Massey Building too remote from the rest of the University, but the building itself is totally inadequate for the needs of the women students. It is out of the question to play basketball there, because of the size of the floor, and it is necessary for all women's basketball teams to conduct their practices in the gymnasium of the Ontario College of Education.

All swimming meets held for the women by the University Swimming Club are held in the pool, also at O.C.E. In order to stimulate an interest in swimming generally, and to produce swimmers of note, there should be a tank of sufficient size to accommodate them. Swimming is perhaps the one field of activity in which most women could take part and because of the cramped quarters they are deprived even of this form of physical exercise and athletic competition.

The facilities of the whole gymnasium are in such a state as to be utterly deplored; the equipment is scarce, the floor is too small, the showers are too few in number, and the swimming pool resembles too much the proportions of a bath-tub. It is regrettable that conditions like these exist in an institution where co-education plays so large a part. In a University the size of Toronto, surely a situation of this sort demands immediate correction.

Too Many Youngsters?

Generalizations invariably involve one in difficulties. Nevertheless, we are going to generalize and say that people come to the University too young. The greatest flaw in the student body as a whole is its immaturity.

The official age at which one may enter the University as an Arts student is sixteen. In the majority of cases, with some ten years of preparation behind him, the sixteen-year-old is capable of understanding the studies he undertakes. Our argument is that he is incapable of appreciating them.

Otherwise we cannot explain the fact that University students, who are here presumably to pursue knowledge, should regard lectures and examinations as a burden. Nor can we explain the pernicious habit of neglecting academic work until April and then making a superhuman effort to cram a year's work in one month, except on the grounds of immaturity.

All good things can be overdone and in making education of easy access to the masses we are in danger of losing the art of true scholarship. A professor of English once said to us after assigning an essay, to the accompaniment of the usual groans from the class: "It should not be necessary for me to do this at all. If you were true students of English you would be handing essays in to me for criticism all the time." Which is perfectly true. In the days when learning was difficult to acquire men needed no incentive to study beyond that which came from within. One of our professors would probably never survive the shock of having an unsolicited essay handed him by an undergraduate.

Our point of view is that post-graduation is the time for research work and spontaneous enquiry and that undergraduate years should be spent primarily in achieving social contacts. Social contacts have a definite value in our modern life but University hardly seems the place to acquire them. The Universities have been the guardians of knowledge down through the ages. Social contacts can be acquired in preparatory schools and it would be infinitely better to prolong the time spent at these and send more mature minds to the University.

Those students who for financial reasons have to work for several years before coming to the University must invariably get more from their academic career than the youngsters fresh from High Schools. The older student has a more serious outlook on life, he can realize the importance of what he is studying. Above all he can see the irony of attending an institution of learning and hating the learning.

The most unfortunate thing about the present system is that the youthful student is quite unaware of what he is missing. Only afterwards when it is too late he realizes what opportunities went by him unnoticed.

The Headlines of To-morrow

One of the greatest contributors of all time to American literature is now being spurred on, like a wind storm out of the North, by Joseph Louis Barrow, the former Alabama shanty-towner who has driven like a thunderbolt to the top of the American pugilistic ranks in less than 18 months.

Driven by the meteoric rise of the Michigan Mauler, sports scribes far and near are cramming figurative language into their glowing accounts. Louis has now become Messrs. Dead-pan Joe, Dark Angel, Brown Embalmer, Ring Robot, Alabama Assassin, Sepia Slasher, Tan Thunderbolt, Detroit Dynamiter and Wildcat Warrior.

Critic everywhere agree that the exploits of the Coffee-coloured Crusher have pushed former record language figures out of the American literary picture. Such one-time high-water marks as Sultan of Swat, Ruppert Rifles, Golden Gophers, Golden Grid-iron Horde and the more recent Charley's Grimm Reaper have been relegated to the background in favour of the irrepressible onslaught caused by the Tan Tanner's dramatic career.

Even headlines, such as Tempestuous Tigers Curb Chicago Cubs, are responding to the modern trend towards power in the sports page. Who can say that the influence will not spread further?

Veteran scribes agree that the time is just around the corner when war correspondents in Swarthby Se Lassie's kingdom, chronicling the achievements of Ethiopian snipers, will headline: Selassie's Sly Snoopers Scrap Enemy Gains. Or maybe Hirsute Haile's Hordes will advance and cause Dour Duce to Deny Recent Retreat Rumors. Dour Duce will retort that the glowering Lion of Judah is being eaged as Roaring Romans Razz Rases in New Ethiopian tilts.

Legion indeed are the ramifications of this modern trend, spurred on by the almost unbelievable deeds of Detroit's Dun Demon.—Minnesota Daily.

According to two Harvard professors, the World War was eight times bigger than all the 901 historically recorded wars which preceded it.

There are two kinds of education. One is that which makes you pass examinations, the other is the one you enjoy. This makes an education an atmosphere, a discipline, and a lift, and produces a human being.—Bishop David, of Liverpool.

One trouble with the world is the long time between thinks.—The Shaft.

It was a friend of ours by the name of Berkeley who was driving down from Barrie on Friday when coming towards him he discovered a speeding car decked out in streamers and ribbons and dragging a full quota of old shoes, tin cans, etc., etc. in its wake. The deduction was simple, and our observer says he smiled benignly as the happy couple whizzed by. They had left their persuing friends far behind and were well away for a happy Thanksgiving.

A sentimental tear in his eye, Berkeley craned his neck to get a last sight of the disappearing love birds, and it was then he discovered the large placard tied to the spare tire,—

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Radio City Ballet

It was intimated in the downtown press that the old gentlemen in Friday night's audience at the Maple Leaf Gardens were more than delighted with the Radio City Ballet. This is exactly as it should be, the program could not have been selected to more accurately meet their requirements. One thing that they might criticize—the dancers could have kept together in the routines, that would have pleased even the younger members of the audience.

Mr. Stewart is to be congratulated for assembling so many fine musicians, the violins were especially good—but having bought up all the local talent to match New York's offering, he might have chosen something more worthy of their efforts than the Ballet music from "Faust" or even the 1812 Overture. The orchestral numbers were well done but lacking in colour—a criticism that one can make too often when Mr. Stewart is conducting.

With all due respect to Radio City and its millions the Ballet is nothing better than second class vaudeville. They displayed imperfect technique, which was to be expected under the circumstances, and the choreography was hackneyed. Their first number, Ballet Classique, was exactly what you would expect, with the usual toe acrobatics and much twirling and posing (applause from the old gentlemen).

AN ORCHID TO "THE VARSITY" FROM QUEBEC

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Since The Varsity seems to enjoy mild pats on the back in the form of fan mail here is my contribution.

At the beginning of term I bundled together a few copies of the "Daily rag" and sent them to a French-Canadian teacher in Quebec. He is interested in journalism and is also very keen to improve her English! This was her response.

"Merci sincere de la bonne idee que vous avez eue de m'adresser le 'Varsity' que j'ai lu avec anxiété et que j'ai goûté. M'intéressant au journalisme j'aime tout ce qui s'y rattache et votre petit journal quotidien est très pratique. Il est rédigé avec soin et je vous remercie de m'avoir donné l'occasion de le lire et de l'apprécier comme j'apprécie tout ce qui me parle de Toronto."

I might add that this teacher was here last summer for the special course in English and she writes enthusiastically of the fine University and of the good time she had in our midst.

Yours sincerely,

A. M. S.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By J. E. T.

The interfaculty basketball series is scheduled to start off tonight, with what is expected to be a real tussle between St. Mike's and Vic seniors. The St. Mike's aggregation has some very encouraging material in their freshe crop turning out to practice. Of these Sonny McLaughlin promises to be a star. Although Agnes Gardner, the former prop of the team, has graduated, the Saints have every reason to expect a win. Mary McCarthy, on the forward line, and Mary Gallagher, on the defence, are two outstanding players remaining from last year's team. The seniors at Vic have a very fine player in Betty Jenkinson, who did stellar work with last season's juniors, and also distinguished herself on the intermediate intercollegiate squad.

The University College junior and senior basketball teams have planned a general scrimmage for Tuesday from 6 to 8 at O.C.E. gym. This may develop into a free-for-all, but it will certainly be a good work-out for all those interested. The practise schedule for the U.C. juniors has been definitely settled at last. They are to have the O.C.E. gym on Wednesday and Fridays from 6 to 7 p.m. This arrangement is final.

Baseball news from Vic is very encouraging. The first and second years played their game off last week, with the freshmen soundly trouncing the second year nine. Third year beat fourth, and the final game between the freshmen and the third year students will be played some time this week. The general opinion at Vic is that the best material for the College team will come from the freshe year. Joy Brownlee, Gladys Wagg and Fern Kennedy are considered to have the best chances of making the interfaculty squad.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George Vair

Will there be an intercollegiate play-off? Not if McGill finishes in second place since the new rule passed by representatives of all four universities states that if the second place team has been beaten in both scheduled games by the first place team there will be no play-off. In order for this to happen McGill will have to beat the Tricolour in their own backyard in the last game of this season. If they lose they will at least have softened up the Kingston gridders for the play-off series since it should be a battle royal. McGill still remember the elbow-smashing game with Queen's when at least three Montreal players received hospital attention two years ago.

Varsity's forward passing combination of Marks and Connelly pulled the same play in almost the identical spot as in last week's game and it was again good for a touch. Hughie threw a 35-yard pass to Connelly, who received it on McGill's 15-yard line and romped over for a touch. Cam Gray added 7 more points to his mounting total when he kicked two placement and a single. Looks like this hard working youngster will again lead the union in points scored.

Queen's must surely have hung up a record of some kind when they scored three touches in 5 minutes to win their game with Western 18-10. Two of the major scores were the result of Western fumbles while the other was well deserved with Munro running 55 yards through the entire opposing team.

Jack Dawson's intermediate crew won a very close decision over McMaster 12-11 and thereby went into a tie for first place with the Hamilton squad. "Whitey" Miller counted in every Blue score, through throwing the pass to Ripley for the touch, kicking the convert and dropping two placements over the bars. Ripley kicked a beautiful game for the winners, getting both height and distance on his kicks. The Blues were baffled by McMaster's passing attack and in the fourth quarter the visitors almost took the game home when they went 65 yards via the aerial route to Varsity's 20 yard stripe but a placement was wide.

Some people think that rugby is the roughest and toughest of all athletic pastimes, but we are inclined to place English rugby at the top of the list after the Varsity-Queen's game in Kingston last Saturday. In the first five minutes of play Jack Ewing, 145 lb. intercollegiate boxing champion, sustained a broken ankle while a second Queen's player had his leg broken. Varsity won the game 30-0.

BLUES SWAMP MCGILL; CLINCH LEAGUE LEAD

Ishister, who was out of the game due to a knee injury, Gray turned in a sensational performance, fitting in on end runs at times and holding his own against the great Herb Westman in the kicking department. Midway through the third period Gray took a pass from Coulter on an end run and galloped for sixty-five yards before McGill's safety man brought him down. The run was the longest gain of the current college schedule.

In piling up their impressive total the Blues scored two touchdowns, one by Connelly, who took a 30 yard pass from Marks and galloped the remaining fifteen and the other by Holden, who recovered a blocked kick behind McGill's line; two placements by Gray; a safety touch as a result of a second blocked kick; and a convert and a rouge. McGill scored their six points on a touchdown and a single. With the Blues on their 12-yard line in the fourth quarter Cam Gray fumbled the snap out, the ball rolling over the Blue line. Arden Hedge fell on it to score a major for O'Brien's men.

Herb Westman, veteran of McGill squads, turned in a mediocre performance. His kicking was good but his work as a safety man left a great deal to be desired. Andy Anton, last week McGill's surest ground gainer, was held throughout the whole contest. Letourneau, McArthur, McQuarrie and Ruschin turned in excellent performances for the Redmen.

Ruschin kicked off against the wind for McGill and Gray returned to McGill's thirty yard line. The Blue received the first of their nine penalties on the next play as Witzel high-kicked. McQuarrie fumbled at midfield and Marks recovered, and on a fake forward ran for 14 yards. From this point Gray sent a fifty-yard punt to Westman who was rouged for the Blues' first score. After an exchange of kicks Westman's hoist was blocked and Marks recovered at McGill's 30-yard stripe. A Marks to Connelly forward failed only four yards out and Gray kicked short to McGill's 8-yard mark. McGill immediately kicked out of danger to their 50-yard line. A Marks to Connelly forward was good for the first major score of the game as Connelly romped over the line unmolested. Gray converted. This ended the scoring in the first quarter.

In an effort to get the play in Varsity's end McGill started a kicking offensive aided by the wind which was now in their favour. However, McQuarrie fumbled the ball on Varsity's 42-yard line and Turney Williams recovered to ease the pressure. Coulter and then Connelly made large gains for Varsity, the latter finally taking the ball to McGill's 10-yard stripe. At this point the Red line stiffened and the Blues lost the ball after three attempts. Westman attempted to kick out of danger but his kick was blocked and Toronto got two points as Herbie recovered behind his line. The Toronto end runs then began to click in great fashion and the ball was taken to McGill's 12-yard mark, where Gray kicked for three points.

In the third quarter the Blues kept right on smashing through the Red wall and soon Gray kicked his second placement from 10 yards out. After a series of exchanges Gray made his sensational run of sixty-five yards. The Blues carried the oval to McGill's 3-yard stripe but again lost the ball on three unsuccessful plunges. In the final period Anton fumbled and Toronto recovered on their 32-yard stripe. The Blues were penalized for holding on the line and on the next snap out Gray fumbled the ball rolling over the Varsity line with Hedge falling on it for a major which was converted. Toward the end of the game Valeriot blocked Westman's kick and Holden recovered behind the Montreal line. The convert failed. Just before the whistle sounded Byrne tried an aside kick to which failed when Coulter knocked it out of touch for a single to end the scoring.

McGill: Riddell; Anton, Westman and McQuarrie; Byrne; F. Wigle; Ruschin and Freeman; Drury and Hornig; Letourneau and Robb; D. Wigle, McArthur, Stockwell, Hedge, Novinger, Mack, Fysha and Hall.

Proof that flying is fast taking a prominent place among the activities of Queen's students is apparent almost any afternoon at the Kingston airport. About a dozen embryo pilots are training under the guidance of Captain H. B. Free, a Queen's graduate who learned to fly during the Great War.—Queen's Journal.

Let's Go Places

Class Parties:

The throwing of parties on this campus has long since become an art, what with the competition offered by other years and other organizations. It has been decided to space in this column for mention, critical and otherwise, of those functions which have offered something novel in the way of entertainment.

379 Victoria:

The freshman class at Vic thus merits attention for the single fact that they successfully manipulated the red tape, and got permission to hold their first party in Burwash Hall on Friday evening. The decorative possibilities for coloured lighting were not made the most of, and this by first year who have the money to spend. The music supplied by a ten piece orchestra under the direction of Mike Cameron, was surprisingly good. Incidentally a good many of the executives are this year discovering the presence in town of non-union bands which will play for next to nothing, and play darn well. The 379 party was a real get together with the stag and doe lines, long traditional at freshmen frolics, very little in evidence.

"Religion is a basis for judgment, discrimination, direction. Although no church has a monopoly on religion, men and women have kept in touch with religion through the church down the ages." Miss Rutherford declared in outlining the characteristics of religious experience. The need for support of the church and greater unity between all denominations was also touched upon, and hope for solution of present-day problems through a change in the quality of the lives of individuals, was expressed.

In the Bolero Patricia Bowman and her partner did some very nice work, this final number was indeed more vigorous and less decadent than the other and certainly the costumes could not have been more colourful and extravagant, the whole effect was spoiled, however, by the imperfections in the—shall we say—chorus.

Sunday Evening Concert

Viggo Kihl, in a brilliantly selected program last evening opened this year's series of Sunday Evening Concerts. It was the hundred and fifth program since the concerts were begun several years ago.

Mr. Kihl delighted his listeners by presenting in a pleasing series everything from Bach to Ravel.

The mighty majesty of the "Fantasy and Fugue" G minor provided a fitting and familiar opening. The piece was originally written for organ but has suffered little in the transcription for piano of Franz List.

The understanding technique of Mr. Kihl in interpreting Bach is surpassed only by his sympathetic understanding and unique rendition of Beethoven. Indeed the singular feature of this artist is the way he feels toward his own playing. No matter how delighted his audience may be, no one in the hall enjoys his playing any more than he does himself.

Mr. Kihl is at his best in Beethoven and, although the piece chosen (the "Sonata A flat major, opus 110") is not one of the composer's most inspired works, it was capably and even magnificently well played.

Brahms' "Variations on a Theme by Paganini", Pt. I, formed the second part of the program. A splendid opportunity was offered in this number for the students to observe Mr. Kihl's perfect mastery of his instrument. Every measure of this difficult work was played with supreme ease and confidence.

The concluding part of the program contained shorter numbers by Chopin, Ravel, Schubert and Dohnanyi. The Schubert composition, "Moment Musical", was received with delight by the majority of the listeners to whom it was very familiar. Liszt's "La Campanella" was all that was needed to round out an ideal program. This piece, written to display the technique of the virtuoso, was played as we have never heard it before. It was played as an encore. Encored again Viggo Kihl played a masterful Polonaise of Chopin.

WANTS ESTABLISHED LOST AND FOUND DEPT.

Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Having established a date bureau for lost souls to find their true love or their plaything for the hour, The Varsity shows a lead.

I suggest The Varsity or the S.A.C. establish a bureau for lost things to find themselves, commonly called a lost and found office. Found articles would be given 1 insert in The Varsity free say and the losers would pay a dime as at the Date Bureau for redeeming a lost article. This, of course, is only nominal. This is just a suggestion but whether under this plan or under another, I feel one unified Lost and Found office should be established.

Under the present system, a loser may roam the campus offices for weeks without locating the cubby-hole where his precious pipe or notebook or fountain pen may be.

Yours truly,

The Varsity Fan.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

British policy toward Italy seemed last night to be stiffening. Unable to reach an agreement with Mussolini, the government shows signs of increasing its pressure in the drive for application of sanctions at an early date. The Mediterranean fleet is being reinforced, despite Italian proposals for its reduction, and will probably remain concentrated near the Suez until the Italo-Ethiopian dispute reaches some settlement.

A new development project was announced last night by T. S. Lyon, Hydro Commission Chairman. The plan, which demands twelve years for completion, involves diversion of the Ogoki River, and, if carried out, is expected to provide a large yearly revenue for the province.

Japan yesterday warned the League of Nations that attempts to restrict her trade in mandated areas would not be tolerated. Although Japan quit the League in March, 1935, she regards her trade rights in such regions as equal to those of any other power.

The Chaco peace conference, in yesterday's session, declared the war between Bolivia and Paraguay officially ended.

Latest reports from Haiti estimated the number of dead and missing at 2,000. The recent hurricane has done great damage to property; crops are ruined, whole towns submerged by floods; and food shortage is reported in some districts.

VICTORIA SANOWICH PARLIAMENT REQUIRES NEW INSPIRATION

The Victoria College Sandwich Parliament which sprang into being last year under the inspired leadership of George Pronst in order to provide "intellectual entertainment" for the students during noon hours will not be revived this year unless an equally public spirited and enterprising student can be found to restore it and keep it going, it was learned yesterday.

Last year Proust was forced to retire in the early part of spring owing to pressure of studies, and the one or two sporadic attempts to continue the debates after his departure met with failure owing to the general lack of interest shown by the men students who formed the club.

The club had the serious purpose of training the men to speak in the main Debating Parliament at Victoria, but this year the need for this preparation may be met by holding separate debates for men in another place.

Until a new organizing spirit makes its presence felt, however, the denizens of the Men's Lunch Room will continue to spend their noon hours with no greater mental stimulation than is afforded by the mastication of sandwiches and the hasty swallowing of soup.

S.P.S. SOPH-FROSH SHOWS LOCAL TALENT

Time, effort, and expense are being lavished on preparations for the S.P.S. Soph-Fresh Dance in the Banquet Hall of the Royal York Hotel on Friday, November 1, according to first year president, "Red" Redman.

Nels Kelly of School and the Silver Slipper promises to supply an entirely new program of fox-trots, waltzes, and college songs calculated to prove the superiority of home talent. In this affair Sophomores are the guests of the freshman class.

Hart House Debate

Student debaters will gather in Hart House next Wednesday for the first Hart House debate of the year. The motion will read "This house opposes Canada's participation in sanctions against Italy".

The debates committee particularly emphasized the fact that this was to be fundamentally an undergraduate debate and all students were invited to attend. It will start at eight o'clock.

Jack Graham and Ross Munro will uphold the affirmative and George Ignatieff and Jack Mirsky will oppose the motion.

TEACH RECOGNITION OF PROPAGANDA

Judgment in Individuals Is Aim of Education Dean Claims

NO PROPAGANDA IN CANADA

Professor Miller, backed by the Progressive Education Association in the United States, is inaugurating a plan whereby all the people attending secondary schools and colleges may learn to recognize propaganda. In the event of another war these people would be able to determine the difference between facts and propaganda.

Questioned upon the advisability of such a policy and whether any such plan was afoot in Canada, Dean Althouse said, "The aim of education in this country is to produce individuals capable of independent judgment. If this is not done, then education has failed. There is no definite plan here for any such course. We feel that our schools are remarkably free from propaganda considering such countries as France, Italy, Germany where the school is used to spread propaganda, not even national propaganda, but for a specific political organization. The trend in England and Scandinavia is rather towards the omission of any sort of propaganda in the schools. There is, you see, the danger of over-emphasis."

Questioned as to the probable effect of newspaper propaganda upon the decision of Canada in the event of a war the Dean replied that his opinion was purely personal, "But after all, we are British citizens."

Dr. Goldring, chief inspector of schools, was unwilling to issue any statement concerning this subject, but from student sources this opinion emerged: "Propaganda, after all, is facts, from somebody's angle, that would be just propaganda against propaganda."

DENTS' FIVE OPPOSES WINNING TRINITY TEAM

Short-Handed Lacrosse Squad
Rallies in Third
Session

The red and black lacrossers from Trinity inflicted a 10-2 trimming on the short-handed squad from Dentistry in an interfaculty meeting yesterday in the lower gym. Although they only had the regulation five out, the Dents fought furiously throughout the whole game. The Trinity squad was much heavier and forced the play continually. Trinity opened the play with a rush and quickly rammed in five goals without a retaliation from Dents. The game was fast and some clever lacrosse was displayed. Pretty combination plays kept the ball moving around at a dizzy pace. The end of the first two periods saw Trinity leading 7-0. Birchell, Botterell and Bell starred for Trinity while the two goal getters, Laukin and Brown, were outstanding for the Dents.

LIBRARY BOOKS SELDOM OVERDUE IN THE MORNING

Less Than One Per Cent of Over-Night Books Are

MORE LATE DURING EXAMS

Fines Prove to be the Best
Impositions Yet
Suggested

In an interview with The Varsity yesterday, Professor W. S. Wallace, librarian of the University, stated that less than one per cent of books due at 10 a.m. are returned after that time.

During the course of one day at the University library roughly 3000 books are handled, about 1500 going out and an equal number being returned. Of this number usually less than 15 volumes are returned late. More books are returned late during exam time than at any other time of the year, and some students have said that the extra use of the book was worth the price. Mr. Wallace stated that this is the wrong attitude to take as it may result in the unjust deprivation of other students.

Since the inception of the fine many suggestions have been made to avoid its imposition by other methods. A practical proposition has yet to be found. Students, according to Mr. Wallace, should consider themselves lucky, since at the time fines were introduced, people were even more hard up and money had a higher purchasing power.

HOUSE TO DEBATE ITALIAN SANCTIONS

The first Hart House debate, scheduled for Wednesday, October 30, at 8 p.m., opens the yearly series with the topic, "That this House opposes Canada's participation in sanctions against Italy". This will be moved by J. E. L. Graham and opposed by G. Ignatieff. The second speaker for the motion will be R. Munro, with J. Mirsky as fourth speaker. The Clerk will be A. D. B. Marshall with S. F. Rae as Speaker of the House.

The debate will be conducted along the lines of parliamentary debates, any members on the floor being permitted to speak after the four speakers have concluded their speeches.

"So what?" piped up yours truly.

"Well, I wonder what keeps the student body going?" continued his nibs significantly.

"Why the fruits of learning, of course," yours truly wise(?)-cracks.

"Oh yeah," snaps hawk-eye, quick as a flash. "Well just for that you lie yourself down to the Tuck Shop and find out what the boys have in the way of food."

All of which goes to prove that the best way for a cub reporter to stay out of trouble is to keep his mouth shut. However, it was too late to remedy the damage and so away went your reporter to find out about the food system at Hart House, and here is what he found.

If you wish to eat in state and comfort and be served by pretty waitresses, the place to go is the great hall. W. H. Rapson, demonstrator at the School of Science, sustained a broken back over the week-end while motoring in Michigan.

The injury, according to Dr. Boswell of the department of mining, is not high enough to involve paralysis.

BAROQUE ART SPOILED BY SPANISH TRENO SAYS MISS RUTH HOME

The Baroque period in Italian furniture was the subject of Miss Ruth Home's illustrated lecture on interior decorating at the Museum yesterday afternoon. This period, which began with the influence of Michael Angelo, and continued through the best period of the Renaissance, about the middle of the sixteenth century, was characterized by the introduction of the Spanish influence from the west. This Spanish influence, stated Miss Home, there came a definite cheapening of materials and workmanship, which in turn, causes a tendency towards bright (Continued on Page 4)

ONE COLLEGE GIRL IN SHOW

Is Keeping Ballet at its High Level in Her Fantasy

By Ross Munro

Sally Rand, the girl from Missouri who danced to fame behind ostrich feathers and a bubble, tapped her foot indignantly in her dressing room at the imperial yesterday, pointed an indicting finger at Norman Phillips, Varsity drama critic, and exclaimed, "Wigman is nuts—just like Gertrude Stein."

For one hour Phillips and the pioneer in fan dancing argued like professors of fine arts over the merits of the ballet, artistic expression and bubble dancing. I sat in a daze at this informal sort of Hart House debate and listened to the famous Sally, dressed in a gingham gown, indicate with Socratic-like arguments that the ballet was the finest form of the dance.

"Wigman, who expounds the modern dance, could not dance without the ballet," said Sally Rand. "Right now there is a great revival of the ballet in America. The Monte Carlo Ballet have had great success in their tour of America."

"Are you popularizing the ballet?" asked Phillips in the heat of their argument.

"Have you seen my show?" parried the red-headed Missourian. "I am keeping the ballet at its own high level in my dance. My dance is an artistic fantasy."

All the time the chorines could be heard running up and down the stairs and Sally's maid brushed the long yellow wig worn by the fan dancer from the Rainbow Room and the World's Fair when she performs her "fantasy" before the theatre audience.

Sally talked with facility about everything from the problems of the Dionne quintuplets to the merits of education. "Sure I like college students. They are the best people in the world and I like them to come and see my dance," commented Miss Rand. "I wish I had my degree myself."

"Don't you believe, Miss Rand, that if you had the artistic ability that you would be able to create a truer example of American art than that produced by artists who have not the American background?" queried the sober Phillips as he graciously lit Sally's cigarette.

"There are no international boundaries in the scope of artistic achievement," answered the fan dancer with an earnestness which was impressive. Whereupon she launched into a complete and unabridged history of the dance from the days of the primitive man down to the Earl Carroll and his Vanities.

COMING MASQUERADE TO BE GAYEST YET

There will be a "Sound of revelry by night" (the night of November 15) when the stately halls of Hart House will be ablaze with coloured lights and decorations, and the uproar of outrageously clad undergraduates will shatter the crepuscular quietude.

The greatest social function of the year promises to be greater than ever, and attendance records are expected to reach a new high. Better decorations, better music, better punch, and better not to forget to give the G.F. early notice.

Representative Government

Canada having recently passed through the throes of a general election and governmental upheaval, the question of representative government is, as expected, being bandied about. Those who have had the misfortune to be on the "wrong" side are taking refuge under the cloak of this age-old cry in the hope of discrediting to large extent the apparent victory of their more fortunate political opponents. Accordingly it is noteworthy that those newspapers which lean towards Conservatism are carrying figures of the total votes polled by the various parties and their respective representation in Parliament. Not to be outdone the supporters of the Liberal cause are carrying polling figures purporting to show that no Conservative elected in Toronto and suburban ridings was able to obtain a majority vote.

The argument for proportional representation does not hold water and may be dismissed summarily with the statement that the riding is the basis for parliamentary representation, not the country as a whole. The fact that the present government is a minority one, if we regard the popular vote as the criterion, is doubtless due to the large number of parties which have of late years obscured the political horizon, and we hazard the guess that had the recent election been a two-party one the present government would have been returned with a substantial majority of the popular vote. To our mind the real issue lies in the situation as presented by the rival newspapers, who point out that many seats are won as the result of split votes. There is no doubt much truth in this criticism and, in addition, we may note that there are numerous examples of people casting their votes for a second choice, because they feared that to vote for the party that really appealed to them was equivalent to losing their votes, owing to that party's political weakness.

Obviously, the present system lacks the facility of obtaining an entirely true statement of public opinion, which in these days of multi-partisan politics is so highly desirable. It is our opinion that the remedy for this situation may be found in a forced preference system wherein the voter must express his order of choice for every candidate. This system is based on the same principles as the single transferable vote system employed in the recent Alberta elections, and, we believe, possesses the additional charm of freedom from fallacy. Under it every elected candidate would be truly representative of the majority of voters in his riding and it is exceedingly unlikely that a government representing a minority of the general populace could be elected.

Fine Arts

When a student goes out into the world he is expected to have a general cultural background, quite aside from the mass of more specialized and lucrative knowledge which, in most cases, he sets out to attain. The inauguration this fall of a course in Fine Arts at this University fulfills a long felt need. The study of the fine arts is generally, if not reasonably, considered more purely cultural than most studies, but in any case it is only right that a University graduate should have some idea of the significance of such universally known names as those of Brunelleschi, Leonardo da Vinci and hosts of others who have studied in connection with the Fine Arts course.

Moreover, in a young country like Canada there is a more pressing need for instruction along these lines. We have in our Art Galleries and Museums a few original masterpieces of painting and sculpture, but our knowledge of the majority of the ancient works of art is gained through imperfect reproductions. Under these circumstances we are in danger of underestimating the worth of the older masterpieces and over-reverencing the modern American and Canadian works with which the galleries are filled. In any case it is practically impossible to have a true appreciation of works which we have never seen, and which, at best, have been explained to us casually.

In the realm of architecture our condition is even more deplorable as genuine specimens of the older types are non-existent here, and again we have to depend on pictures, which are always inadequate, and the pseudo-ancient architecture which has been so ridiculed. Even the few good modern examples of the older types of architecture have been adapted to modern standards of comfort and utility, and lack the atmosphere of the originals. We are all inclined to talk glibly about Gothic and Romanesque without really knowing what they are.

By means of numerous slides, lucid and full explanations, and suggestions regarding the best available reading materials, the Fine Arts course is a very valuable substitute for a first hand knowledge of the older artistic masterpieces. Where concrete examples are not available for study, as they are to every child in the older countries, this special instruction is badly needed for the double purpose of bringing to us an appreciation of the older works and adjusting our perspective regarding their worth as compared to that of the modern art which surrounds us.

A Trifle

The final examinations are, fortunately, a long, long way off. But the reprints of last year's examinations are now doubtless in the process of preparation and we make bold to suggest several improvements in their sale and distribution.

For twenty-five cents an Arts student may obtain from the Registrar in Simcoe Hall a thick clumsy book containing reprints of over one hundred and fifty examinations. Of these the average student can use at the very most—ten. The pages are neither indexed nor numbered and much time is lost in finding the desired reprints. In addition, the book simply refuses to stay open at the required place. For these reasons most of the few students who buy the reprints remove the staples holding the pages together, pick out their examinations, and throw away the rest—a dead loss.

The way is open for some enterprising organization to purchase the reprints loose from the Registrar and resell them singly to the students. The organization could ascertain the extent of the demand for each examination reprint and the Registrar would probably be very glad to sell them in loose form for, say, two hundred for twenty-five cents. If these were resold for as little as one cent per examination reprint a gross profit of seven hundred per cent would be realized. The students, moreover, would obtain their reprints at a lower cost and in a more convenient form.

Support Your Team

Football is now at the stage where its popularity is second to none in Canadian sports. This situation will continue to exist for some three or four weeks hence and then be relegated to the limbo of memories for another year. However, with the exodus of the gridiron warriors begins the entrance of hockey players, a game which is more Canadian than any other sport in the calendar.

The present conditions surrounding the hockey situation are such as to give new life to the hockey followers. The students have a new coach, they have several new players of quality, and the league in which they will be operating will not be a series of all-stars. The past has produced great teams which had large followings. Great hockey teams will again be produced at the University of Toronto, but a student body which will support their team is just as desirable as producing the team itself.

Cicero lamented the fact that things were not as they used to be. Cicero admitted he was several centuries removed from the individual who first levelled that charge at his fellow men. That charge was again levelled at the student body yesterday in Lou Marsh's column. Lou's accusation was not original and it evolves upon the student body to prove that it was inaccurate as well. Adequate support to the teams which wear the University of Toronto Blue and White is the best manner in which this can be proven. Will the students accept this responsibility?

Today's Cat should have been a feature, if we ran it as a feature you wouldn't believe it. You probably won't anyway, but s'help us, it's the truth. We didn't take much stock in the story about Mr. McSquirrel, myself, till we sent our demon interviewer Hal Taylor down to see him—and the guy sold Taylor some stock in his new city hall. But here's the interview:

C-C

Yesterday it was the privilege of The Varsity to interview a gentleman of Toronto who seems to be slightly screwy. His job in life is one which he took for himself and for which he receives no pay and no honour and no fun. He tears down the city hall every week and then builds it up again.

He is an old construction man who has lost his grip, due to getting hit like the guy in the Bible with a beam in his eye. So every day he patrols Queen Street and Bay Street, shouting orders to imaginary workmen up in the city hall. On learning that he was being interviewed (Continued on Page 4)

Let's Go Places

There is a world of difference between musical comedies in French and English. Caravan, the Hollywood's Saturday presentation, was filmed in both languages simultaneously but by a French director, starring Charles Boyer. The English version was only half rate in spite of the catchy little tunes and the informality of the choruses; the French with the odd extra scene that our censors stopped was typical farce and really delightful.

The plot is absolutely impossible, more so since Annabella is more intelligent than the calf-eyed Loretta Young. Briefly—a princess marries a gypsy for spite only to fall in love with the count whom she should have wed in the first (Continued on Page 4)

ART, MUSIC & DRAMA

Eaton Auditorium

The excellence of any choir depends largely upon three requirements—the manner of their fulfillment;—the quality of the individual voices, the ability of the director and the cohesion of the ensemble. The Moscow Cathedral Choir in their performance at the Eaton Auditorium on Monday afternoon not only fulfilled these basic requirements, but also brought to their program a vitality and an individuality difficult of achievement in the impersonal medium of choir music.

Ritualistic music of the old Russian Orthodox church occupied the first part of the program. By far the best performance was that of Mme. Pavlenko, contralto soloist. In the "Credo" her (Continued on Page 4)

Correspondence

The Editor, The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

The following incredible statement appears in your editorial column of Monday the twenty-eighth: "The greatest flaw in the student body as a whole is its immaturity." Could any remark be closer to complete meaninglessness without actually achieving that distinction? Indeed, has the writer any notion of what maturity implies, since he or she suggests that it is to be acquired by staying longer in the preparatory schools.

Students who come to college, even at sixteen, are not too young to grasp the responsibilities and opportunities that are presented to them. Rather they are too old to accept them seriously. A youth comes up from school, expecting great things of the university, hoping for profitable hours spent in intense argument with greater brains than his own, help and encouragement in his personal search for definitions, appreciation of his individual merits and potentialities. What does he find? That he must attend a certain number of lecture hours and answer examination questions in such a manner as to convince the examiner that he has read certain prescribed texts. Is this the "pursuit of knowledge" which your editorial proclaims?

And yet the writer wonders why students regard lectures and examinations as a burden! A student with any claim to maturity must see the ridiculousness of spending a year in studying a course which he can cover sufficiently thoroughly, between March and May, to get him first class honours. Don't send the boy back to school. (Continued on Page 4)

Last night St. Mike's defeated Vic seniors in the opening game of the basketball season. The game was fast and rather rough, and two of the St. Mike's players were put off after they had committed three fouls. The passing was not all it might have been, but it improved in the second half. The St. Mike's team is largely freshie, but the girls are combining well. Sunny McLaughlin and Gerry Ryan look like two coming players. Maisie Cowan played a nice game for Vic, and put in some very pretty shots after eluding her check. Jean Atkinson was doing the refereeing, and had to work hard and fast to call all the rough plays.

The Vic junior team was picked last night. Nineteen players have turned out for the practices, and Phyllis Hammill, the coach, is going to try and arrange it so that all the girls will have a chance to play sometime. Right now, Alice Bassnett, Gladys Kippen, Ruth McKay, Jean Francis and Marjorie Beaton are the guards, and Mildred Sedgwick, Kay Wallace, Elinor McIntosh, Muriel Beaton and Margaret Armstrong are the forwards. It looks like a fairly strong team, and Meds will have to give all they have in their opening game Wednesday night.

This may not seem the right time to talk about skiing, but we have been gathering information that we thought might interest some of you. For the first time in Canadian skiing history, the Toronto Ski Club opened the season with Dry Skiing Courses, which are being held in the Spadina Heights School, Forest Hill Village. These courses started on October 8th, and are conducted by a professional instructor, Mr. Hermann Bautzmann, who has been appointed by the Toronto Ski Club. The fee for these courses has been set at $4.50 per person for ten lessons, or 45¢ per lesson, and the courses are open to anyone who is interested in skiing. For further particulars, enquire at the club office in Room 53, at 8 Colborne Street. Incidentally if you wish to join the Toronto Ski Club this year, the fee will be $2.25 if paid before October 31, and $2.75 after that date. So if there is any Scotch blood in you, we imagine you'll sign up before this Thursday. For those of you who don't know, we add that the club trails are laid up at the Summit Golf Club, and there are beginners' trails for the very amateurish.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crocker

It appears that Varsity's new hockey coach, the well known "Ace" Bailey, means business this year. With the rugby season still in full swing the popular ex-Maple Leaf star has already issued a summons to all hockey talent on the campus. The new mentor is instituting a new idea in the form of preparatory P.T. drills and expects to have his charges out on ice by next Monday. As yet Varsity's position in the new O.H.A. grouping is uncertain. Officials of the Blue team have voiced a desire to have the O.H.A. place Varsity in their old grouping, that is to be placed in with Toronto, Hamilton, Oakville and Port Colborne. However, the Niagara Falls camp have given voice to the same desire. So it's up to the O.H.A. to make a final decision. Personally we feel that the Blues would do much better in the second group with Galt, Kitchener, Brantford and the second Hamilton squad and because of their possible good showing Varsity might arouse new hockey interest on the campus. The first grouping is a much stronger one and chances are the Blues would again wind up nowhere in it. However, in the second section Bailey's lads would probably be a strong contender. Increased gate receipts would be sure to follow along with a greater student following for the Blues. At present no one knows anything about whether the Blues will follow a single, double or triple schedule but these few items will be ironed out in the next few days.

Final decision was made yesterday in regards to filling the position of head basketball coach. Warren Stevens received the appointment and will again coach the senior squad after a year's absence. Steve will have many of last year's champions back in action and the Blues should again take all honours. One shouldn't expect a repetition of last year's near perfect record of only a single loss throughout the entire season as Coach Hayman's men were more than lucky on a few occasions. However, the Blue cagers should again be a very powerful group of basketballers.

With all this hockey and basketball talk we're beginning to feel the chill breath of Old Man Winter so we'll switch to rugby again just for comfort's sake. By the way, there is no truth in the rumour that Stevens has ordered a dozen suits of armour as Coach Teddy Reeve said that it shouldn't bother anyone much if his men get overly playful and take a few swings now and then. Teddy said that black eyes, bruises and other little souvenirs caused as a result of boyish exuberance and brotherly love during a rugby game were part of the fall pastime. The Blues have therefore given up their medieval notions and will oblige Ted's boys by sticking out their chins. Nothing like being hospitable to visiting squads, is there?

Just to give you an idea of how well the Varsity line played last Saturday—McGill didn't make a yard through the line of scrimmage in the second quarter. Add to this the fact that they lost four yards in that period and you'll begin to understand why those Blue end runs were so successful. The Varsity line was impregnable. In the third stanza McGill made two yards but also lost two. All of which points to something or other don't you think? Just as an afterthought it seems to us that Stevens isn't getting enough credit for his work this year. True enough, he obtained a set of miracle backs but to dig up almost a complete line out of practically nothing and weld the whole into the wonderful machine that it undoubtedly is shows genius.

It has been stated time and again that Hughie Marks is the best forward passer in the East. Of course we agree with the statement but at the same time we contend that the receiver makes the forward passer. A good pass may be thrown and muffed by the receiver and it goes down in the records as an uncompleted forward pass, another black spot against the passer. Hughie owes a great deal of his greatness to Joe Connelly. We saw Joe pull down a forward which very few would have snared. With two McGill men practically draped on his back and a third backing up to intercept Joe managed to jump up and grab the oval. The Montreal fans gave him a great cheer. Speaking of Montreal fans, it was no secret that the customers were pretty much disappointed in McGill. The crowd was the largest in three years and the majority were confident of a victory after their team's good showing here two Saturdays ago. The verdict left a sour taste in their mouths and it will not be much of a surprise to us if no more than fifteen hundred fans turn out for McGill's game against Western in Montreal next week. The last hope of the Montreal customers has been shattered and they've probably give up in disgust.

One intercollegiate title which is well on its way to Hart House is the soccer title. Due to their 8-0 win over R.M.C. in Kingston last Saturday the Blues took the lead in the race. McGill will be here next Saturday and all the Blues have to do to take the title is to hold the Redmen to a draw (which should be easy enough) and the title will be ours because Varsity scored more points against R.M.C. than did McGill. Incidentally Jimmie McPherson scored seven of the eight: Blue counters. Some good thinking.

Before signing off we'd like to say a few words about the U. of T. band and at the same time answer Mr. Lou Marsh's pessimistic column in yesterday's Star. The performance of the Blue band last Saturday was magnificent and brought applause from friend and foe alike. The Montreal sports scribers were high in their praise for our musicians. For Mr. Marsh's benefit may we state that the U. of T. band is the only college band that travels with its team. Had he seen the spontaneous parade some three hundred Varsity students staged through the heart of downtown Montreal after the game aided by the band and this year's good crop of cheerleaders his silly scolding would never have left his typewriter. Spirit around the U. of T. campus is just as splendid as elsewhere despite Lou's outburst. We'll put it up to the students to show Mr. Marsh a thing or two this Saturday.

6-7 p.m.—Meds at Vic jrs.

7-8 p.m.—U.C. jrs. at St. Hilda's srs.

All games will be played in the O.C.E. gym unless otherwise stated.

This schedule is final and a duplicate copy will be posted in Room 82, U.C.

All players, coaches, and managers please note.

CORRESPONDENCE

Give him a task which it is worth his while to tackle. Maturity comes only with real responsibilities. Give him a political identity. Let him play his part as a competent individual in formulating ideas within the university.

Your column goes on to say, forsooth, that the University is not the place to acquire social contacts. These can be acquired in the preparatory schools, along with "maturity". What can the writer be dreaming about, to ignore the fact that such men as the head of the philosophy department, our famous astrophysicist and some of our brilliant medicos and psychologists obviously cannot be met in the preparatory schools. Even the student contacts cannot possibly be as wide and varied, nor of as high a quality intellectually.

The editorial also points out that students who come to college, after working, get more from their academic careers than youngsters from high school, and assumes that it is because they have a longer experience of learning, even though it be a in a practical setting? You can go through college without learning anything, but you can't get on in business that way.

Finally, if The Varsity's editorial page cannot be devoted to some less puerile and fatuous problem, we suggest that the editor give up the "pursuit of knowledge" and go back to school for some "maturity" and "social contacts".

Signed.

Graduate.

terviewed by a University reporter Mr. McSquirrel became very confidential. Whispering behind his hand in a monotone he confided—

"If they give me a couple more men I can have it finished by noon."

But no one turned up to give him any more men, so he set about doing the best he could with the men at his disposal, and waved to the engineer to move the crane a little closer and for goodness sake to hurry. Then our friend McSquirrel walked carefully along the curb with his arms out in the manner of a ballet dancer or a tight-rope walker, and gave a very good imitation of a man forty stories in the air with nothing between him and the ground but a girder. Your Varsity reporter tied a rope around his waist and hung carefully to the sidewalk before asking his next question.

"Hey nuts, what other jobs have you been doing lately, before you started on the city hall?"

"Well," replied the ancient and hoary-headed lunatic, "there's the transcontinental canal from Halifax to Vancouver which is a very pretty sight especially by moonlight and the new tragic, intense voice intoned the creed against the solemn, chanting background of the choir. The emotion and dramatic power of this fine piece of religious music is in itself sufficient to demonstrate the superiority of Russian church music over that of any other country, excepting Germany.

The last part of the program was more characteristic of the life of the Russian people than of their religion, showing through their music the humorous and romantic side of their natures. In the "Wedding Song", the "Ukrainian Song", and the song "Down the Volga River", lightness and delicacy of interpretation counteracted the solemnity of the earlier part of the performance. The soloists, M. Zaporozets, basso, and Mme. Zakharoff, soprano, both possessing voices of fine quality, gave splendid individual performances.

The only weakness of the Choir lay in the fact that it was a choir, singing for two hours unaccompanied by organ or orchestra. Not even the best-planned program, the finest of music and the most expert singers could relieve such an afternoon from a slight tedium, a tinge of boredom. After all, a form so limited as that of choir music cannot possibly contain enough variety to hold the attention of the average concert-goer for a very long period of time.

The A.C. Diapers' Guild

Tomorrow the Guild will present Moliere's Love's Best Doctor. The cast of nine will include five newcomers to the Guild stage, Myrtle Hillier, Alison Grant, Douglas Hicks, Charlie Walker and Harry Tattersall. The play, which is the first costume piece seen for over a year, is directed by Gordon Robertson, who will also play a part.

The story concerns the illness of Lucinda which baffles four eminent physicians. Each doctor has a different cure and the scene in which they quarrel reveals Moliere's comic genius at its best. Finally Clotilde who is in love with Lucinda, working with her maid, deceives her father by a stratagem and wins Lucinda. This is the cure of her malady. The play abounds in good characterization and moves at a good clip.

Clotilde is played by Donald Stewart and Victor Lange performs as the fiddle-playing Natory.

A transitory nature was introduced into furniture also due to the Spanish attitude towards the native Italians. The stilted ceremoniousness of the Spanish court was introduced into Italy and this caused a distinct coarsening and degeneration of Italian stock.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 30th, 1935

No. 24

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Ottawa—The Canadian government under Premier King announces that immediate steps are being taken to boycott Italy economically, but as yet no military sanctions have been approved. This involves the prohibition of imports or exports of "key products useful for military operations", and the issuing of loans or credits to Italy.

Rome—Il Duce has instituted a grim regime of a six months diet, economizing on meat and on government supplies such as paper and furniture.

London—Great Britain has decided to withdraw a number of her warships from the Mediterranean on the agreement of France to render naval assistance in the event of an attack on the British fleet as a result of sanction moves.

Winnipeg—A cold wave swept the Canadian West bringing snow in some areas with temperatures ranging from about zero to far below it. On the Pacific Coast rail and highway communications were disrupted by a heavy sleet. Vancouver experienced the coldest October day since 1919.

Washington—President Roosevelt asserted the necessity and ability of the world to retain permanent peace in his proclamation of the observance of Armistice Day for November 11. It is thought that this is a repetition of his determination to keep the United States free from becoming enmeshed in foreign controversies.

Ottawa—Premier Mackenzie King stated last night that the announcement of the succession of the Hon. Vincent Massey to the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson's post as Canadian High Commissioner in London will be made in due course. He also made important announcements with regard to wheat trade agreements with the United States and Japan.

DEBATING SEASON OPENS TONIGHT

First Hart House Debate of Season About Sanctions Against Italy

NO GUEST SPEAKER

With the League of Nations and the present Italo-Ethiopian situation as the subject, the first Hart House debate of the year will be held tonight in the debates room of the House.

A most enthusiastic gathering is anticipated to hear student debaters discuss the motion "This House opposes Canada's participation in sanctions against Italy." With the Ethiopian crisis rating as most important news in our papers, students are showing a decided interest in the matters of peace and war and the future policy of Canada. It is expected that an unusually large number of undergraduates will speak from the floor at the debate tonight.

There will be no official guest speaker, the debates committee indicating it was essentially an undergraduate debate. Many prominent Toronto citizens will attend, however, and it is believed several professors will take sides in the debate, which will commence at eight o'clock.

Three students of fourth year political science and one student in fourth year law will speak on the paper.

Watson Defines Behaviourism Raps Practical Psychology

"Psychology Helpful in Rearing Children," Explains Psychologist

Watson Finds Little to Choose Between Mussolini and Insane

By Nora Loeb

All you would-be scientists who think you have any god-given intelligence, which you are destined to use for the benefit of mankind, had better give up the idea if you want to be good scientists. This piece of wisdom might not have come from the pen of a Varsity reporter, but it has at least the authoritative backing of J. B. Watson, the founder of Behaviourism, the most revolutionary scientific psychology of the twentieth century.

If you would ask, then, what is the incentive that makes people carry on research of no present practical value Mr. Watson would reply as he did to this Varsity reporter in a private interview within the sanctity of his room in the Royal York. "People just like to monkey around. They have an intellectual curiosity which they must use in order to be happy. The same reasons hold for them as it does for me playing

The records are all kept at the desk and the gramophone room is easily accessible. Students are requested to bring their registration cards. There is no charge for the use of the records. Students are invited to come on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

In the election of officers which concluded the meeting, Miss Doris Chisholm was elected president of the Association; Miss Phyllis Withrow, secretary, and Miss Margaret Aitken, treasurer; the first year representative was not yet elected.

The guests included Miss Coventry, head of the Physical Education Department of the University of Toronto, Miss J. Forster, instructor in physical education, also last year's graduates and the present students of the course.

MARXISM GROWING STATES NORMAN

Anglo-Saxons Beginning to Appreciate Marx Is Thought

MARX NOT THOUGHT DIVINE

Paving the way for active discussion by a short talk at the opening meeting of the Marxist Group in Wymilwood yesterday, Herb Norman stated that he thought the general crisis of capitalism—the establishment of Russian communism—and the spectre of a second world war, were all factors, compelling the Anglo-Saxon, hitherto loath to show anything but scorn for Marxism, to end their illusions and awake to its true value.

"We now see Anglo-Saxons paying lip-reverence to Marx—though even yet he is practically ignored here in America. The popular method for those schooled in Marxism to gain the ear of the public at present is to take up fascism. Marxism is not aimed toward the one goal, socialism, nor is it, as it has often been interpreted, a form of economical determinism. This declaration has been attacked by Lenin.

"Blind force plays no part whatever in Marxism, except when conditions, both objective and subjective, are ripe; then, of course, the blow must be struck for change and it might be struck wisely at the present moment, with war

DAWSON REVIEWS RUSSIAN JOURNEY

Finds Moscow the Centre of Soviet Union, with Much Construction Work

NO MORE BREAD LINES

Lecturing last evening in Eaton's College St. Auditorium on the subject of "Soviet Russia as it is today", Albert K. Dawson, explorer, educator, lecturer and traveller, supplemented his lecture with a series of lantern slides and moving pictures believed to be one of the finest pictorial efforts ever brought back to America from the Soviet.

Mr. Dawson expressed himself as not taking Soviet Russia too seriously since this had been done rather too much in the past, but described his lecture more as the rambling account of a rambling journalist.

With Moscow as his starting point, Mr. Dawson described this city as the political centre of the Soviet Union with its onion-shaped church towers, its Fords for the benefit of tourists and the Red Square as its focal point where the body of Lenin, preserved by a

U.C. TO DEBATE ON SOCIAL CREDIT

Prime Minister A. D. B. Marshall Defends Social Credit Against Acker

ASSURE HOT CONTROVERSY

The third session of the U.C. Parliamentary Club, to be held Thursday, promises to be packed with plenty of excitement and heated controversy.

The Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. A. D. B. Marshall, will lead a strong party in defence of Social Credit. Hon. Harold Acker, leader of the opposition, will head a no less formidable faction.

The resolution before the house is: "Resolved that this House approves of the principles of Social Credit."

Mr. Marshall, who hails from Alberta, was formerly a very strong Liberal, but is believed to have been converted to the cause of Social Credit, and is reputed to be the outstanding exponent of this movement in the parliament.

Harold Acker is known to have extreme "left-wing" tendencies and will undoubtedly be supported by a large group of adherents.

RUSSIA ACHIEVING PROSPERITY UNDER NEW REGIME, SAYS BARBER

Glee Club

The executive of Hart House Glee Club, at their meeting yesterday afternoon, decided that in view of the present large enrolment (sixty-seven) no new members will be accepted for this year except under very special circumstances. The last clause is intended to apply particularly to First Tenors, of whom about five are needed, and others who have so far been prevented from joining by the press of other activities. These are urged to communicate with the Secretary of the Club, Mr. F. Ongley (Midway 8411), or any member of the executive.

Regular weekly rehearsals will continue at 5 p.m. each Tuesday in the Music Room of Hart House.

EISENDRATH FINDS GERMANS IN TERROR

Anti-Semitism Seen in Berlin; Fascism Controls Italy; Jerusalem Peaceful

IL DUCE CONQUMENEO

At Deer Park United Church last evening, Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, well known Toronto orator, gave his impressions—gleaned from his recent European visit—of Rome, Berlin and Jerusalem.

"As far back as May, 1927, Mussolini was inflaming the Italian people with such exhortations as 'Three cheers for war! We must be ready at any moment to mobilize!' Such have been Italian sentiments all these years, while we of North America have been so taken up with our own problems that, until the present crisis, we failed to recognize the dangers emanating from such a dynamic leadership as that of Il Duce.

"Before the Italian populace is constantly displayed the aspirations of a would-be Caesar for the glory of a renewed Roman Empire. Italy must expand! Relentlessly and tyrannically Mussolini has bent the will of the Italians to his, forced them to share his opinions, his aspirations. He has hypnotized them with the power of his sword.

"The present crisis is due," Rabbi Eisendrath continued, "not to any injustices meted out at Versailles, but solely and entirely to the madmen at the helm. Fascism in Italy is

Librarian of Victoria College Finds Russians Cheerful and Enthusiastic

EDUCATION IMPROVED

Dr. Barber Deems the Soviet Under State Capitalism, not Communism

By Harold Freeman

"Present-day Russia has not a system of Communism, but rather one of State Capitalism," said Dr. F. L. Barber, Chief Librarian of Victoria College, who spent the summer touring in the land of the proletariat, when interviewed yesterday.

Dr. Barber gave two reasons for his estimation of the Russian system. In the first place, the wages paid the workmen vary according to the work done. Unskilled workers get 150 rubles a month; skilled workers get twice that amount; while certain professors get as high as 10,000 rubles a year. Such a system of wages is in direct antithesis to the Communist ideal of "from every man according to his ability, to every man according to his need."

In the second place, Dr. Barber pointed out that Russians were allowed to do as they wished with their money; spend it, save it, invest it in government bonds bearing 8 per cent, or put it in the bank. The only things they were not allowed to do were to invest their money in land, or in machinery for the exploitation of their fellow-workers.

Asked about educational facilities in Russia, Dr. Barber stated that the new regime was working wonders in that direction, with a yearly average of over 22,000,000 becoming literate, in contrast to the terrible illiteracy under the Czar. In this work, full use is made of radio, lecture platforms, the Red

A.A.M.D. DELEGATES INSPECT VARSITY

Impressed with Facilities Pres. Comments on System of Instruction

HART HOUSE PRAISED

With a record attendance, delegates convened in the theatre at Hart House Monday and Tuesday to attend the annual convention of the American Association of Medical Colleges. Of the 81 schools in the organization all were represented but four.

"Wonderful," was the comment of Mr. Ross V. Patterson of Philadelphia, president of the Association, when asked for his impression of Hart House. "It must have a tremendous influence of the student body." The "Union Houses" of the American colleges, he thought, could stand no comparison with it.

The Association is a mutual co-operative organization, embracing almost all the medical schools in the United States and two in Canada. Its function is to set standards of admission and requirements of training for the affiliated colleges.

Commenting on the system of instruction at the University of Toronto, Mr. Patterson pointed out that Toronto has followed the English method while the prototype of the American medical schools is the Scottish or the Edinburgh system which admits students to a four year course in medicine after graduation from a preparatory college course in arts and sciences. The delegates were favourably impressed with the local Faculty, its facilities and its equipment.

Hart House

It has been suggested that it might be of general interest to members if, as Warden, I wrote a short account of the administration of Hart House by its committees and of the system by which these committees are elected. Begun in 1911 Hart House was handed over fully equipped in 1919 to the University by the Trustees of the Massey Foundation. From the first the care of the building and the control of the life which it was hoped would develop within its walls were entrusted to a number of committees. At the present time the committees are as follows: House, Hall, Library, Music, Art, Camera, Squash Racquets, Debates, Graduate and Finance, all heading up either directly or indirectly in the Board of Stewards.

The House Committee are concerned with the general management and social activities of Hart House including the annual Masquerade. They are responsible to the Board for seeing that the structure itself and all equipment are maintained in good repair. The billiard room, barber shop and guest rooms are under their control. They deal with all matters which make for the comfort and convenience of members. They are also responsible for the management of the annual elections of Hart House committees in March.

The Hall Committee exercise a general supervision over the Great Hall, the kitchen department of Hart House and the Tuck Shop. Besides the daily meals served to members there are a large number of special functions and dinners in the Great Hall, all applications for such being considered by this committee. One of their main functions is to act as a link between the undergraduates and the Superintendent of the Great Hall.

The Library Committee control the library, being responsible for the purchase of all books which include biography, novels, history and general literature. Their object is to build up and maintain what is rapidly becoming a first-rate collection of books chosen for leisure reading. "Library Evenings" are held from time to time when a selected speaker chats on his own leisure reading and a discussion follows. This committee are also responsible for the selection of periodicals in the reading-room.

The Music Committee supervise all the musical activities of the House, the chief of which are the series of eight Sunday Evening Concerts, weekly Friday Afternoon Recitals and also a series of eight Songsters. The musicians of the city most generously make themselves responsible for these programmes as friends of Hart House. The Midday Sing Songs each Friday are also a popular feature. The Glee Club which has recently been formed is linked up with the Music Committee.

The Art Committee arrange fortnightly exhibitions in the art gallery and monthly exhibitions in the print room. They also organise the weekly art classes and informal discussions on art in the gallery. The recently established arts and crafts room comes under the supervision of this committee as does the purchase of prints and art books and in conjunction with an Advisory Committee of Artists the purchase of pictures for Hart House.

The Camera Committee are in general concerned with the encouragement of photography among members of Hart House. They control the use of the camera quarters, the valuable equipment in these quarters and the arrangement of exhibitions, the chief of which is the annual exhibition of photographs by members of Hart House in the art gallery during January.

The Squash Racquets Committee control the use of the squash courts, arrange individual and inter-faculty squash tournaments and also matches between other clubs and Hart House.

The Debates Committee are responsible for the holding of debates on certain Wednesday evenings during the winter. The committee have been responsible for building up the procedure of parliamentary debating and it is now a tradition that Cabinet Ministers and from time to time the Prime Minister of Canada are present as Hon. Visitors. These debates have done much to encourage an interest in public affairs among undergraduates. Not a few men who stood as candidates at the recent General Election won their first experience in speaking at Hart House debates.

The Graduate Committee are responsible for the social and athletic activities of the senior members of Hart House (both faculty and graduate), control the graduate dining-room and common-room, arrange monthly dinners and seek to provide in general for the comfort of senior members.

The Finance Committee are concerned with the monthly financial statements, each of which is put before its respective committee, and also make a monthly report to the Board of Stewards on the general finances of the House.

The Board of Stewards is the governing body of the House of which the Warden is ex-officio Chairman and on it sit undergraduate, graduate and faculty representatives. The senior membership consists of two representatives of the President of the University, one representative of the Board of Governors, the Secretary of the Faculty Union and the Financial Secretary of the Athletic Association. The Chairman of the Graduate Committee represents the interests of the graduate members. The undergraduates on the Board are the secretaries of the House, Hall, Library, Music, Art and Debates Committees as well as one representative each appointed by the Student Christian Movement, the Students' Administrative Council and the Athletic Directorate.

To the Warden is entrusted the general supervision of the whole House, though the athletic activities are under the direct control of the Athletic Directorate. The Warden is assisted by the Comptroller (Mr. J. R. Gilley), the Assistant Comptroller (Mr. W. R. Cowan), the Secretary (Mr. C. R. Delafield) and the Assistant Secretary (Mr. D. L. Emond), who are largely responsible for the administration of the House and who themselves sit on several of the committees.

To provide continuity on each of the committees, two members, if eligible, are elected by the outgoing committee to serve as members of that committee for the following year. The remaining members, usually eight in number, are elected annually in March by the undergraduate members of Hart House. Any member of the House is eligible to sit on a Hart House committee though procedure has been worked out to ensure adequate representation of all faculties and colleges on the various committees. It should be clearly understood that the minutes of all Hart House committees are available in the Warden's office and may there be seen by any members of Hart House who are interested.

The ideal which should inspire the committees and all members of Hart House cannot be more nobly expressed than in the Founders' Prayer of Hart House which is as follows: "That Hart House, under the guidance of its Warden, may serve, in the generations to come, the highest interests of this University by drawing into a common fellowship the members of the several colleges and faculties, and by gathering into a true society the teacher and the student, the graduate and the undergraduate; further, that the members of Hart House may discover within its walls the true education that is to be found in good fellowship, in friendly disputation and debate, in the conversation of wise and earnest men, in music, pictures and the play, in the casual book, in sports and games and the mastery of the body; and lastly, that just as in the days of war this House was devoted to the training in arms of the young soldier, so in the time of peace its halls may be dedicated to the task of arming youth with strength and suppleness of limb, with clarity of mind, and with a spirit of true religion and high endeavour."

J. B. BICKERSTETH.

If Professor Sisson reads his morning mail to his 9 o'clock classes, we see no reason why we shouldn't attend to our own correspondence in public. Anyway, one or two oddly interesting missives have come our way of late which we pass on herewith.

Dear Yorker:

I am all for taking advantage of the triumphs of modern science. But tell me frankly—did anybody ever get their hands dry with one of those electric towels they have in public washrooms? —Wetsmack.

We too, Wetsmack, are indeed a strong supporter of the achievements of science, but we are sore afraid that we are unable to justify the device which you mention. It is a bit of research to which we have devoted much time, and for a while last year we had hopes of establishing a definite case for the electric hand drying machine. We heard of a gentleman who entered a wash-room in a downtown Toronto store, turned on the hot water tap, thoroughly rinsed his hands in the basin, and then holding them over the adjacent electric towel for a brief moment, came away with his hands absolutely dry!

It was not until later that he learned the water had been turned off all day.

Dunlap Observatory, Oct. 29.

Dear Yorker;

Yesterday morning I made a horrible discovery up here at the new observatory. Nobody else was around and I've been too shocked to confide in any of the other astronomers, but I thought you might give me some explanation of the catastrophe. Listen Mr. Yorker, —the sunspots have all disappeared from the sun.

Chief Star Gazer, U. of T. All we can say, Gazer, is that we have been fearing such a development for the last few weeks. You understand that in this column we can't lay any definite charges, but confidentially, we suspect the Fleischmann interests.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Toronto Symphony

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra opened their season last night, with Dalcis Frantz assisting. This able young artist, acclaimed last year, received tremendous applause, well-earned, for his part in the Brahms Concerto. His rather offhand manner was transformed at the keyboard to a spontaneous, yet controlled vigour.

The program opened with the light-hearted Academic Festival Overture. Brahms, instructed to write something especially abstruse and impressive for this special occasion, shocked a few dignitaries by writing a fantasia on several college songs. The orchestra becomes as nearly hilarious as a symphony orchestra could be.

The Concerto in D Minor is quite different in character from the usual concerto, being not merely an excuse for a display of pianistic fireworks, but a truly important work. For this reason, possibly, the first two movements, complex in structure and restrained in mood, were a trifle disappointing to those expecting brilliance. However, the vivid last movement contained sufficient "brilliance" to satisfy anyone.

The concluding number, Brahms' Concerto in D Minor, was perhaps the outstanding work of the evening. This symphony is lighter, more lyrical than most of Brahms' work. In fact, those who measure the importance of music by the complexity of its structure find it too light. But those who judge music by the pleasure it brings them are delighted by the simple melodies of the first movement, the wistful melancholy of the second, and the charming grace of the minuet movement, and are pleasantly exhilarated by the stirring finale.

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Well, U.C. are going to have three basketball teams after all. Their college spirit came to the surface, and several of last year's senior team rallied round. Kay Brown, Pat Pethick and Billy McGarry will be playing. Jean Atkinson's sprained back may prevent her from doing anything more active than refereeing, but if she does play, she will be a tower of strength to the team. Marjorie Rean, who chaperoned and managed the intercollegiate tennis team, will be coaching them, and her basketball experience up at Western should bring good results.

There will be three basketball games tonight in O.C.E. gym. St. Hilda's seniors are playing U.C. juniors at six o'clock. St. Hilda's freshmen are playing U.C. seniors at seven, and Meds and Vic juniors will oppose each other at eight. The Saints picked their teams Monday night. Edie Ardagh, Isobel Wallbridge, and Marg Macdonald will compose the forward line, and Kay Grubbe, Mary Dignam, Helen Burnham and Jack Whiteside will be the defence. On the freshman team, Gladys Carveth and Ruth Middleboro will probably be the two chief threats.

There is still some confusion about whether the throw-in or the toss-up will be used in the interfaculty games. Last year the choice was made by the teams playing, but this year the general understanding was that the throw-in would be used throughout. However, Monday night in the game between Vic seniors and St. Mike's, half the game was played with the toss-up and half with the throw-in. The basketball executive will probably decide this problem, if they have not done so already.

Don't forget about the tap class at three o'clock this afternoon at the Lillian Massey. Miss Morster wants a good turnout, and as far as we can see, there is enough enthusiasm to make these classes a big success.

MEOS SCORE WIN OVER PHARMACY

Krakauer Stars for Winners in Game Marked by Meds' Team Play

Meds defeated Pharmacy in a scheduled volleyball game in the upper gym yesterday afternoon by the score of 15-5 in both games.

Pharmacy had a decided advantage since the medicals were forced to play without any substitutes but the latter displayed good team play and more than made up for the loss of men, as the score indicates. Krakauer starred for the winners while Langdon played well for the druggists.

Meds: Himmel, Krakauer, Berenbaum, Wise, Zarsky, Bowman.

Pharmacy: Grainger, Langdon, Potocky, Randall, Sabsy, Renwick, Weinberg, Lozans, Taylor, Richardson.

WIN OVER SCHOOL GIVES SENIOR MEDS GROUP LEADERSHIP

Game Close Throughout As Lone Point Decides Winner

1-0 FINAL SCORE

Heavy Going Hinders Game Played in Drizzle; Ends in Darkness

Playing a regular Mulock Cup game on the back campus last night Senior Meds blanked Senior S.P.S. 1-0 under unfavourable weather conditions. The win enabled the budding doctors to take undisputed possession of first place in their group.

The first quarter saw the quickly be-gimmed gridmen fail to dent the scoring column. In the second quarter the Schoolmen's hopes brightened when the medicals were successively penalized for a total of 35 yards. This put the Engineers on Meds' 30 yard line and they kicked for what looked like a sure point. However, no yards were given to the receiver and Meds kicked on the first down to relieve the pressure. The half ended as School completed a forward, Gartshore to Jacobs, 25 yards short of Meds' line.

The medicals took the offensive in the third quarter when they blocked an attempted return of the kick off and gained possession on School's two yard line. School's determined line thwarted the medicals' efforts on the first two downs and on the third down Slemmon of Meds fumbled and then tried to dribble the ball over the line. Meds were penalized for this and kicked short on the next down. The engineers tried a bucking attack but failed to make yards and lost possession on their 20 yard line as the quarter ended.

Meds grasped this opportunity to kick on the first down to score the winning point. From that time till the end of the game they held off a belated rally by the engineers.

Slemmon, King and Holt kept the Meds to the fore, while Gartshore, McArthur and Jacobs played well for the School.

Sr. Meds: Wanless, Hawse, Greenwood, Latimer, McNichol, King, Slemmon, Neilson, Snelling, Green, Rice, Mustard; sub, Caldwell.

Sr. School: Ballantyne, Gartshore, King, McArthur, Walker, Jacobs, Holt, Clark, Wilson, Wood, Lilley, Pheasant, Cavanaugh; subs, Thompson, Gooch, Press, Schmidt, Sherwood.

Meds Blank Trinity Without Trouble

On a hazardous field made slippery by a drizzling rain which continued during the whole game, Meds' interfaculty soccer team defeated Trinity by 1-0.

Such was the condition of the front campus that in the first part no marked lead was taken by either team. As the game continued, however, Meds showed a slight advantage resulting in Lore, of Meds, scoring the one and only goal of the game against the Trinity squad.

In the second half little doubt could be held as to the final outcome of the game. Meds led the play all through with the exception of one or two spirited attacks made by Trinity. The forward line persistently advanced on the Trinity goal and were supported by their back line who kept hammering the ball to them from behind.

Meds: Seymour, Black, Lore, Snel, Sinclair, Singer, Epping, Townsend, Cathie, Robinson, Joseph, Roger.

Trinity: Scoggie, Summerville, Carter, Powell, Hewson, Clark, Coughlan, Spence, McAdam, McLelland, Gardner, Kingston, Campbell.

Referee: H. Self.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George Vair

Despite adverse weather conditions the Blues went through a light practice drill last night and plenty of stress was laid on end runs and forward passes which should augur well for a wide open game this Saturday. The league leaders are hoping for a fast, dry field in order to open up the play against the rugged Reevites who favour a defensive wait-for-the-breaks game. With Al Williams back at snap the Blues will be at full strength along the line and should give Varsity's fast backfield sufficient protection. Bob Isbister is still nursing a sore knee and it is doubtful if he will see action. However, with Cam Gray going great guns in the big fellow's place there seems little to worry about.

Jack Dawson is taking no chances on a slip-up at Western Saturday and chased his seconds through a fast drill at the Stadium yesterday. McMaster, tied for the leadership with Varsity, journey to Guelph where it is rumoured that the Aggies have improved since the season started so the farmers can be expected to give them a good fight. Another loss for the agriculturists means curtains for the season. "Whitey" Miller, who handled the quarterback duties in such a capable fashion last Saturday is on the injured list and Tafts is expected to fill the breach in London.

Students at the University will get their first opportunity to learn jui-jitsu this week. Four men, proficient at the Japanese art, have generously offered their services and will give regular classes in the wrestling room, Hart House, on Saturday at 11 a.m. and Tuesday at 3 p.m. Yesterday we dropped in to take a look at the game which is almost a national sport in Japan, being taught instead of physical training in elementary schools. Kurose, a Trinity man, showed us just how it is done by tossing Shimizu, his opponent, around the mat for about five minutes. In order to register a win, you have to throw your man cleanly, hold him prostrate on the mat for 30 seconds or choke him till he says "Uncle". Later we learned that there were about 15 ways of throwing a man so anyone who cares to learn the art of self-defense should drop around and take a few lessons.

Today we heard many arguments besides getting in a few regarding the fact "has the students' spirit died a natural death or aren't they interested enough to get behind a winning team". All this rises from the fact that a well known and widely read sports editor had the temerity to insinuate that Varsity fans in general were dead from the feet up and didn't know it. We are not taking sides (although we have a few ideas on the subject) but the best way to dispel such ideas is to get out and back the cheer leading trio of McLaren, Mondo and Blum on Saturday. You might have some spirit but you would never know it to see some of the Varsity fans sit glum and glassy-eyed on a 2 x 8 plank all afternoon. How about a parade after the Tricolour's fall on Saturday?

RUSSIA PROSPEROUS UNDER NEW REGIME

Army, books and periodicals as educational devices. Many new schools and universities are being opened, and in all of them, the practical, rather than the humanistic side of learning is being stressed, so that each person is becoming a specialist in his own line. Supervision of the education of the children is taken over at a very early age, and their play and study periods are rigidly supervised from the kindergarten up.

Dr. Barber had several answers to the accusation, so often levelled at Russia, that tourists there are allowed to see only what the authorities wish them to see. In the first place, he said, such a thing is common in every country; right here in Toronto, we would show a visitor the nice sections of the city rather than the slums. Besides this, however, was the fact that such great things as the Metropolitan Railway, the finest underground in the world, the many new libraries, and schools and hotels, were obviously for more purpose than merely to impress tourists. Lastly, he mentioned the fact that there seemed absolutely no restrictions upon the places he should visit. An itinerary was furnished him, but he had no difficulty in getting permission to include places in his tour not mentioned in the official guide. Asked if it were not true that the movements of tourists were, pretty closely watched, he branded the assertion as "rubbish".

"What about religion?" came the next question. Dr. Barber replied that undoubtedly the people were decidedly anti-religious; so much so that they boasted of the fact rather than made any attempts to hide it. He pointed out, however, that this strong feeling against religion was caused largely by the type of religion under which the country had suffered in former days; a religion which ground the people down with taxes and persecutions which would put the old Inquisition to shame.

In conclusion, Dr. Barber mentioned that throughout his entire trip he was impressed with the signs of prosperity all over the country, and, above all, with the enthusiasm and cheerfulness of the people.

EISENDRATH SPEAKS ON EUROPE

confined not to an individual or group of individuals; it is a philosophy of life which harks back to the militarism and martial law of ancient Rome. It must be combatted, not with war, but with another philosophy."

In Berlin, Rabbi Eisendrath discovered the same terror reigning among the general populace as had accompanied the inauguration of the Nazi regime. He saw only furtive glances and bolted doors; whispering was the only safe mode of speech. For two years this abject terror has reigned, growing more intense with the passage of time.

"In 1933 the Nazis instituted a vigorous boycott against all Jewish enterprises, forbidding any trade with Jewish merchants. But, finding this negative movement of starvation too slow, the impatient Nazis have now decided not only to refuse to buy from, but also to sell to, the harassed Jews. Their native villages are driving them forth to the cities where the police force unite in expelling them.

"Thus, they wander about the country—homeless individuals searching the

RAIN CAUSES FUMBLES

Mallory of U.C. Outkicks Rivals but Victoria Better on Scrimmage Line

Victoria defeated U.C. by 6-0 in a Mulock Cup game played on the Vic campus yesterday afternoon. The win gave Vic a tie for first place in their group with U.C., while O.A.C. is in third place just one point behind.

The game was played in the midst of a heavy rain and both teams made many fumbles. Mallory for U.C. had a big edge in the kicking over Willis and Colmer of Vic, but the latter team more than made up for this in plays from scrimmage.

There was no score until the last half minute of the first half, when Vic plucked the ball to the U.C. thirty yard line and Willis kicked to the deadline for one point. Then midway through the third quarter, Pratt got Cooper loose on an end run, and the broad jump champ, showing a nice shift in the open field, raced 45 yards for a touchdown. The convert failed but Vic easily held their six point lead until full time.

The stars for Vic in addition to Cooper and Pratt, were Vaughan and Holman, who did some fine open field tacking. Hodgetts, Colmer and Eiseley also played well. Mallory, Sharpe, Heywood and Taylor were best for U.C.

U.C.: Sharpe, Heywood, Mallory, McClatchie, Selfe, Shiner, Waddell, Thompson, Taylor, Jeanneret, Campbell, Kettlewell; Glenn, Donaldson, Cox, Lazar, Bett.

Victoria: Gregory, Hodgetts, Pratt, Cooper, Willis, Eiseley, Stewart, Rodway, McIntyre, Gillespie, Vaughan, Holman; Le Grice, Gardiner, Colmer, Gough, Wilson, Oliver, Morrow, Caslerley.

WYCLIFFE ROUTED BY EMMANUEL

Losers Give Drab Display and Go Down to Dismal Defeat

The interfaculty volleyball schedule got under way today at Hart House. Emmanuel defeated Wycliffe in two straight games, 15-2, 15-4. Wycliffe showed a lack of co-operation and did not give Emmanuel much opposition.

necessities of life. Stark, naked fear reigns about the country; the Jews walk on the streets only in dire necessity. And now, not content with attacking Judea, the Nazis are torturing their only other opponent, Christianity, and behind it, another Jew, Jesus of Nazareth.

Heartsick with the conditions found in Rome and Berlin, Rabbi Eisendrath wandered eastward seeking an answer to this oppression and he found it in Jerusalem—not at the shrines of the past, such as Samaria and the Jordan, but in the minds of the modern youth of Judea. Here, without the dictatorship of a Stalin, each can live for all and all for each. The words "mine" and "yours" have entirely disappeared from their vocabulary and "ours" has taken their places. Here, justice, brotherhood, righteousness and peace reign supreme. From the martial law of Rome and the racial madness of Berlin, we turn with relief to the sweet strains of Jerusalem.

"There are only two powers in the world," Rabbi Eisendrath concluded, "the spirit and the sword, and in the end the sword must be conquered. May we go on to build together a new Jerusalem of common creeds."

secret embalming process, is buried. A great fever of construction is taking place in this city; the women figure largely in this activity and are responsible for fully half of this construction, being employed as engineers, concrete-mixers and diggers.

Due to two consecutive bumper crops there are no longer bread-lines in Moscow, but the city is now faced with another shortage, that of print paper and every morning queues form before the hotel to purchase what papers there are, later to be passed on and reread three or four times.

Because of a government edict the Russians are now greatly interested in sport of all kinds, and to encourage this activity there is a stadium in Moscow which seats 40,000 people.

From Moscow Mr. Dawson travelled down the wide, muddy winding river of the Volga with its congested traffic of oil-barges, steamboats, rafts, and house boats, but was rather disappointed to find that the present generation of boat men do not sing the Volga Boat Song.

He proceeded then across the Caucasus where one point at which the cliff overhangs the highway is called in Russian "O God help us!" and even the modern Communist is allowed to bless himself. With this region is connected the charming Prometheus and the Golden Fleece. Tiflis, the capital of Georgia, resembles Hollywood in its newer aspects and Bagdad and the Arabian Nights in its older quarters. Maschet, in the neighbourhood of Tiflis is said to be the spot where the grandsons of Noah settled "when the mud dried out".

The trip continued southward to Armenia, nominally independent but a member of the Soviet Union. The peasants, a thrifty hardy race excel in the growing of grapes from which much fine wine is made. At Mount Ararat, an extinct volcano, a view may be had of Armenia, Turkey and Persia simultaneously.

Proceeding then to the Crimea, famous for the charge of the Five Hundred, Mr. Dawson described the shore, abounding in orchards and vineyards and the harvests of this district celebrated with ritual dances. Many palaces have been built here by the old Russian tsars and which the new regime have converted into museums and rest-homes for farmers and miners. The city of Neipess, which has been built entirely within the last ten years, houses 100,000 people and uses one central steam heating plant for the whole city. Approximately 80 per cent of the acreage of this city is devoted to parks and gardens.

With a short description of the collective farm system which has the advantages of security, opportunity for advancement and education of his children, for the peasant, Mr. Dawson considered lastly the city of Kiev, a typically Russian city with its 8th century church, the twelve gold-plated doors of which scintillated brightly in the morning sun.

Our Cub Reporter Digs Up Dirt Finds a Chest Without a Shirt

By James Evans

(One of The Varsity's roving cub reporters, who has been on the job for some time, was so fascinated by the spectacle of justice being laddled out with unerring accuracy in all directions that he was moved to describe it in terms too glowing for our news columns. Rather than deprive our readers of sharing his inspiring experience we present it here.)

When Greta Glumbersson, 19, pleaded not guilty to a charge of stealing her grandmother's winter underwear, Mrs. Swanstrom Svenson, 109, complainant, rose and cried, "You fib, you little rascal, you stole it right off my chest!"

Calling for order, Magistrate Shamus O'Horrer exclaimed, "It is a crying shame that this dear old lady's age-worn chest should thus be exposed to the chill October blast!"

"The chest in question," protested Defence Counsel Timothy Jorkens, "has drawers!" Before he could explain further the cad broke in, "Indeed! I should have thought it would have a shirt."

"It is a chest of drawers," proceeded Mr. Jorkens, "on which the complainant was in the habit of leaving—" Here he was interrupted again, as Mr. O'Horrer said, "What habit did you say the complainant was in?"

"Just an old-fashioned nightgown, God bless her!" remarked the accused girl, who was promptly silenced, and the defence went on to explain that Mrs. Svenson had been accustomed to leave her foundation garments on top of a bureau in her room. Miss Glumbersson, called to witness, declared, "Foundation garments is right! they'd make a swell cornerstone for a lighthouse! I got sick and tired of seeing those old 18-pound two-piece family drawers!"

To those who object to progressive experiments, we usually tell of the oyster. For millions of years he has done the same old thing in the same old way. He's still an oyster.

BEHAVIOURISM DEFINED BY PSYCHOLOGIST

girl or having an affair with a sales girl."

For those poor people like the Varsity reporter who are intent on becoming practical psychologists the future is even bleaker than that of the rest of the scientists who at least have the hope that the world will be better through their endeavours. We left Mr. Watson with the assurance that the study of psychology would only be of practical value in bringing up a family.

"Is the growing popularity of psychology, due to increased interest in bringing up children?" we then asked.

"No, not just that," was the reply. "Psychology coupled with psychoanalysis has broken down the barriers of sex and people like to be able to talk about that subject so they become interested in psychology."

For those non-scientific people who would like to be a second Napoleon, Hitler or Mussolini you had better be wary. Mr. Watson says it is just a matter of being Hitler, Mussolini, etc., or being in an insane asylum. You might be the one in the insane asylum, and even if you were not, the world would be better off if you were. This is again J. B. Watson's opinion, not The Varsity reporter's.

Perhaps you will want to know what this system of psychology called Behaviourism is, that Mr. Watson founded. So did we.

"Behaviourism is the objective study of behaviour," was Mr. Watson's reply to our question.

"That sounds very logical, but why are not all psychologists behaviourists?" we asked.

"People are afraid to be materialists, because they will be damned." Nearly all psychologists are religious because they have to have something to hang on to. They are afraid to say there is no such thing as spiritual essence, so they call the latter consciousness, Mr. Watson said.

"Just how would you evaluate behaviourism at the present time, since you have left the field of scientific psychology for the advertising world?" we enquired of one of the biggest men in the advertising world.

"Behaviourism is a failure, because it has raised a H— of a lot of controversy but little experiment," was the somewhat disillusioned reply. "People will have to come back to behaviourism or something similar. They have got to play with babies placed in an experimental setting in order to make any advance in the psychological field."

"Have you any message especially for students?" we concluded.

"I would like to see them grow up in the way of behaviourism but if their instructors won't let them I guess I cannot do anything about it," Mr. Watson said with a shrug of his shoulders.

MARXISM GROWING STATES NORMAN

conditions such as they are, and the failure of capitalism."

Norman stated the simple definition of Marxism as being the theory of the proletariat (that is, the man who has nothing to sell but labour power) in his struggle for freedom. The Marxists do not believe in Saint Marx as a divine god, but they consider that by understanding a thing, you can change it. "Their theory," he concluded, "is the crystallized experience of the working class."

It was decided that the future meetings of the group would include "Capitalism", "The Marxist Concept of Imperialism", "Fascism" and "A Second World War," the series to be concluded about the end of February.

Recordings For Students

nesdays and Fridays from 3.30 to 5.30 p.m.

A great many of the students at the Conservatory use the gramophone room. The records were formerly used only for lectures, for conservatory pupils, but Mr. Randolph Crowe, well known actor, donated about 200 records when he was a student at the University and Conservatory. This was with the understanding that the University students should have access to them. The great interest shown by the undergraduates in music, was a factor in his decision.

The list includes symphonic and orchestral works from Bach to Stravinsky, piano selections, operas of all the well known composers, and even those of Gilbert and Sullivan. All these recordings are by first-class orchestras and artists.

Miss Gibson, who issues the records at the desk, stated, "If the students who attend the various concerts would come in and see if the selections to be played are on our list, they could improve their knowledge and appreciation of good music. We are very glad to have the students make use of the gramophone room."

RESEARCH NECESSARY DECLARES ALLCUTT AT S.P.S. MEETING

After their usual jovial sing-song in Room C22 at 4 p.m. yesterday afternoon, the Engineers of S.P.S. settled back to hear Professor Allcutt give his very interesting address on Engineering Research and Progress.

Following an enumeration of the reasons for research, Professor Allcutt drew upon the works of Faraday, Kelvin, Parsons and Carnot for illustrations.

Some very interesting slides illustrating problems which have to be met, and some results which have been achieved, notably in the field of steam power and plant engineering were shown.

Questioned about the desirability of an engineering college taking part in research, Professor Allcutt replied to the delight of the crowded meeting, "A university which fails to take an active part in research soon ceases to become a university and, I might say, its members are dead from the neck up!"

EIGHT UNIVERSITIES EXCHANGE DEBATERS

Twenty-Two Such Tours Have Been Arranged by N.F.C.U.S.

TORONTO GOES WEST

Eight Canadian university debaters, in four teams, will engage in tours next month under the auspices of the National Federation of Canadian University Students.

Sidney Hernant, a graduate of the University of Toronto and Eli Kelloway of McGill, will visit Western Canada. John Bassett of Bishop's University and Gordon Smith of the University of Western Ontario will debate at the four Maritime Universities. John Gould of the University of British Columbia and Maurice Western of Saskatchewan will debate in Ontario and Quebec. Ernest Richardson of Dalhousie and W. B. Morrissey of New Brunswick will debate seven American universities, including Harvard, Bates College and New York University.

The organization of debating tours is one of the chief activities of the N.F.C.U.S., which is the official federation of the Student Unions of most of the Canadian universities. One of the purposes of the federation is to fight the provincial outlook in Canada, and its officers believe that the clash of debaters from different sections is a valuable weapon.

Since 1927 twenty-two tours have been arranged. These have included tours within Canada by British, American, Australian and New Zealand teams. In addition Canadian teams have visited Great Britain and the United States.

BOND OF UNION BECOMES CLOSER BETWEEN STUDENTS AND THEATRE

Representative of Undergrads

Syndics

PURELY UNOFFICIAL

C. R. Delafield's Help Assured of Welcome by
Chairman

At a meeting of the Board of Syndics of Hart House Theatre, held on Monday evening, October 28th, C. R. Delafield, secretary of Hart House, was asked to act as an unofficial representative from the student body to the Board of Syndics of the Theatre.

Recent student agitation, through The Varsity, and by other means, had impressed the members of the board with the fact that students were sufficiently interested in the Theatre to warrant this step. The idea of a student representative, even though unofficial, has been mooted on various occasions but this marks the actual accomplishment of a closer bond between the Theatre and the undergraduates.

The Varsity interviewed Eric Haldenby, chairman of the Board of Syndics, and obtained the following statement from him. "You must understand," he said, "that Hart House Theatre is not a student theatre. In reality it is the Little Theatre of Toronto. But we are very keen to have the students work with us and to become interested directly in the theatre. We organized the student night with this idea in view, and were very grateful for the interest shown. Possibly Mr. Delafield will be (Continued on Page 4)

COMPROMISE WRECKS CHRISTIAN IOEALS

In Practice Neither the Church nor Christians Stick by Their Faith

That the church, on practical issues, is confused, was the conclusion of Professor Line, speaking to the Student Peace Movement on the peace policies of the church Wednesday evening.

Christ was a pacifist, and among early Christians, pacifism was not the exception but the rule. The state was unfriendly and they expected a New Order to relieve them of their difficulties. It was easy to separate themselves from public enterprises and uphold their absolute of peace.

But the new order never came. The church had to adjust itself. Thence came a compromise that has lasted till today—a compromise that has been called the fall of Christianity.

The weakness of Christians today, continued Professor Line, is that they are too much like other people, and cannot shake off their age-long conventionalism. Like other people they believe in absolutes but their ideas are vague. One man may grasp the ideals of the church, but cannot carry the whole body with him—just as a socialist may be gripped with the ideals of socialism, but fail to move the workers he seeks to help.

DR. RYERSON ELECTED PRESIDENT OF A.A.M.C.

Dr. E. S. Ryerson of the University of Toronto was yesterday chosen president-elect of the Association of American Medical Colleges to become president next year. Dr. John Wyckoff of New York was elected to that office for the coming year.

The Association includes all the great medical schools of the continent and has just concluded its annual 3-day convention at Hart House. The meeting next year will be held in Atlanta, Georgia.

McDermot Supports Present-day League

Though Imperfect Today We Must Remember It Is Growing

THE ONLY PEACE POWER

"In thinking about the League, we must try as far as possible to look at it from the evolutionary point of view," said T. W. L. McDermot, principal of Upper Canada College, in his address on the League of Nations on Wednesday. "We must consider it as a growing thing, remembering what it was ten years ago before we criticize it as it is today. The League is not beyond criticism; it has its weaknesses, and we should bear them in mind; but it is unfair, while professing a love of peace, to condemn its actions and offer no alternative solution of the problems with which it is faced."

Mr. McDermot advanced three propositions concerning the League which he felt might be helpful in relating its activities to the present situation. First, "The League of Nations is the only organized force in the world that we have to resist war"; and, while it has failures on its record, as in the Manchurian situation and the case of disarmament, while it has been accused of (Continued on Page 4)

Queen Reads Christian Booklet

Under the auspices of the Toronto Intercollegiate Christian Union, Mr. C. Stacey Woods held his second discussion group in his series "Life or Mere Pretence" in the social science common room, Wednesday. He continued his theme "Life in Christ" on the topic "Assurance".

Mr. Woods cited an incident relating to Queen Mary. Recently at Ascot she was handed a pamphlet entitled "Safety, Certainty and Enjoyment" dealing with personal religion and salvation. She later wrote to the donor and told him that she had read this very booklet prior to her coronation and it had been a means of giving her renewed joy and confidence in Jesus Christ as her Saviour.

DRAMA EXPERIMENTS ATTEMPTED BY ALL CAMPUS SOCIETIES

Victoria College Dramatic Society to Present
Gorki Play

AMBITIOUS PROGRAMS

Afternoon Plays in Hart House Approved by Dramatic Heads

The dramatic societies on the campus have all mapped out for themselves a very ambitious program this year. The majority of the organizations are attempting more than has been done in the past with most of the innovations being along experimental lines. The various angles of these experiments should throw new light on the possibilities of college dramatics, as they will not only give more students an opportunity to act, but will test the reaction of the student body to an entirely new departure in the choice of plays for production.

Last year, Victoria College Dramatic Society produced a series of one-act plays in Hart House Tuesday afternoons from 5 to 6 o'clock. These plays were so well attended that the experiment will be continued this year. There will be three of these plays before Christmas, and four after, as well as the regular three-act play, which is slated for the beginning of December. The three-act play, Maxim Gorki's "The Lower Depths", is in itself an experiment, as it is a type of play which has never before been attempted by any of the college societies.

The University College Players' Guild has also been doing work along the same lines. Jack Graham, president of the organization, in speaking of its activities, said, "The function of the Players' Guild is to indulge in experimental drama." To further this aim, one-act plays will be produced every week during the fall and winter, in the Women's Union. These will all embody some new idea, thus helping to arouse interest, and give more people a chance to do their stuff. There will be no Hart House production this year, but in its place three plays will be given in the Women's Union in December, January and February.

The Trinity College Dramatic Society have also made a new departure this year. As well as the regular three-act play at Hart House, there will be six one-act plays. Students will be allowed to act in only one of the short (Continued on Page 4)

ST. MIKE'S DORMITORY NEARING COMPLETION UNDER NEW METHOD

The new St. Michael's College dormitory now under construction on the east side of Queen's Park will be completed shortly after the first of the year, a member of the architectural staff stated yesterday.

No unexpected difficulties are being encountered but the method of planning the building is somewhat different from that used in most similar undertakings. All plans, to the minutest details, are usually completed before the first shovel of earth is dug up. But in the case of the new dormitory the general scheme of the building, as the arrangement and number of dormitories was all worked out in the spring, but the plans for such items as colour and width of borders are being formulated during construction.

This system, occasioned by the necessity of starting and finishing construction as early as possible, has, however, given rise to no difficulties and the work in all departments is going along very smoothly.

"Noes" Win Hart House Debate
by Vote of 84-60 Under Ignatieff

NO FAIR TRIAL YET

Graham Emphasizes Need of Full Membership for League

By Douglas Findlay

The question "that this House opposes Canada's participation in sanctions against Italy" was defeated last night in the first Hart House debate of the year by 84 votes to 60.

Mr. J. E. L. Graham, U.C., moved the motion for the Ayes. He stated that Canada signed the Covenant of the League of Nations on the understanding that peaceful methods alone were to be used in enforcing the articles of the Covenant. Sanctions mean war, and if a war comes Canada will be involved because of her Imperial ties, he said. But he also said that collective sanctions could not be enforced by the League without the co-operation of the United States, Germany, and Japan. He added that sanctions were an entirely negative approach to the situation and that even if successful they would form no lasting basis for world peace.

"The speaker for the Ayes has assumed the failure of an institution before it has been given a fair trial," said Mr. G. Ignatieff, Trinity, in opposing the motion. "The League is (Continued on Page 4)

WYCLIFFE FOOTERS DEFEAT DRUGGISTS

Close Game Finally Ends
3-2 As Darkness Falls

THREE INJURIES

Yesterday afternoon's soccer game between Wycliffe and Pharmacy which took place on the front campus, resulted in a Wycliffe victory of 3-2, ending almost in darkness. The game was earnestly contested and resulted in three injuries, none of which were, fortunately, very serious. The first goal was scored by Toone, of Wycliffe, who received the ball from Wood on a quarter kick. Ramsey of Pharmacy tied the score in the first half of the game. It was not long before Toone scored for Wycliffe a second time. Fairweather also contributed a goal making a total of 3-1 in favour of Wycliffe. In their final rally Pharmacy assisted Garneau to score once, thus losing the game by a very narrow margin.

Wycliffe: Ruch, McKibbin, Simmonds, Markle, Blackaller, Abbott, Whennham, Rigby, Toone, Fairweather, Wood; subs, Symons, Simpson.

Pharmacy: Gilbert, Pronger, Jackson, Bain, Coulter, McIntyre, Cushing, Allen, Ramsey, Sully, Garneau; sub, Asselstein.

JUNIOR VIC WOMEN OWN MEDICALS BY 19-8 SCORE

Vic juniors met Meds last p.m. at 9 in the O.C.E. gym. The Vic team took a lead of 8-4 in the first quarter thanks to some quick play on their forward line. During the second quarter play centred around the Vic basket, but the Meds defence held their own and the half-time score was 12-5. The fastest play of the game took place in the third quarter, with Mikred Sedgewick and Muriel Beaton running hard and fast on the Vic forward line, but held (Continued on Page 4)

Interfaculty Race Swings Into Action

Course Record Set by Hogg Expected to be Broken in Competition

COURSE LONG AND HILLY

With the Senior Harrier Race scheduled for November 9th the interfaculty teams swing into action this Saturday at High Park, in what should be the greatest race in the history of the event. Never before has such a strong field of possible winners faced the starter, for no less than seven men have a real chance of winning. Competition is bound to be keen because only the first five men can make the senior team.

Wycliffe, holders of the Brotherton Trophy for the last two years, will again be well in the running with Kibblewhite, a former Olympic star, and Huether, who placed third in the intermediate harrier last year, as their best men. Trinity will be favoured by many to win since Burton of last year's senior team and Conway, who recently broke the interfaculty half-mile record, are both on the team.

Thompson, who has been on three senior harrier teams, will be running for Meds. Rankine, Forrest and Powell are representing U.C., Vic and O.C.E. respectively and should win some points for their colleges.

Bill Hogg of S.P.S., and last year's winner, set the course record at 28 mins. 25 secs. for the five miles, but since both the interfaculty and senior races will be held here this year there is a strong possibility that this time will be beaten in one or both races.

The course itself consists of four miles of paved road and one mile across country, with five hills along the way. (Continued on Page 4)

Spiritual Work Said Widespread

The widespread effects of missionary work and the reality of spiritual influence were discussed by Dr. J. R. P. Slater in the Music Room of Hart House yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Slater first realized the range of spiritual influence in France during the war. Here he met two Blacks in clerical robes who were trying to further the education of their troops during their idle moments. These two men, as Dr. Slater later ascertained, came from that section of Africa in which his own father had worked as a missionary for twelve years.

Dr. Slater's father in turn had been influenced by a relative who had chosen the Orkney Islands as his field and tried to spread there the religion and culture he had been taught in his Lancashire home. Today many of the outstanding professors at Edinburgh University come from the Orkneys; Dr. Slater's father is still revered in South Africa for his fine work; and Dr. Slater's work is the indirect result of the desire of a Lanarkshire minister to improve mentally and morally the inhabitants of the Orkney Islands.

Youth Congress

Probably most students have forgotten about the Canadian Youth Congress which flashed across the front pages for a few days last May and then apparently disappeared. It is interesting to note that, contrary to the fate of most youth organizations, it is still in existence.

The Congress was formed under pressure of a growing demand on the part of Ontario youth for some sort of organization through which they could express their common desires. There was an undercurrent of unrest at the terrible myddle that the world had gotten into; and, following the example of youth in England, Germany, and other European countries, a good number of the young people in Ontario decided to form an organization that would link their individual clubs and represent their general interest. There seemed to be a tacit conspiracy on the part of the elder generation to keep youth from expressing itself, and the Congress was formed, so its proponents claim, partly as a protest against this state of affairs.

There was no unanimity of purpose. Every religious group, every shade of opinion, every stratum of society was represented at the meetings; and naturally enough there seemed at first no common aims. Gradually a programme was worked out and reduced to three essentials; the problems of war, employment, and education.

Research committees were set up on each of these divisions, and the reports handed in, at present form the basis for further investigation. Meetings are held regularly each Wednesday night and annual Congresses are contemplated. Approximately 160,000 young people in Toronto and district were represented at the last general meeting; and it is the aim of the body to extend its scope throughout the Dominion. It will be interesting to note its progress during the coming months and just what its position is, if it continues in existence, when next May comes around.

Student Socialism?

The editorial which appeared in a recent issue of The Mail and Empire on radicalism in colleges, ought not, we think, pass without comment. The editorial is based upon the remarks made by Sir Edward Beatty, chancellor of McGill University, on the occasion of his receiving an honorary degree from the University of Western Ontario.

Sir Edward is quoted as pointing out that the younger men in our universities are ill-equipped with accurate scientific information and their preachings are doing a great deal of harm amongst the generation of undergraduates. It is hard for us to believe that even the junior members of the faculty, who must have had at least four to six years of university training, "lack an adequate background of knowledge in attacking existing economic institutions". Moreover we think that they are not "too frequently moved by an emotional desire for the correction of admitted defects in our society which outruns the slower but safer process of logical reasoning." They must of necessity have applied logical reasoning to discover the defects in society.

There is no doubt that Sir Edward was thinking primarily of the difficulties he has encountered in his own university when he declared that academic thought in Canadian universities is "deeply coloured" by socialist ideas. Personally we have not witnessed any harm done in the University of Toronto by these so-called radical professors. We have always found the younger professors wholly impartial to politics in their lectures and it is only rarely that one expresses sympathy with any party.

It is quite true as the chancellor of McGill pointed out that "only thirdly is the university a training school for young men and women". Propaganda has no place in a university. Yet on the other hand it is impossible for a man to study economic problems without attaining some definite political opinions of his own. To keep his lectures entirely devoid of these opinions would be to render them colourless and uninteresting. On the whole our professors make a distinct success of steering a middle course.

The editorial in the Mail comments on the fact that many C.C.F. candidates in the recent election were Rhodes scholars. This is true but it is a fact of which they have every right to boast. It reveals that their sojourn in England was not barren of thought. It is only because Canada is thirty-five years backward politically that we have men disclaiming the theories that have long been prevalent among many intellectuals in England. Rhodes scholars do not link up with the C.C.F. because "they have apparently absorbed more knowledge than they have been able to digest and assimilate" but their so-called "economic dyspepsia" is due to association with men foremost in political thought of the time.

We refrain from commenting on this editor's biased attack on the leaders of the C.C.F. and their former religious connections but we think our professors would smile to think that their teachings, even if they were radical would carry so much weight with student opinion that "they tend in the end towards revolution and the over-turning of the established order of government." That seems to stretch the argument to the point of amusement. Educated critics of our existing economic and political institutions are not destructive as this writer would imply but by reason of their education they are the logical people to consult in the construction of oever institutions to fit modern times.

A Revived Chapel

At the far end of the East corridor on the ground floor of Hart House is a little red door. We read in these columns and in many others about the Great Hall, about Hart House Theatre and about the Athletic wing of the building; but it is seldom that we hear of the chapel that is behind this little red door.

The only services held in Hart House chapel are those of Holy Communion on the first Sundays of the months. At all other times this tiny retreat is used only for the meditation and prayer of the occasional passer-by. That is all it is,—just a tiny room filled with chairs, an altar, stained glass windows and bare walls.

During the war thousands of people found time to pause at midday to offer a prayer for the men overseas in Hart House Chapel. But now hundreds pass that same door—be it from shyness or indifference.

Recently, a small revival of interest has taken place in the chapel. Some students, a small group of atheists or agnostics, perhaps, have revived the custom of entering the room with the red door at odd hours during the day—for a moment of quiet, away from the hustle and bustle of Canadian life. Sometimes they pray—or perhaps "hope", would be the more appropriate word,—that others will follow their example. Will they?

Student Tickets

The criticism has sometimes been made that the city of Toronto does not appreciate the value of the student body of the University as a purchasing unit. But certainly the theatres and concert halls have been most considerate in granting reduced rates to students. The latest instance of this is the action of the Royal Alexandra Theatre in making the best seats in the house available at the lowest price to students who wish to see "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

This is the kind of thing we are all too prone to take for granted. The special privileges allowed to students in the matter of entertainment are just one more "blessing" to be derived from attendance at the University, and one of which we should all endeavour to take advantage.

SALHE SMITTEN? NO!!!

By Hoss Dunn

Accompanied by Norman Arches, The Varsity's Dramatic Critic, I staggered into the University Press at a late hour last night, fraught by brain-fag and eye-strain after a two hour struggle to escape a fate worse than death. For two frantic hours we were trapped by a Fautan Dancer in her dressing room at a local theatre; but as the atmosphere grew more heated with our pleas for liberty, she just sat there fanning herself. By that time you could have fanned me with a brick.

Salhe Patica, the girl from the Midway who minced her way to fame behind two ostrich feathers, one bubble, and a darn good press agent, tapped her foot indulgently in her dressing room at the Fumeral, ticked Norman underneath the Arches, and exclaimed, "Viggani was right,—you look like the fruit of the family tree!"

"I am keeping the ballet at its own high level," declared Salhe, going into her routine without benefit of clergy or prompting by her publicity man.

"It's a good job you're keeping something at a high level," Arches cracked back, and that's when the trouble started. Was Miss Patica furious, and did the feathers fly? Honest, folks, I'll never be able to look a fan in the face again.

So we staggered back here to the Press to report that Salhe Patica is a nice girl, and don't you ever think she's fallen from grace. But has The Varsity's A. M. & D. critic got a bad case of fallen Arches!

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

The A.C. Players' Guild

"L'Amour Medicin" by Moliere was produced yesterday afternoon at the U.C. Players' Guild in an eighteenth century translation directed by Gordon Robertson. It was one of the most successful efforts at the Guild this year. Sganaril, a rich merchant (Gordon Robertson) is much opposed to his daughter Lucinda (Myrtle Hillyer) marrying the gay young blade Clitander (Donald Stewart). Through the willingness of her maid, played by Alison Grant, the maiden is safely betrothed to him, since her father is persuaded that he is signing a bogus contract. The players succeeded well throughout in catching the spirit of Moliere's comedy.

Gordon Robertson took advantage of the many opportunities for comedy in the part of the well-meaning if somewhat dull father. The various expressions of his face elicited much merriment from the audience.

Probably the best scene was the consultation of the four doctors about Lucinda's supposed illness. The doctors Charlie Walker, Harry Tattersall, Tom Dale and Douglas Hicks, were very cold-blooded and very funny. In black gowns and high hats, their learned discussion of the respective doctrines of Hipparchus and Aristanes made an excellent scene.

Fortunately their theories were not practised on the heroine, and the play ended satisfactorily as Donald Stewart carried her off the stage in his arms in the approved manner.

Everyman is a difficult play to produce. If the play is humanized and naturalized to any great extent, the effect of the allegory is lost. If, on the other hand, the characters stand around the stage statue fashion sentimentally mouthing their dimly-understood lines, the audience rightly yawns and eventually snores. The best thing about Brownlow Card's production of Everyman was the total absence of smugness. He preserved the precarious balance between the natural and the supernatural without which the play either wants meaning or wallows in spirituality.

There are many versions of this medieval interlude and that used by the League is a queer hotch-potch of several editions. It is far too long and disjointed, particularly in the middle scenes, when the action for a time became very complex indeed.

Norman Green in the title role did a good interpretation of the rich loose-living merchant who when Death approaches, achieves salvation by Faith and Good Deeds. His gestures were never superfluous and his voice well modulated and quietly expressive. Dora Macmillan as Everyman's Mother made a beautiful performance. She has done the part several times and showed at every instant the results of careful discipline and practice. Contrary to the original custom, God was not visible and the sonorous voice of Bruce Honeyford interpreted the part from behind the scenes. Greater familiarity with the lines would have been desirable. G.H.R.

No upsets occurred in last night's basketball games. St. Hilda's seniors defeated U.C. juniors in the opening game, and nearly scored a shutout. The U.C. juniors have good material, but their shots were way off, and they couldn't get past the Saints' strong defense of Kay Grubbe, Helen Burnham and Jack Whiteside. The Saints are fortunate in that nearly all of their team are tall. The U.C. seniors made up for the juniors' defeat by taking the St. Hilda's freshmen into camp 35-12. Kay Brown, the U.C. crack forward, didn't have much luck with her shots in the first half, but settled down later. Vic juniors defeated the Meds team in the third game of the evening by a score of 19-8. Vic juniors are credited by some to be stronger than their seniors, but only time will decide that. Meds seem to prefer to shoot from centre floor, and then rush in on the rebound, and we hear that they intend to adopt this style of play when they meet the St. Hilda's seniors.

Last year at a meeting of the Inter-collegiate Basketball League, it was decided that the throw-in would be used exclusively in the intercollegiate games. The rulings of this league are superior to those of the individual universities, and so it has been decided that the throw-in will be used in all the interfaculty games, and the toss-up will not be allowed. In order to aid the referees, all managers are asked to bring a throw-in indicator to the games. A throw-in indicator means some kind of a small flag, to say it in simple English, and Miss Parkes will give the managers further advice on the subject, if they wish to hear.

Vic played off their baseball final last night, and the third year won a close victory from the freshmen, the score being 9-8. The freshmen did pretty well. They were on the short end of an 8-5 score at half-time, but managed to hold the juniors for the rest of the game. Our congratulations to the winners.

AERIAL WORK FAILS

Dents continued on their way in quest of the Mulock Cup by defeating St. Mike's 20 to 0 on the back campus yesterday afternoon. The ball was in St. Mike's territory for most of the game and the last year's champs were much the better team in every department.

Karl Mueller fell on a loose ball just two yards out from the frish goal line and Andrews took it over on a quarterback sneak to put his team in the lead. Midway through the second quarter Tritt fell on a fumbled ball behind the St. Mike's line for the second touch.

Gus O'Brien and Aulenbacher played well for the losers but could not keep the score down.

Dents: Jim Garrett, Jack Garrett, Tait, McAskie, Oswald, McColl, Ryan, Mueller, Squires, Parish, Cappel, Andrews, Speers, Smith, Peterson, Potashin.

St. Mike's: N. Sullivan, Kavanaugh, Dougherty, O'Brien, Finan, Stuphauser, McGivern, Piehler, Schugg, De Roberts, Cartino, Read, T. Sullivan, Sonberg, Peters, Aulenbacher, Dooley, Aguglia.

Last night U.C. basketball seniors defeated St. Hilda's freshmen in the O.C.E. gym 35-12. It was a fast game and the freshmen certainly put up a good fight, holding the score down to 12-4 in favour of the senior team at half time.

U.C. Seniors: Kay Brown 18, Pat Petrick 15, Jenny St. Alban 2, Billy McGarry, Betty Robinson, Jean Atkinson, H. Doey.

St. Hilda's Freshies: Virginia Lander 6, Gladys Carvoth 3, Betty Kirk 3, Mary Becker, Frances McLean, Ruth Middleboro, Mary Cockburn, Marg Mayes.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Frank Lambert

On Saturday afternoon football will have reached the apex of the season, the aftermath of which should prove very interesting to the most ardent followers of the fall pastime. From coast to coast the stadia of the various football squads such as Varsity, Hamilton and Winnipeg on Canadian soil and those in Ohio State and California should see the turnstiles clicking at a merry rate in rhythmic tune with the big games involved.

Out west Winnipeg, pre-season victors over Sarnia, look like the class for the western title, but the Regina Roughriders with Al Ritchie at the helm, should have something to say about that no doubt. While Argos are invading Bengaltown, "the piece de resistance" as far as we are concerned will be the Varsity-Queen's game entitled as the second act of "A Rhapsody in Blue" and Queen's may well sing the blues song.

While Reeve is doing the Simon Legree act in Kingston hardening up the Queen's gridders, the Big Blue team are being further initiated into the intricacies of English rugby by Warren Stevens along with the regular drill, all of which spells a trying session for the Tri-colour shock troops.

Rather remarkable has been the rise of the now entitled Four Horsemen of Canadian football in the persons of Coulter, Connelly, Gray and Marks but do not forget the work of the Blue front line which certainly paved the way for them. A team is only as strong as it functions as a unit and Varsity is a great unit.

In perusing some old files an interesting sidelight on another of the alternate outsiders of the senior squad was found. Several years ago this lad was the regular quarter on the St. Michael's Senior O.R.F.U. squad, calling the signals for the Marks-Connelly combination and Gash Oakley fellow players on the team. In the item referred to above he was rated as one of the cleverest field generals in football and today while no longer at his former position he has made more than good as an alternate outside. The chap we refer to is none other than Larry Lynch.

A little message to the weatherman to assuage Old Man Pluvius has been productive of results so far and on Saturday afternoon the University of Toronto crowd will be given the opportunity to give the life to reports that the Varsity Spirit is no more. These can be attributed probably to a sense of fine reserve among the Varsity students or else the boys have just been resting up the larynx for the big game this week and so draw your own conclusion only after you hear the crackling Toronto Varsity cry across the gridiron on Saturday.

So far the race for intercollegiate sports honours has been monopolized by McGill and Varsity with McGill holding the Senior Tennis, Senior Track and Senior Golf, and Varsity out in the lead with the Intermediate Tennis, Intermediate Track, Senior Rowing, and Senior Ladies' Tennis, giving the University of Toronto athletes an edge which may be added to by Saturday, when "Gentleman" Jimmy MacPherson and his soccer laddies take on McGill in a final match.

Yesterday the newly formed St. Michael's volleyball squad defeated Junior U.C. 15-4, 15-5, demonstrating some fine new shots in their sparkling victory.

The fight situation around New York must be getting serious or something akin to it, when Walter Neusel, easily defeated by Schmeling this summer, and Primo Carnera, still have the nerve to go in the ring and fall on each other for a few rounds, all for the benefit of a wild eye populace. According to the general build-up the note is "Watch for Tony Galento," one of the preliminary boys on the same card. Ah, the pity of it all.

Resounding to the winding echoes of the untangled sports and news staff yesterday, a touch, rugby match was under way with the results rather dissatisfying, to both sides, but anyway the sports staff scored a moral victory as next season there is a possibility that this form of athletic prowess will be introduced for interfaculty competition and that is something. Just as a gentle warning to our readers, the touch rugby tournament between the news and sports staff will be resumed next Wednesday. My, my, isn't that nice.

McDERMOT SUPPORTS PRESENT-DAY LEAGUE

hypocrisy and is hindered by incomplete membership and domination by the bigger powers, it is still the only organization of its kind, and we owe it our support.

Secondly, "The best defence against war is the establishment of a system of international law and order", and this implies equality between nations under a common law, arbitration and co-operation.

Thirdly, "Law and order depend on two fundamentals of all government: authority and justice. 'It is our own collective job at Geneva,' said Mr. McDermot, 'to help build up authority and establish justice between nations.'"

Authority, he said, implies organization, centralization, the ability to apply sanctions and the potential applications of force; "any system of law and order must have an authority which may use force". Justice was defined as economic adequacy, political satisfaction, the removal of frictions, and the "suppression of that type of journalism that deliberately foments human passions."

The bulk of the League's efforts so far have been towards establishing authority, but we shall go very far wrong if we do not keep authority and justice abreast. Mr. McDermot stressed the importance of justice in dealing with international problems; sanctions and force may check war, but justice alone can solve the problems that lie

All University women may attend these addresses which give promise of being both helpful and interesting. The lectures, probably five in number, will present the problems girls have to face in all their reactions to life, and in their plans for the future.

Tomorrow's lecture will be a general talk on health and its influence on appearance and personality. Later lectures will deal with anatomy and physiology, feminine psychology, problems of conduct, and the questions of marriage and careers.

Refusal to take part in sanctions is a direct violation of Article Sixteen." He said that the method of Collective Action was to substitute judicial methods for war in international affairs.

Speaking third, Mr. R. R. Munro, Victoria, said that increasing population combined with scarcity of raw materials made it necessary for Italy to have a larger place in the sun. The problem was either adjustment or war. The League, he said, must offer Mussolini an alternative to war, and must find its essential functions in supplying peaceful solutions.

"Our problem is one of a breach of law ultimately calling for sanctions," said J. Mirsky, U.C., speaking for the Noes. "If war results from the application of sanctions it will be a scientific experiment in human happiness, but the application of sanctions need not result in war."

Speaking for the Noes, Prof. C. A. Ashley of the Economics Dept. said that since 1913 Italy has had considerable increases in the amount of territory under her control, and that before her claim to future expansion could be recognized she should be made to furnish evidence that she had developed the territorial additions. This Italy has not done, he affirmed.

able to help us greatly in further attracting the interest of the undergraduates. We intend to have at least one play this year which will be entirely cast from the students and faculty of the University. We are keen, too, to get students to help behind scenes, in making the various sets and in the general undercover work of production. Nor are we adverse to having students in the casts of our other plays; on the contrary, we welcome them!"

The new unofficial representative of the students had little to say in the matter of his new appointment beyond the fact that several ideas were materializing and that he would do the best he could. "I will try to see that the various dramatic societies don't get into difficulties with their dates at the theatre," he said. "And I will try to present the case for the students in the best light I can."

One of the ideas that Mr. Delafeld spoke of is that of a University Dramatic Society to supplement the various college and faculty societies and, perhaps, to put on a play for the Drama Festival each year.

plays during the year, and a wider scope for talent will be thus achieved. Lloyd Somerville, president of the Trinity Dramatic Society, is heartily in accord with the idea of the 5 to 6 o'clock plays in Hart House. "It gives the undergraduates the feeling that Hart House is a students' theatre, and not merely for outsiders," he said. "The only difficulty with this type of production is that it depends for its support on the members of its own college, as other colleges take comparatively little interest in the activities of the other dramatic organizations on the campus."

Madeline Wright, the president of the St. Joseph's Dramatic Society, felt also that anything of this type which would stimulate interest in the drama was a good thing. She said that the plans for her society's coming year are as yet indefinite, but will soon take concrete form.

VIC LACROSSE SQUAD TRIUMPHS OVER MEDS

The Victoria Lacrosse team out-manoeuvred, out-slashed and out-scared the Meds 8-4 in an interfaculty affair in Hart House yesterday afternoon. Led by Edge Young who slammed the rubber home three times and, Thompson, who bulged the twine on two occasions, the Scarlet and Gold squad rang up their second straight win of the current season and Meds suffered their second consecutive loss.

The Vic team played nice combination and covered up well in front of their own net. Burgess, Holman and Casserly scored a goal each.

Blue Gridders in Epic Struggle

VICTORY OVER TRICOLOUR WILL CINCH COLLEGE TITLE

Reeve's Men Coming Well Prepared but Stevens is Confident

ISBISTER STILL ABSENT

But Blues Expected to Use Same Wide-Open Play Again

By Jim Tiller

Amidst an atmosphere of glamor and enthusiasm that makes college football the greatest sport on earth, Varsity's Big Blue heroes will meet the powerful Tricolour squad from Queen's tomorrow afternoon in what promises to be the most thrilling sporting event of the year. Warren Stevens and his charges only ask a fair, dry field and, granted that, are quietly confident of overpowering Ted Reeve's Ironsides and recovering the insignia of football supremacy, lost to Queen's last fall by the narrowest of margins.

The question on every lip: "Which team will win?" resolves itself into another query: "Can Queen's hold Varsity?" The Blues are unquestionably speedy and shifty and always on the attack while Queen's emphasize the defensive element of the game and wait for the breaks, that is, the fumbles. Queen's sudden scoring spurge against Western last Saturday was directly due to Western fumbles and not to a change in tactics. Reports from Kingstons seem to indicate that the Presbyterians have been doing some very earnest scrimmaging amongst themselves, and they will undoubtedly play a hard, rugged game in the well-known Queensman manner. The Blues, too, are taking tomorrow's contest seriously and have themselves worked up to a fighting trim. Particular attention has been given to their passing plays (both forward and lateral) and it bodes ill for Queen's.

Bob Isbister's injured knee has improved but little and he will not likely be used in the game tomorrow. Varsity will not be at a loss, however, if Cam Gray boots the piskin as well as he did against McGill. Al Williams will be back in the line-up at snap; and all

McGill Soccer Team To Challenge Blues

Tomorrow's Game to Decide Intercollegiate Title

TIE WILL GIVE BLUES TITLE

The McGill soccer squad invade Toronto tomorrow to play the final game of the intercollegiate series. McGill, last year's champions, must defeat the Blues in order to win the title again. In the event of a tie the title will go to Varsity since they have defeated R.M.C. by one goal more than McGill did. The teams are very evenly matched. This game has always been a classic with neither team ever having any great margin.

The Blues are handicapped by one injury. Stapleton, the regular right inside, hurt his knee in last week's game and it is doubtful whether he will start tomorrow. However, the team is working well together and Coach McPherson is hopeful of bringing the championship back to Toronto.

The game will be played at 10.30 in the morning. This will give those who are interested an opportunity of seeing it.

VICTORY OF BLUES TO BE CELEBRATED

Student Parade to be Held in Event of Varsity Triumph

14,000 TO WATCH GAME

Should Varsity's Big Blue team vanquish the Queen's team in the epic rugby struggle her tomorrow, a mammoth parade through Toronto streets is in the offing. Officials of the S.A.C. last night saw a strong possibility such a demonstration would be held. A permit for the parade had been requested from the city authorities and while no official endorsement had been received last night it was believed sanction would be obtained today.

The Athletic office indicated yesterday that there will be a complete sell-out for the football classic of the year. Special bleachers are being erected and close to 14,000 spectators will be able to be accommodated.

Student interest was running high on the campus last night and the mad scramble for tickets was the order of the day. The Varsity band will attend the game as usual and the Queen's band will also compete with the Blue musicians in entertaining the huge crowd.

U.C. PARLIAMENT VOTES DOWN PLAN OF SOCIAL CREDIT

Government Meets Defeat On Question of New Economy

STORMY SESSION

Opposition Charges Prime Minister with Bribing
Voters

Scandal, libel and subtle insinuations raged across the floor of the House at the regular session of the U.C./Parliamentary Club yesterday when the Prime Minister, A. D. B. Marshall, was charged with mass bribery of the electorate. A motion of impeachment was brought against the government by the leader of the opposition, E. Shortt, who stated that the monthly dividend of the Social Credit government was a payment for votes, and "bribery on an unprecedented scale."

On the request of the Speaker, the House divided on the motion of impeachment, which was defeated by a vote of 13 to 9.

Turning to more serious matters, the Speaker read the motion for debate, and called upon the Prime Minister, who opened the motion "Resolved that this House favours the principles of Social Credit." "The basic premise of Social Credit," he said, "is to provide every man, woman and child with the necessities for a decent standard of living." He continued with a description of the inadequacies of the present economic order, and pointed out that we have sufficient wealth in the country to give everyone an income of three thousand dollars.

The leader of the opposition accused the government of trying to prop up a dying capitalist system, and termed the need for additional purchasing power as a "lot of hooey". In an endeavour to pay monthly dividends, the government was warned against the dangers of excessive expenditure, and the eventual inability to float loans.

The motion of the government was defeated on division of the House by a vote of 16 to 13. A motion of non-confidence in the government was declared out of order by the Speaker.

Slept Through Quake

While the greater majority of Torontonians were tumbling in terror out of their beds as a result of Nature's Halloween prank this morning, William G. Carroll, official seismologist at the Meteorological Office slept peacefully on. The first intimation which he had of the shock was when the telephone jangled rudely in his ear. Mr. Carroll has been recording earthquakes for the last eighteen years and has never yet felt one of them.

SPRITES OF HALLOWE'EN HOLD SWAY AT UNION

Last night while the spirit of Halloween roamed the streets University College students—and a few others—sought refuge in the Women's Union and Miss JTB finally met Mr. JTB. Skeletons, black cats and other evil omens failed to cast a pall over the festivities, although a hundred or so couples were kept busy dancing on their own toes.

Outside a milling mob of Schoolmen sought entrance through forbidden channels but few succeeded in evading the cordon of University police who were there awaiting them.

PEP RALLY TO-DAY

Saturday the University of Toronto football team will meet Queen's University in what promises to be the outstanding game of the year. Varsity is regarded as the most sensational team in Canadian football today. Everywhere the praises of their exploits are being sung. And the students of the University are preparing to make on Saturday a display of patriotism and enthusiasm befitting such an occasion.

For this purpose a pep rally will be held tonight at 9 p.m. at Examination Hall.

Warren Stevens will have the team on hand. The band will be there—and the cheerleaders to hold a rosters' rehearsal in preparation for Saturday's display. Every student is requested to be on hand and prepare for Saturday's game which promises to eclipse anything of the kind which has occurred for several seasons.

Come out and meet the team.

Come out and support the team tonight—and be prepared for the celebration Saturday afternoon.

The time, 5 p.m. at Examination Hall.

SUDDEN DISTURBANCE IN ENTIRE DISTRICT

Startled Citizens Awake to Swarm City Streets as Eastern Canada Rocked by Most Violent Quake Since 1925—
Centre of Disturbance Believed Within 35 Miles of Toronto

BUILDINGS SWAY IN FIFTY-MINUTE SHOCK REPORTS INDICATE LITTLE DAMAGE

While Toronto shivered fitfully amid the dying hilarity of Halloween revelry early this morning, the city was violently shaken by an earth tremor which excelled in local violence anything which has occurred here since 1898. The shock was violently felt through all Eastern Canada and the United States and was believed to have its centre within 100 miles of Toronto, probably in South Western Ontario. The first tremor was felt at 1.04.21 a.m. today and attained its greatest violence at 1.05 a.m. Vibrations were still being registered at 1.47 a.m.

As far as could be ascertained no damage was incurred in Toronto although reports from Syracuse, N.Y., indicated that a house had crumbled under the tremors.

Mild tremors were registered yesterday afternoon at the meteorological office but the centre of disturbance had not been located when the second and more severe quake was recorded today. Since the seismograph was installed in 1898, ten local shocks have been felt, all of a milder nature than that of today, which was of such violence that the coupler of the seismograph was dislodged.

That unpublicized group of gridders, the Varsity Seconds, meet Western intermediates in London tomorrow. As the season draws rapidly to a close, the Seconds will again strive to bring success to their University.

The Toronto lads should be able to enjoy a holiday this Saturday as so far the Purple and White team have shown little football ability.

Varsity will be far from the strong crew that defeated Western by a 30-5 score. Barry Gray, its star quarterback, has been moved up permanently to big time. Whitey Miller is unable to play because of injuries, while Van Allen and Bridle are also handicapped by injuries.

Ripley will again handle the kicking duties in his usual capable manner. Tails and Jarvis supply the plunging power with Mustard ready to scamper

HALLOWE'EN SURPRISE SHATTERING QUAKE

Reporters Hazard Their Lives in Search of News for Paper

The bright Brigade charged down St. George at one o'clock in the morning. Something had blundered, the pipes at the press were playing taps, the floor met the ceiling in a series of raps, brave three reporters. Over the glimmering city there was a lurid light, ghosts danced through the streets, the lamp posts twisted and gnarled seemed to sneer at the three brave reporters. Chaos, the earth was moving, tearing and twisting the pavement, yet they charged on, forward to the Meteorological Building. Through the ranks of the raging press, the Globe, the Mail, the Star, tattered and torn they fought their way, breathless they reached the inner sanctum—and there, amazed, they saw—a diagram of a seismograph, two sheets of parallel lines, with a few jerky ones—and that, startled listeners, was the Toronto earthquake of 1935.

Peppy New Song For The Big Game

Ross Workman, stadium manager, last night submitted to The Varsity a new song to be sung at the big game tomorrow. Varsity's rosters are asked to learn the words.

To the tune of Little Brown Jug.
With Coulter, Connelly, Marks and Gray

We'll show poor Queen's
The great wide way,
With forward passes near and far
And placement kicks
Across the bar.

Chorus:
Hal hal ha! Are we glad!
Even though our foes are mad.
Hal hal ha! Do we care!
You bet we do! Our team's right there.

Note: Varsity fans are invited to bring some additional verses to the Pep Rally.

Stand Up And Cheer

Tomorrow Queen's comes to town for the football classic of the year with the University of Toronto seniors. Students, thousands of them, will fill the stadium—everything points to a sell-out crowd.

Tomorrow the team will need all the vocal support every undergraduate there can give—let us have some real rooting and old-time enthusiasm at this game. f f

We sat with the rooters at the Western game and were unimpressed by the rooting—an anemic kind of support given to the team by the thousands of "grandstand quarterbacks". It was little better at the McGill game here.

The old rah-rah spirit is generally assumed to be dead as a dodo in general college life and it is probably a commendable demise but the football stadium is one place where it should be maintained.

Stand up and cheer tomorrow—sing the Blue and White and make it sound like the stirring tune it is—don't just stand in the bleachers with your hat off looking at the crowd and thinking of the impending tea dance.

Let every student in the Bowl show his loyalty to our "four horsemen" on the Varsity backfield and the great line in front of it—show it in the only way they can by a display of enthusiasm never seen by Pick and Shovel Marsh or anyone else.

It does you good to shout and roar once in a while. Surely students at this University have not become too urbane, too blasé and too sophisticated to shout a "Toronto" the way it should be shouted or to sing the Blue and White till it echoes over to Yonge Street.

We suggest a cheerleader be dispatched to the section at the south end of the field. There are usually about two or three thousand down there with no one to pep them up in an official way. The main rooting section surely does not need three white-ducked leaders.

It will be a battle royal—that Varsity-Queen's game—and let us answer the critics who contend there is no spirit at Varsity by a practical display of our vocal potentialities.

Our great team would appreciate nothing better than a riotous display of the real old-fashioned, peppy rooting when they take the field against the Tricolour tomorrow.

Other Angles On Germany

Some time ago The Varsity ran an editorial in which it was suggested that the situation in Germany was not as serene as it appears on the surface. Never having been in Germany we could only draw our information from men who had, and whose opinions we believed reliable. A Trinity student took exception to our stand. We published his letter voicing his observations. We are in receipt of a letter which advances further opinions on the subject and which we deem worthy to be passed on for the information of students interested in the German situation.

Editor, The Varsity.
Dear Sir:

Precisely because I am opposed to Fascism and everything it represents, I was very pleased to see your column last Friday given over to a presentation of the other side of the question—a defence of German Fascism.

I should like, however, to point out that "II Trinity" has not succeeded in his defence. Unquestionably there are smiling faces in Nazi Germany. There are also many faces to which smiles come infrequently, as is testified by the carefully worded letters received from relatives by Germans living here. But then people do learn to smile even in wartime, even the front lines of the Great War produced Bruce Bairnsfather.

Let us rather examine the facts of the situation from Paul Einzig's viewpoint, accepting his criterion of success as improvement in economic conditions. It is no doubt true that there are more people employed in Germany today than there were in January 1933, but since the German government does not publish the total salaries paid, we have no real basis of comparison with, e.g., 1932; and further, since this is the case, it seems to give strength to the claim of resident foreign observers that employment figures are artificially inflated in a number of well-known ways, including labour camps, forced acceptance of part-time arrangements for more employees rather than full-employment of fewer workers, etc. Also of course, rearmament has given much work and we need not discuss here what effect such work will ultimately produce on Germany and on the rest of the world.

We need only glance over the figures of salaries the position of Foreign Editor of London's "Financial exception there have been drastic reductions in every wage bracket—the reductions in some cases amounting to 25 per cent. At the same time the cost of living has risen steadily, it being well-known that fats are now 120 per cent and potatoes 80 per cent above the 1932 figure. It therefore seems evident that we must give some credence to the statements of those who claim that German Fascism has lowered the German standard of living by approximately 50 per cent. Germans are apparently willing to tighten their belts and be amused by the Nazi circus of drums and banners and speeches and Jew-baiting and Catholic-chasing and Communist witch-burning. Circenses without the pauement Brave possibly, but tragically silly.

As for the decrease in German trade, both domestic and foreign, "II Trinity" quotes Paul Einzig as saying that the revival "has been spectacular", in the face of the universally known fact of Germany's desperation on this point. In fact "II Trinity" bases his whole argument on Mr. Einzig's statements and we may therefore examine briefly the latter's record as a political and economic analyst and prophet.

It is by no means fortuitous that Mr. Einzig occupies and wage scales as officially published to see that without News" and of "The Banker", and that he is also the foremost apologist in England for Continental Fascism. In his book "The Economic Foundations of Fascism" written before Hitler's reign began, he states exultantly that in no country was it as easy as in Italy to reduce the wages of the workers when it suited the needs of Italy's financial interests. The exception has now arisen in the case of Germany. Fascism may indeed be defined as the state which makes it impossible for its workers to protest anything that may be done to them, and this apparently is what Mr. Einzig of "The Banker" considers one of the most valuable characteristics of Fascism. Also in the same book is a whole chapter devoted to a discussion of Fascism (Italian) as a force for peace. I commend it to your attention. In the light of the Italo-Ethiopian war raging at present, it makes very funny reading indeed.

I am aware that Mr. Einzig in 1934 published a book condemning Hitlerism and insisting that Nazism had little in common with Fascism. His writings since that time, however, seem to lean somewhat to the opposite view, as the virtues of Hitler's and Schacht's program became clear. This clarity apparently has increased as German re-armament, financed by the Bank of England, has progressed; to the extent that Mr. Einzig now finds himself very much in sympathy with Germany and much less enthused about Mussolini's ideals. It is evident that Paul Einzig speaks for interests with which the majority of people in England, Canada, Germany and Italy have nothing in common, and whose spokesmen are not disingenuous in their presentation of opinions. I feel, therefore, that in quoting Mr. Einzig, "II Trinity" has weakened rather than strengthened his case.

Please pardon the extreme length of this letter. I feel, however, that it deals with a subject to which students should pay considerable attention.

Yours etc.,
L. E.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crockover

At the present sitting, gentlemen, (we aim to please), it seems as though Varsity is about to annex two more titles for this season's work. These are the English rugby and the soccer championships which will be settled right here in Toronto tomorrow. Starting off the busy athletic day tomorrow Coach Jimmy McPherson will lead his soccer squad into action against McGill on the front campus at 10.30 in the morning. If Jimmy can keep himself from scoring too many goals the tilt should be quite an interesting one. Then in the afternoon at 1.00, preceding the "event of the week", Coach Jimmy Boles will send his ruggerites against McGill. The early start of this game will no doubt mean that many of you will miss it but it can't be helped as the Queen's-Varsity game must be started on time to prevent it from running on into Sunday. Due to their overwhelming win at Kingston last Saturday the Blue rugger team looks like a sure thing for the title they've held for the last three years. Coach Boles is very proud of his squad this year as he believes it's the best he's tutored in the last four years and is quite confident of victory tomorrow. Kyle, Stohart, Hilliard and Coughlan, the four Blues who were in action against the Quebec team and who led the Ontario squad to victory, are all set to go against the Redmen and all were out practicing last night long after the street lights went on just to put in the finishing touches.

We ran across a story in yesterday's Star which informed us that there were going to be great doings up at the campus tonight, you know, bonfires 'n everything. We immediately dropped our copy of the Star, which incidentally was taking bows for having aroused new spirit on the campus, and dashed out to the corner store to borrow a match or two. However we now learn it's all off—no bonfires—the grounds superintendent won't allow it. However, there are to be speeches and what not at the Examination Hall today at 5 p.m. The Varsity rugby squads and their coaches will be out and Coach Stevens is scheduled to make a speech. This fact alone should be a great drawing card as Stevens' speeches are usually of the single word variety. Ross Workman is to be Master of Ceremonies and he has lined up a great program. At any rate let's all turn out and get some practice in for tomorrow's game.

We wonder where Mr. Lou Marsh gets all his information about the campus activities about which he knows, or claims to know, so much. In his periodic rave about Varsity, Lou takes the U. of T. fans to task for saving themselves for the tea dances after the game. If he'd be kind enough to pass along the information about those tea-dances he would have many grateful readers around the campus. It seems as though no one around the University seems to know anything about them. Oh well, imagination is the spice of life.

Warren Stevens sent his squad through a brick drill behind closed doors up at the Stadium yesterday and the squad looked better than ever. If the Blue line continues to outcharge the opposition as they've been doing in the last two weeks tomorrow's game should give Steve no worries. At present it is doubtful whether Stevens will break up his winning combination on the line and Al Williams, although fit and ready, may not start. Bob Isbister will not get into the game as his knee isn't ready for a hard workout. The additional rest will not do his bad knee any harm. Besides it is doubtful whether he could displace Gray right now as young Cam's going too well to be kept on the bench. The final word from the team is that they'll win by a good margin as the Four Horsemen have no desire to be dubbed Horses' Necks (or other parts of Dobbin's anatomy) on Monday. As far as we're concerned there's no doubt as to the outcome of the game. The Blues will win and by a good margin, too. The Varsity squad are all set for a hard game and rumours of retaliation against various Queen's men are utterly false. Providing Reeve's men play clean ball, the fans are in for the highlight of the season as the Tricolour crew are undoubtedly worthy foes. However, should elbows and fists become overly active the game may be very close. In the meantime, frosh, guard those goal posts.

Tonight Vic Seniors play Nurses at five o'clock in the Margaret Eaton gym. This is the Nurses' first appearance. Lillie Read is captaining their team, and she and Mary Parsons will do the shooting. Ruth Hindmarsh and Ruth Kent will be on the defense. Bay Little, a Household Science girl, is turning out with them.

You probably read in yesterday's Varsity about the Old Time Monster Pep Rally which is being held this afternoon in Examination Hall. This rally should be a lot of fun, and the band and cheerleaders are hoping to see a lot of the girls there. Now's your chance to show your University spirit.

THE CAMPBELLS ARE COMING

The Campbells are coming and so are the MacDonalds, MacLeans, MacTavishes, MacGregors and plaids of every colour and design when the Highland Special rolls into town tonight bearing Ted Reeve and his Oatmeal Cakes all primed and ready for the chronic classic with St. Mike's, O.C.E., U.C., Victoria, Trinity, Meds, S.P.S., Household Science and the School of Nursing. With so many sons of the heather and our own Irish in the limelight, it should be a Gaelic affair.

After living on oatmeal and the bible for several weeks, with rolled oats at breakfast for variety, Coach Reeve reports the Presbyterian Ironheads to be feeling their oats and says the Limestone Lads are aching for a chance to sneer the Blues and do away with the Limehouse Blues. He denies the report that the Beef Line have been eating garlic with their porridge with intent to asphyxiate the Blue lionsmen.

Those Kingston Queens must be a tough team at that. Their motto is: "Although you fail, Tri, Tri again!"

Undaunted and unaffected by the taunts and jibes of Reeve's Rowdies, Warren Stevens puts his charges through their paces with unruffled brow and customary calm. Nostril, you can't worry Warren.

Fair Reader, can you not look forward 24 hours and hear Ted Reeve giving the Covenanters their final orders before the initial kick-off: "Remember men, all Scotland prayeth for us. Fight! Fight! Fight!" And who knows but what he may arouse them thus: "Scots who hae wi' Don Young bled . . . etc." While down on the home benches, Warry Stevens (no relation to H. H.) promises the Blues a half brick of ice-cream for each and every boy—if they win.

Last week in McGill, Warren's last caution was: "Mark Antony". When the Redmen pulled that pyramid play with Tony Antony, their custom-built line-smasher at the apex, Anthony was certainly Adverse to the Blues.

Which reminds us that the author of Anthony Adverse has gone to bed to write another book. Next, we suppose, some rugby coach will go to bed to figure out a new hidden-ball play. They might get their cue from Alice Faye's latest picture, "Balls of Fire".

The Western Mostangs have mandered out of the play-off picture and that's no Story; the Colts never had a chance against their rivals' seasoned steeds. The Pintos used new material; for instance, they might get some Clydesdales for the front line and a Shire for snap; they might well introduce some Running Blood into the backfield, and a dash of hackney might improve the strain. And while they're at it, they might as well import a mule from Kansas to do the kicking.

It is rumoured that Ted Reeve has an ace up his sleeve in case the Blues run wild tomorrow or in case Hughie Marks starts to burn up the airways with flying pigskin. It is said that at half-time, Teddy will amble over to the Blues' bench and sneer: "St. Patrick was a Scotchman."

And don't forget, it's the third crucial game of the season. Julep.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Eaton Auditorium

The evolution of piano playing has a loose parallel in the growth of a child from immaturity to maturity.

Its earlier exponents revelled in the breadth of its possibilities, especially those on the sensational side. They delighted in the exploitation of its tremendous dynamics and in the opportunity for purely technical display. The depths to which this school of playing can fall is lamentable. At its worst it becomes a devastating travesty of all music-values: a cold-blooded slaughter consummating in a vulgar ugly caricature of all that it attempts. It boasts itself in dizzy speeds beyond human endurance or any criterion of beauty, punctuated by senseless but necessary pauses without musical significance. A display of bad taste is sometimes accompanied by smug satisfaction amounting to impertinence. Piano playing has advanced beyond this deplorable stage but there may possibly be truth in the theory of recurring cycles.

Ignaz Friedman played a recital of piano music last night in Eaton Auditorium. In many respects his playing was colossal—in the consistent manner in which it displayed the smallest imperfections inherent in the music; in its bitter disregard for composers' intentions or the dictates of good taste; in its preoccupation with mere speed and thunderous tone; in its amazing appeal to what ought to be a discerning audience. F.B.S.

St. Thomas Church

Sunday being within the Octave of All Saints' day there will be a Procession and Solemn Eucharist at 11 a.m., at which the Rector, Rev. C. J. S. Stuart, M.A., B.D., will preach. The service will be sung to an unaccompanied setting, mostly in the Phrygian mode. This we believe is the first rendition in Canada. An Introit, "O how glorious is the kingdom" by Dr. Willan and Sir Walford Davies' "Blessed are the pure in heart" will also be sung at this service. At the 7 o'clock Solemn Evensong and Procession the Rev. J. R. Davies, B.A., will preach and the choir will sing Dr. Charles Wood's "Expectans expectavi", which was sung at Westminster Abbey at a service during the London conference of organists. During the Processions Vaughan Williams' "Sine Nomine" will be sung.

posts with their buckets and brushes. In conformity with a tradition just as old, inhabitants of the Hoskins and Devonshire Houses lay their plans to meet the invaders with something in the line of their own medicine.

This year, the defenders have formed their plans with deep-laid cunning of the spider and the fly variety. Any Queen's man foolish enough to be caught will be taken to East House, and the fun will begin. Last year, three unfortunate were dragged there, and embryonic barbers set to with a will upon them with scissors and clippers until the only hair left on their heads was in the form of a large T. With this permanent (at least, for a month or so) reminder of their misdeeds, and of the might of Toronto in punishing same, they were allowed to depart to their own Alma Mater.

SECOND OPEN MEETING OF AVUKAH SOCIETY

Guest Speaker will be Rabbi Samuel Sachs, Graduate of Columbia

At the Women's Union tonight the Avukah Society will hold the second open meeting of the season. The guest speaker will be Rabbi Samuel Sachs, a graduate of Columbia University, who has recently returned from Lucerne, Switzerland, where he attended the Nineteenth World Zionist Congress as one of the Canadian delegates.

At the meeting there will also be presented a discussion of Current Events, led by Dr. Mark Zimmerman, and an account of the Y.P.Z.A. Convention held at Buffalo, by Miss Esther Walerstein. The meeting will be adjourned at about 9.45 p.m. after which refreshments will be served and the guests will dance to the music of Harvey Silver at the piano. The executive extends a cordial welcome to all who are interested.

Rae and Stewart Under Screw Admit That Scheme is Very New

News flash! Not all about "the war in Ethiopia" but something new and different—a joint meeting of the U.C. Literary Association and the W.U.A. next Tuesday night in the Women's Union at 8 p.m.

In fact the meeting is only a minor feature of the evening. The special attraction is the program which the U.C. Lit. is presenting for the entertainment of the W.U.A. The ladies concerned seemed very much in the dark as to the nature of the entertainment. It is hard to say whether the calculating males are working on the well-known female characteristic or if they are really going to produce a rabbit from the famous hat. Miss Joyce Arnold, on being thoroughly cross-examined, was unable to divulge any information and looked apprehensive.

However, after having carefully trailed two of the chief conspirators in the persons of Mr. Saul Rae and Mr. Don Stewart of the U.C. Lit, they were

BURSARY TO BE AWARDED IN MEMORY OF JOHN COPP

Donald M. Barton

Chief gymnasium instructor for the past sixteen years, died at his residence, Wilcocks St., last evening after a short illness. He was taken ill in September but his condition was not thought to be serious; however, heart trouble developed.

He was appointed gymnasium instructor at the opening of Hart House in 1919 and for the past twelve years has been gymnasium director. The funeral will be held from the F. W. Matthews Company, 665 Spadina Ave., on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m. The service will be conducted by President Cody.

Fund Collected as Memorial of Famous U. of T. Athlete Reaches $4,715.33

FOURTH YEAR STUDENTS

Holder to Have Same Qualities as Johnny Copp Himself if Possible

Payment of the money in the John Copp Bursary has been made to the Board of Governors of the University. It will be remembered that following the death of the popular young athlete, friends banded together to found a Bursary in his memory. The money now collected amounts to $4,715.33. "We hope that the interest accruing from this fund will provide a bursary of between $150 and $200," said F. R. Hume, secretary of the Bursary Committee.

The bursary is payable to someone entering fourth year in Medicine. It is not a contestant award, but is appointed. It was the hope of those responsible for the Bursary that the holder should possess many of the same qualities as the late John Copp.

Section 5 of the Trust Deed states: "that the bursary committee in awarding the bursary, shall consider the character, athletic ability, scholarship and general interests of the nominees with the intention that: (a) the holder of the bursary should possess the qualities listed and attain a high standard" (Continued on Page 4)

STUDENT ACTIVITIES HELD IN CHECK

Undergrads of St. Lawrence Held Incapable of Assuming Responsibility

"IMPRACITABLE HERE"

Are University students capable of assuming the responsibility of deciding on the number of activities in which they shall engage? St. Lawrence University in New York State thinks not, and has this year inaugurated a new scheme whereby students who fall below a certain standard in their studies are barred from participating in extra-curricular activities.

Interviewed by The Varsity regarding the feasibility of such a scheme at Toronto, University authorities expressed their belief that such a scheme is not necessary here, and would, moreover, be impracticable as it could not embrace the whole University. (Continued on Page 4)

DISHEVELLED STUDENT WANTS ENGLISH CLASS

Queen's Man not Satisfied with Home Lecturers Apparently

Saturday morning a dishevelled and hurried student burst into the Mathematics department, in University College tower. "Where should I take an English lecture?" he demanded. The calculators suggested that it was high time that he knew his own time-table, and that he could hardly expect them to do so. It turned out that he was a Queen's student who wanted to take a lecture from "The best English prof. at Varsity!" He was last seen heading for the Department of English.

JACK HOLDEN

Hard tackling outside whose defensive tactics helped materially to defeat the Tricolour on Saturday. Jack leaped high in the air to snare one of Hughie Marks' bullet passes for a gain of 35 yards and was thereby directly responsible for the Blues' second major score.

PROFESSOR KNIGHT STARTS NEW PLAY

King Lear is New Production of Famous Shakespearean Authority

"MAGNIFICENT CAST"

"King Lear is a difficult blend of horror, grotesque, tragedy and comedy. It has a purgatorial plot. So many people think that Lear breaks down, but this is not so at all, his character actually grows stronger under suffering. But the part of Lear is most difficult. The combination of physical frailty and mental force is hard to portray without losing either one or the other," stated Wilson Knight. "This is a much harder role than that of Hamlet."

King Lear is Wilson Knight's latest production, scheduled to open at Hart House on the seventh of November. He is aiming at a modern interpretation of this play, and is not trying to be Elizabethan. The sets themselves, carrying out this idea, are to be "solid and simple", following the lines of the play. "The words and actions of the characters are the most important thing in any Shakespearean play". The setting is therefore arranged to assist in the interpretation rather than distract from it. "Sound effects though, are understressed on the stage. They are of great importance in Shakespeare. We are going to have adequate sound effects in this play; we haven't rehearsed them yet, but we are going to have them."

In choosing his cast Professor Knight selects people for their mental affinity to the part rather than physical. Irving, a magnificent and forceful actor, must have been perfectly horrible as Romeo, he speculated, where the part calls for (Continued on Page 4)

Graduates of School Reunite For Game

School boys of the years 3T3 and 3T4 made a gala day of the Varsity-Queen's game. Seventy odd boys met in Hart House for luncheon at noon on Saturday, then proceeded to the game where they gave what moral support they could to the Blue and White. After the game they paraded to the Carls-Rite Hotel where they indulged in a hearty dinner and revelled as the boys from the Limestone town would say, "till the wee sma' hours".

BLUES OVERCOME REEVITES AFTER EXCITING CONTEST

Varsity Now Well Out in Front of Intercollegiate Series—Queen's is Second but Four Points Behind and McGill Comes Close Third

LONG MARKS TO CONNELLY FORWARD PASSES ARE HIGH-POINTS OF HARD FOUGHT VICTORY

Home Team Deserves Victory from Statistical Viewpoint, Gaining More Yards from Scrimmage and Running Back Kicks

By George Vair

Playing before 20,000 enthusiastic grid fans Varsity topped the champion Queen's team 18-15 at the Blue Bowl, Saturday, in the most wide open game ever witnessed between these two rival squads. The feature of the game included the brilliant aerial attack of Marks and Co. which were responsible for both Varsity touchdowns, the stonewall defence of both lines which reduced first downs via the plunging route to a new low figure and the daring offensive launched by the invaders in place of their regular game. The latter is evinced by the fact that the Tricolour scored two touchdowns, two converts and three singles for a total of 15 points which is just three less than they collected in the 1934 three game series with Varsity.

Intermediate Blues Win From Western

Ball in Western End of Field During Most of the Game

SCORE, 11-0

The Intermediates kept the honour of U. of T. intact on Saturday when they made their contribution to the glory of the day by capping U. of Western Ontario Seconds' hopes with a top-sided score of 11-0.

The Blues dominated the play throughout the game and showed that they believed in the "it is better to give than to receive" moral by seldom allowing the Western boys to stray from their own end of the gridiron. The first score of the pigskin battle came when Western fumbled in the first (Continued on Page 3)

Toronto's win over the Presbyterians puts Varsity well out in front in the intercollegiate race with 9 points as compared to 5 for Queen's, McGill's 4 and Western's 2. The Reevesites must now take the Redmen in Kingston to ensure themselves of a position in the play-off. The O'Brien coached crew appear to be a bit and miss outfit and Queen's are in a bad spot despite Western's surprise 6-2 victory at Molson Stadium last Saturday.

Armistice Day

At a meeting of the Caput of the University on Saturday it was decided not to grant a holiday on Remembrance Day. Lectures and laboratory classes will be suspended for three-quarters of an hour to enable students to attend the Memorial Service at the Soldiers' Tower.

Marsh and Japs Stave it Off Sateen Panties--Quite the Toff

By Mr. Grandstand Quarterback
Twenty thousand and 6 horsemen (get it, you subtract the famous four, myself and Charley Horse) rode the boys of the Tri-colour into the "valley of humiliation."

Our old pal, true blue Lou Marsh, shone beneath the brightest star since the good old days when he used to pan the pro. rascals. Member? Anyway he ought to have been around to receive officially the Calla Lily if not to see the thousands of mad shouting and cheering rooters. "Stop!"

We would like to know why they don't use some of those fencing Jap chops for the team. They certainly know how to muck it up. And can they take it? What they don't take they stave off.

The boys from School seem to have Ben Hurrying around. The chariot race kept them pretty well on their nose but we understand that the judges declared a foul and "no race".

Then there was a parade. Nearly a thousand dear old Varsity men serenaded the city hall clock. The band added its brassy voice, perhaps even Jiminy Simpson was impressed.

Those sateen panties and canvas jerseys certainly gave Queen's the slip. All of the Four Horsemen had the new equipment. All four fleet-footed fellows figured in the most sensational play seen around these here parts for many an autumn. Coulter ran the kick back twenty yards, penalty fifteen yards. Marks threw to Connelly for forty-eight yards. Joe ran the other twenty yards and Cammy Gray converted. Nice going say all of us.

Weir, the Kingston player who got his wrist broke, was, ironically enough, the man who caused much of the damage when Varsity was down at Queen's. Weir met his unfortunate accident up against the jaw of one of our men. He was travelling with his arm high and bent for damage. We could not keep a mere fragment of a smile from creeping across our face.

We suppose it is just Scotch hot-headedness but we cannot see any reason for Tri-colour Kirkland to kick Coulter's helmet off the field. Although he did not lose his head, Joe lost his hat plenty. Perhaps this fact rather aggravated the striped lads from penitentiary town.

Anyway Varsity won the game fairly and by courtesy the crowd gave them lots of support—tea dances not with standing.

An Insult From Beatty

Our friend Mr. Beatty has been making headlines again. Now that his little idea of having the C.N.R. added to his string of toys, and have all the railways given to the C.P.R. doesn't seem to have been so well received, he's started on the Universities.

However in this, Mr. Beatty's latest exploit, he doesn't want quite as much. He doesn't want to have everything, he just wants to have everybody think as is most convenient to him. And so we have our railway president, and Chancellor of McGill—being granted the highest honour that the University of Western Ontario can bestow, an honorary Doctorate of Laws—insulting the very basis of the University ideal.

Throughout the whole history of the University the finest heritage has been the freedom for the revolution and the expression of liberal and progressive thought, unbound and untrammelled by the prostituting influence of material exigency. But, it has been to the shame of the American university that it has too long retained its intellectual swaddling clothes, and busied itself with rah-rah puerilities. The time has been long overdue for the universities of this continent to make some lasting contribution to the ideological progress of humanity. Of course, none will deny that in the field of material and technical progress, our research students have been of very definite value. Nor can one attempt to deny that much of real worth has been done by our professors. However, one's knowledge of student organizations must be indeed intimate, and one's memory exceedingly long to recall any incident in which the opinion and activity of the students on this continent was received with much more than amused, and somewhat impatient, tolerance. Nor has it been worth much more.

Of recent years, however, and particularly since the days of '29, there seemed to be some indication that our student was growing up. It may be that with the bottom knocked out of his material well-being his smug complacency was jolted just a little too hard. In any case, among students there has been a more searching examination into the bases of our social and economic structures.

Whether or not so many of our Economics professors are tinged with socialism or not, is certainly not what a Chancellor of one University, making a Convocation address to the students of a second, should make the basis of his address. It seems just a little too obviously axe-grinding of a very unpleasant nature. It would seem to indicate that, for some reason or other, Mr. Beatty fears radical thought and would guide the student away from such dangers back to the golden days of infantile collegianism.

The Historical Background

To the person who has any pretensions to being educated in the true sense of the word, a knowledge of history is indispensable. History is perhaps the most important of all studies; one can attain a perspective on current events and the life of the times only through a knowledge of the great civilizations of the past.

The least that one would expect of a graduate of the University of Toronto is a complete, if not highly specialized knowledge of world history. Surely after approximately ten years of history courses in high school, high school, and university, he must have some idea of what went on in the world before he came into it. Yet it is a strange phenomenon of our educational system that a student may graduate from the Pass Course of the University of Toronto with only the most fragmentary information about one of the greatest periods of European History—the Middle Ages.

Let us consider briefly the courses in history which the average student covers during his high school and university career. In high school, matriculation requirements compel him as is only right and patriotic, to study the history of his own country first.

Next, he is subjected to a course in ancient history, covering a period from the Minoan Empire to the Principate of Augustus. For his Upper School to the French Revolution in the Modern History matriculation, he leaps forward a mere 1,700 years. He gets into the University with only the vaguest knowledge of the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, and the Reformation.

He is, as we have said, an average student; therefore he does not enrol in an Honour course but selects the humbler Pass Course. If he wishes, he can take the Modern History lectures, which may fill up the gap in his historical landscape. On looking up the course in the Calendar, he finds that it covers European history from 1400 to the present day; but the most diligent search through the Calendar will fail to unearth any course of Pass lectures which deals with the period of the Middle Ages, the Crusades, and the Holy Roman Empire. He may perhaps get a smattering of information from the English and Religious Knowledge classes, but he has no opportunity for systematic study of this 1000-year period.

Surely there must be some reason for such an omission. Is it that the history of the Middle Ages contains dangerous and demoralizing doctrines, which might be injurious to the student body? Or is the apathetic reaction of the student body to the Middle Ages, "Who gives a damn about them, anyhow?" In any case, we appeal to august powers that govern the creation of new courses to have pity on the poor Pass student, and give him a chance to acquire a consecutive, complete understanding of history.

Torontonensis

Of the many organizations around the campus, the one which we hear the least about is the Torontonensis staff. The Torontonensis, the University of Toronto's official year book, appears each spring, about examination time, unheralded, but nevertheless a welcome souvenir of several successful years spent at college. This book, which is published by the S.A.C., is produced by an undergraduate body which spends countless hours of toil in its preparation and publication.

The only recognition the staff receive is an annual party, a small but nevertheless sincere token of appreciation for their efforts. The banquet was tendered them Tuesday. Before them lies the task of producing the annual year book. We have every reason to believe that their efforts this year will produce a Torontonensis which will be, in every respect, equal to any which has gone before.

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

We have been informed that the Central Y.M.C.A. are this year, owing to the extreme poverty in certain districts of the city, conducting evening classes for boys of school age, free of charge.

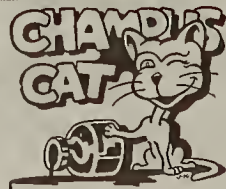

Five nights a week they are giving weekly classes to a hundred boys. They would like several University students to lead small discussion groups.

Here I believe is an opportunity for men to gain valuable experience in leading boys who would otherwise have very little chance of success in life. This is a challenge which deserves the attention of University men, who, because of privileges in higher education, have a definite responsibility to the less fortunate.

Further information can be obtained at the S.C.M. office, Hart House.

Sincerely Yours,

Norman McKenzie,
Social Service Convenor, S.C.M.

Social note.

On Friday afternoon at 5 p.m., Mr. Lou Marsh held a Monster Pep Rally in Examination Hall, among those absent being Mr. Lou Marsh, the Varsity Blue Team and 98.3 per cent of the student body of the University of Toronto. Among the one hundred and fifty friends who gathered for this delightful function were thirty members of the Varsity band, seven reporters, two policemen, Hugh McLaren and Ross Workman—who went because they had to. Any time was tea time, and Mr. J. Pluvius poured.

The bulk of the audience consisted of students in Medicine and Engineering, who had lectures till five o'clock anyway, and for whom Exam Hall offered the quickest place to run to in the rain. However, the cheer leading department managed to get a Toronto yell in edgewise once or twice while the Epistaxins and Toikeyoikers were catching their breath. The faculty affiliations of at least one member of the Varsity Band soon became clear, and the Med yelling was far superior to that of S.P.S. due to their base drum accompaniment.

The Monster Pep Rally rallied to fever pitch as Hughie McLaren took a look towards the doorway and screamed, "Here comes Warty Stevens and the Big Blue Team!! A great big Toronto for the BIG BLUE TEAM!!" Enthusiasm was intense and as the echoes died away Mr. Stevens was pushed up onto the platform. There was a hush of breathless expectation. "I tried to get some of the boys to come over," apologized the coach, "but they said it was raining too hard."

C-C

All of which was as it should be. The team's job is to play football (which they did rather well on Saturday, or so it seemed to us) and not to attend Monster Pep Rallies. The students' job is to buy season tickets (which over a thousand did in this year of high fees) not to mention rush seats, and to go to the games and enjoy them. And Mr. Lou Marsh's job, we suggest, is to take his pick and shovel and try digging up something for his column at least a little fresher than that old, old chestnut which he last week subjected to further re-roasting—the lamentable lack of the old college spirit at the University of Toronto.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Friday Afternoon Recital

To those of us who are familiar with Handel chiefly in the realm of oratorio, Friday afternoon's musicale in the Hart House Music Room was a delightful revelation. Mr. J. Campbell McInnes was the artist. This recital was divided into two groups, the first presenting songs of Handel and the second those of Purcell. Mr. McInnes has a pleasing dramatic personality and a splendid baritone voice which combine admirably in the type of songs which he selected.

"Droop not Young Lover", "Where'er you walk", and an aria "O Ruddier than the Cherry", were three songs which proved especially pleasing. Mr. McInnes concluded the Handel group with the famous "Largo" (which is an Aria from Handel's opera "Xerxes"). Purcell, Mr. McInnes explained, was an old English musician who composed even before the time of Handel and Bach (who were contemporaries). Much of Purcell's music is strikingly modern in content. "An Evening Hymn" was a very beautifully rendered number and "Lullibero", the concluding number, an especially jolly song. L.V.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Vic Seniors took Nurses into camp 43-14 last Friday evening in the interfaculty basketball series. Vic made thirty-two of their points the first half but were held to eleven points the second half, which should indicate that Nurses steadied down after a weak start. It was their first game of the season and they seem to feel they will do better in their next encounter. Although they do not play six-man defence themselves, they had little difficulty getting through that of Vic, but were unable to score once they got through. Maisie Cowan played a nice game for Vic, making twenty-one of their points.

Tonight St. Hilda's seniors meet Vic juniors at seven o'clock in the O.C.E. gym. This should be a fairly good game. Both teams have already played a game, and have found their basketball feet, so to speak. U.C. freshmen will play their first game when they meet St. Mike's at eight o'clock. The galleries at these games haven't been very large so far. Some of these interfaculty games are worth watching, so why not come out some time?

Several of the colleges have started their badminton season. St. Hilda's are playing at St. Paul's Church, and are allowed to use the courts all day every day except Tuesday afternoon. Elsie Chisholm is looking after affairs, and so far the turnout has been very promising.

Will any student wishing to attend the game in London Saturday next and who intends going by train, please leave their name today in the Students' Administrative Council Office, Hart House.

Owing to the Remembrance Day week-end the railways will not run a low fare excursion to London next Saturday. The Students' Administrative Council will be able to get a lower rate of $2.60 return good until Monday evening, November 11th, providing one hundred tickets are sold.

Get behind the big Blue team next Saturday. Make up a party and go to London for the game. Leave your name at S.A.C. office, Hart House, to-day. Women, Room 82, University College.

SOCCER ELEVEN HOLDS REEMEN TO WIN SERIES

Two-All Tie Leaves Varsity with the Intercollegiate Championship

PRATT SCORES TWICE

Varsity Has Better of Play but Unable to Pass McGill Goalie

Holding a fighting McGill team to a 2-2 tie through twenty minutes of overtime Saturday morning on the front campus, Varsity won the 1935 soccer title by virtue of having scored one more point than their opponents against Queen's. Varsity defeated the Tricolour 8-1 and the Redmen took a 7-1 decision from the Kingston team.

At half time McGill led 2-1 and it looked as though the Blues were going to fail to take advantage of the scoring chances they were missing so consistently. But with seven minutes left of play Pratt drove a kick past the McGill goal-keeper to tie the score and from then until the over-time session ended, Varsity pressed hard with a defensive offensive to hold the title-defenders in check. Pratt bulged the goal nets for both Varsity scores on assists from McPherson while Thatcher scored both goals for McGill on solo efforts, one from a corner kick. For college soccer it was a good game all the way with the better of the play in Varsity's favour but their inability to beat Pengeley in the McGill goal kept the score down.

Jimmy McPherson, Ron Jack and Pratt were outstanding for the new champions, while Thatcher, Owen, Lowe and Nolan performed best for the 1934 titleholders.

Varsity: Goal, Dyke; fullbacks, Bowman, Jackson; halves, Cushing, Sully, Weir; forwards, Rawlinson, Pratt, McPherson, Thompson, Woods; subs, Sims, Slaph.

McGill: Goal, Pengeley; fullbacks, Lang, Hannickin; halves, Minnion, Owen, Horsall; forwards, Archer, Thatcher, Cassace, Nolan, Lowe; subs, Smart and Laxton.

INTERMEDIATE BLUES WIN FROM WESTERN

quarter near their thirty yard line and Varsity recovered. "Paddy" Tafts lost no time in garnering three points for his Alma Mater by hoisting a placement over the Purple and White cross-bar.

The big feature of the second stanza was Bill Mustard's sensational dash from Varsity territory to Western's 35 yard line, from which point of vantage the Toronto boys tried a punt which didn't quite make the one-point grade. Western's attempts to crash the Blue line were futile and after receiving Western's kick, the Blue and White team marched the ball down to the eight yard line only to have a forward pass "go haywire". With only a few minutes before half time, Varsity hit their stride and on a nice play featuring splendid team work scored a touch which was unconverted. Score at half time, Varsity 8, Western 0.

Tafts got another placement in the third session which ended the scoring for the day.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By John T. Stubbs

20,000 fans can't be wrong. That crowd voiced approval and occasionally disapproval, but for two hours the biggest gathering of sport fans in Canada since the Queen's game here in 1930 were whooping it up at the greatest grid fixture of the current season. A great team was led to a hard-earned victory by Captain Bobby Coulter and came through three points to the good. Those three points are just about indicative of the difference between the Stevens and Reeve teams. The extra punch (figuratively speaking) that Varsity possessed put them in the driver's seat in the last quarter and there they stayed until the final whistle when they were preparing to snaffle another point from Queen's 26 yard line. For awhile when the Tricolour staged their great comeback just before and after half time, the Reememen looked good enough to take Varsity's measure. But Queen's errors and costly penalties stimulated by a desire to hit harder than is permissible in the eyes of Barton, Bartlett and Co., turned the tide and the local machine took advantage. This time the breaks were in Varsity's favour. Perfect weather favoured the desire of the fans to see the Four Flying Horsemen turn it on. And that they did. Many a Queen's supporter was heard to wail "If we only had a Coulter or a Connelly!" But don't forget Johnny Munro and Harry Sonshine are tops at kicking half and flying wing in the college loop this year.

Teddy Reeve handed an appreciative crowd a surprise when his team began right from the starting gun to play a wide open fast offensive brand of football. It caught Varsity off balance at their own game for about eight minutes of play, and fortunately for the Stevens squad, resulted in one single point. It came close to being three points from drop kicks twice in those first few minutes of play. But there it ended until nearly half time.

The greatest play of Saturday's game was the same play that got the call as the highlight of the two McGill-Varsity games. It came like a bolt out of the "Blue". That's just what it was. It was that completed pass for a touch, Marks-to-Connelly. The play was called from the same spot to the same place on the field as on the other two occasions when it has accomplished the apparently impossible. No more consistently-great play has been executed by any team in the country this year. It makes the opposing secondary defence feel helpless. And then any tertiary or safety man would have a hard time stopping Connelly once he gets in the clear anyway.

Just recall to mind the following highlights of play and you'll remember seeing some great football: Holden's leap to complete Varsity's second forward pass and pave the way for the second major score; the defensive play of Harry Sonshine and Turney Williams; Coulter and Connelly running back Munro's hoists for gains of 24, 25, 31, 20, 23 and 22 yards; the blocking and tackling on the line of scrimmage by Zvonkin, Witzel, Greco, I. Edwards and Burke; Bobby Webber's plunge for a touch that just made it and that's all, with three Tricolour tacklers all over him; the broken field running of Munro and Sonshine and the Queen's forward passes that practically all clicked in behind Varsity's secondary defence; and finally Johnny Edwards' dash down the sideline in the first quarter for a 30-yard gain.

Readers of the "Pick and Shovel" column in the Toronto Daily Star will probably see today where Lou Marsh heard that colossal half-time yell over in Hamilton. The fans that sat near the Press Box probably saw the red that flushed "Red" Burnett's face when the co-eds presented him with Lou Marsh's white lily. Unperturbed by being made the centre of attention as Lou's understudy, the corpulent Star reporter went right on nonchalantly increasing circulation.

Next week's McGill-Queen's game in Kingston will decide whether or not there will be an intercollegiate play-off. Right now McGill trails Queen's by one point in the league standing. If McGill reverses their effectiveness from that of Saturday against Western when the Western "hardy-hardy" spirit upset the Redmen, and defeats the Tricolour, there will be no post-schedule battle but on the dope it looks like a repetition of Saturday's great display two weeks hence. Should there be a playoff game don't do what some over-enthusiastic Varsity supporters did last week when they offered 5 to 1 odds to all Kingston takers. The 1935 title isn't resting in Hart House yet but if the Blue team's fighting spirit is still in evidence it's a good 3 to 2 wager for the title. Stay in there behind a great team, Varsity!

Today's enthusiasm on the U. of T. campus has been erased for most of us whose privilege it has been to know the late Mr. D. M. Barton, Gymnasium and Physical Training Director of the University. His passing on Saturday evening at his Toronto home removes from the athletic staff one of its best-loved members. Mr. Barton's kindly humour and ever-helping hand to all whom he met will be sadly missed. One of Canada's great athletes in his days of active competition, he was widely known and respected as a fine sportsman. In his position here he was an ardent enthusiast of all sports and as a coach he successfully imparted his knowledge to U. of T. athletes for many years.

Varsity Ruggerites Victorious For Third Successive Year

Climbing their third straight title by taking McGill 15-6 at the Stadium last Saturday, Varsity rugger team kept unbroken a string of victories that began in 1933. The Redmen, however, will go home with the consolation of being the only college team to score against Varsity in the last three years.

In the first half Varsity had an edge on the play with the forwards forcing McGill deep into their own territory. Gardner opened the scoring on a plunge around the short side of the line. McGill rallied to drive the local boys back to their own quarter. Romans tried a drop kick but Coughlin blocked it to halt the McGill offensive. A Varsity attack failed when Young dropped the ball after crossing the Red line. However Stothard scored a few minutes later from a scrimmage near the goal line to put the Blue team 6 points up.

The second half began with a determined McGill attack that reached Varsity's twenty yard line. A running kick by the fullback relieved pressure. Led by Elliott and Magner the Blue forwards carried the ball up the field to score when Prouse grabbed an on-side kick behind the Redmen's goal. Again McGill took the ball into Varsity's half. On a penalty kick against the Blues, Foote dropped a goal from 35 yards out to give McGill three of their points.

Play then seasawed up the field until Kyle started an extension that sent Egan over for Varsity's fifth touchdown. The Red backs retaliated with an aerial attack that ended when one of the defenders fumbled near the line and Romans dived over for McGill's only touchdown.

BROTHERTON CUP WON BY O.A.C.

Kibblewhite Wins Individual Championship; Forrest Second

RECORD SMASHED

The annual interfaculty harrier was won handsily by Bill Kibblewhite of Wycliffe College in record time Saturday morning at the High Park course. The entrance of O.A.C., however, ruined the hopes of Wycliffe again carrying off the Brotherton Cup, token of team supremacy.

Kibblewhite, Forrest, Crichton, Burton and Huether will represent the University of Toronto at the intercollegiate meet over the same course next Saturday.

The record set by Bill Hoag of S.P.S. last year of 23 minutes, 25 secs., was beaten by 10 secs. over a longer course of 5 miles, 110 yards. Kibblewhite, setting a snappy pace from the first, was never in danger and finished quite fresh. Dave Crichton of S.P.S. playing the part of the dark horse, worked his way up to third place. Running even with Forrest for one mile and a half he dropped back, then forced a sprint at the finish to almost nab Forrest but the Victoria man had enough to take the second berth. The Guelph agriculturists sent their second team to cop the cup which Kibblewhite and Huether tried hard to retain for Wycliffe where it has remained for several seasons.

STUDENT ACTIVITIES ARE HELD IN CHECK

"University students," said Miss Jessie MacPherson, Dean of Women at Victoria College, "are considered mature enough to be responsible for their own studies."

According to Father Sullivan, Dean of Men at St. Michael's College, such a step would not be in the Varsity tradition. "If students do not learn to shoulder responsibilities here," he said, "the University has failed."

A survey of the fraternities on the campus reveals the fact that a certain academic standing is required of the members of both men's and women's fraternities. The practice among men's fraternities is, in general, to have a committee composed of seniors or graduates whose duty it is to check up on the hours of study and the general progress of the junior members.

In the women's fraternities the standard is kept up by the Pan-Hellenic League which offers a cup at the end of each year to the fraternity with the highest academic average. Each fraternity sets its own quota of study hours per week. In this manner fraternities do not act as drawbacks to their members but instead aid them with their studies.

yards from scrimmage, on the running back of kicks, incurring only 30 yards of penalties to 115 yards for the Tricolour and maintaining a better average on forward passes, completing two out of five for a gain of 83 yards as compared to Queen's 5 completed passes out of a total of 12 which netted them 97 yards. Gray averaged 44 yards to 43 for Munro (figures are calculated from where the ball was kicked to where it was caught or picked up). The Blues had difficulty holding on to the oval and committed no less than six fumbles.

Halfway through the initial period Barnabe scored the opening counter on an attempted drop kick which went wide for a single after Edwards had carried the ball 30 yards to Varsity's 14 yard line. It was Barnabe's second unsuccessful bid for three points in the first 8 minutes, a Krug to Kirkland putting them in a scoring position minutes earlier.

Three minutes later the Four Horsemen combined to give the Blues a 5-point lead. First Coulter gained 20 yards after taking Munro's kick while a roughing penalty on the tackle took the ball to midfield. Marks then threw a 48-yard pass to Connelly, who galloped over for a touchdown amid the cheering of 16,000 hysterical fans (Queen's supporters remained silent). Gray converted.

The second quarter saw 14 more points chalked up on the score board. Queen's secured a single in the first two minutes of play, making the count Varsity 6, Queen's 2. Coulter again started Varsity on the touchdown route when he carried the oval 18 yards on Munro's kick to midfield. Holden made a beautiful leaping catch of a 35-yard forward by Marks and Varsity had possession 7 yards out. Connelly skidded past the Tricolour tanks for 6 and Webster plunged the remaining yard for a touchdown. Gray's trained extremity converted.

Zvonkin picked up a fumble on the first play after the kickoff and took play to Varsity's 16-yard line but a penalty set them back to the 26-yard line. Barnabe's attempted drop went for a single. After an exchange of kicks Weir blocked a Varsity kick and Barnabe secured the loose ball. A Barnabe to Munro forward pass sent the stellar kicking Tricolour half romp over for a major which Barnabe converted. Varsity 12, Queen's 9.

After the rest period the Reevites continued their offensive and were rewarded when Edwards took Gray's kick, passed to Munro, who reversed the field and raced 40 yards, then passed to Kirkland who added 12 before he was brought down on Varsity's 3 by a hard tackle by "Slash" Oakley. Krug smashed his way over the Blue line and Barnabe converted. Queen's 15, in each but in no one to the exclusion of the others; (b) the holder should have attainments and qualities as much like the late John Copp as possible; (c) the holder should be a good student although it is to be distinctly understood that the bursary is not merely for scholastic attainments and that the other qualities listed in this clause are essential.

The trust deed executed provides for a committee to decide upon the candidate to be awarded the bursary. It is to consist of two representatives from the Faculty of Medicine, one in active contact with the students, one in athletic activity, one member at large, and must include either Dr. Copp or his son. Upon the recommendation of the Bursary Committee, the Board of Governors has appointed to this office Dr. Stanley Robinson as chairman; Professor W. E. Galley; J. B. Bickerteth; T. A. Reid; Dr. C. J. Copp and F. R. Hume.

youth rather than for character, save in the last act. His present cast believes to be the best he has ever had. But he said, "You might add this quotation from Charles Lamb (and never quote from Lamb, but always Charles Lamb—I don't know why), 'The Lear of Shakespeare cannot be acted.' I don't know it is most difficult, tragedy is most difficult of all, perhaps, to act. But it is also most worthwhile."

Varsity 12. Trailing 3 points the Blues regained the whiphand and after 3 plays and a 15-yard Tricolour penalty Gray lifted the ball between the uprights to tie the score at 15-15. A break put Varsity in front when Gray's kick hit Dennis on the leg and bounced into Valerieote's hands to give the Blues possession on Queen's 40. Gray booted a single.

In the last quarter Gray added two more singles to give Varsity a three-point lead which they never relinquished.

The only serious injury received was when Weir sustained a broken wrist in the second quarter after tackling Valerieote.

Varsity: Valerieote, Connelly, Marks, Gray, Coulter, A. Williams, Wirtzel, T. Williams, Greco, Oakley, Holden, Burke; alternates, Buck, I. Edwards, Lynch, B. Gray, Webster, McLachlan, Luntz.

Queen's: Sonshine, Munro, Krug, Edwards, Stollery, Barker, Peck, Weir, Zvonkin, Kirkland, Wing, Earle; alternates, Dennis, Thompson, McNichol, Bews, Dafoe, Barnabe, Lewis, Scott.

Let's Go Places

In case you think the Tri Delta weren't trying, we're telling you they certainly pulled a square deal at the scrip dance on Saturday night.

The quota was two hundred couples, but there still seemed to be plenty of room for the crowd to strut their stuff in the King Eddy's Crystal Ballroom.

Maybe it was something to do with the liting cadences of Mueller's orchestra, or just the genius these fraternity girls have for making a party go. Anyway it went with a swing that looked all right to us.

We're glad that earthquake wasn't the last trump. Maybe there's news value in the day of judgment, but it would have been an awful pity to miss that dance for a halo and a damp cloud.

More Class Parties.

With the lofty stone pillars of Barwash Hall glowing a fiery red under a battery of floodlights, the hellish atmosphere of the 378 Victoria "Hades Hop" was rendered effectively impressive, but by no means oppressive. But you'll have to pardon us for skipping over such details as the additional decorations, the food, and Charlie Sissons' highland humour, commendable as they all were, to go into our usual rave about Margaret Davies, Victoria has seen her in various dramatic presentations, but never with such hilarious enjoyment as in Friday evening's floor show. Miss Davies, billed as the last of the torch singers, offered a satirical song and dance turn, with a repeat chorus featuring rather startling character impressions of Mae West, Greta Garbo and Zasu Pitts, all in the torch singing role.

president, told The Varsity. In other years the club has led the singing at the service before the Tower and it has been rumoured that it would withdraw its support this year in favour of the other service. Mr. Pridle was emphatic in his denial of the rumour, saying that it had reached his ears, but was entirely without foundation.

No definite information was available from the committee appointed by the S.C.M. to draw up the schedule for the Hart House Theatre service, beyond the fact that the program will be entirely in the hands of the undergraduates, and will lay particular stress on peace.

afternoon concerts by the Toronto Symphony Orchestra under the brilliant direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan.

These concerts will include many of the best known symphonic works and will feature Canadian guest artists exclusively. The price of admission has been cut to rock-bottom to enable the general public to hear good music, and the student body of the University may be assured that these concerts will most certainly be worthy of their patronage.

The well-known and talented Toronto pianist, Mr. Ernest Seitz, will be the guest artist for the opening concert, the program of which is as follows:

1. Prelude to "The Mastersingers" Wagner
2. Concerto in B flat minor Tschaiowsky
3. Symphony No. 5 Beethoven

Hart House Theatre

On Friday and Saturday evenings at Hart House Theatre, Jane Mallett and Frederic Manning, assisted by Frances Adaskin, presented the "Town Tonics". This pot-pourri of clever dramatic sketches has been very popular in the past and the fare provided in the new program was equally good.

Jane Mallett's work, as usual, was outstanding and at times superb. In the monologues entitled "Three gardenias and a little tin soldier" and "The Wall-flower" her characterizations, technique and emotional depth left nothing to be desired.

Frederic Manning was excellent in his rendition of one of Cole Porter's songs entitled "Thank you so much Missus Lowsborough Goody". Some of his other efforts, notably his interpretation of "Hands Across the Table", were weak.

The sketches in which both these artists took part were very good on the average but suffered from monotony of level and lack of dramatic punch in places. One of the best was that entitled "Came the Dawn".

One of the highlights of the evening was "The Prima Donna" in which Frances Adaskin gave a screamingly funny interpretation of a prima donna, complete with fan, and Frederic Manning provided equally amusing accompaniment on the piano.

The performance in general was a very commendable piece of entertainment and just fell short of the perfection which we presume these clever artists will attain in time.

RUSSIA DISCUSSED AT AVUKAH MEETING

Prominent Speakers Address Club on Palestine and Germany

NEW CHAPTER SUGGESTED

"Nazi persecution is expected to cause a half a million to flee from Germany," stated Dr. Mark Zimmerman at the Avukah Society last night at the Women's Union, "according to James Macdonald, High Commissioner for refugees in Germany." Dr. Zimmerman went on to show the position of Jews in Germany, who are now being forced to sell their businesses at whatever price the buyers wish. Even Mozart does not escape criticism at the hands of the Nazis, on the grounds that the composer was an Aryan.

At the meeting also was Rabbi Sachs, recently returned from the Zionist Convention at Cannes, who spoke of the nationalistic spirit of Russia as compared to that of Palestine. "It is to Palestine," the speaker declared, "that we have to turn for the true conception of the nationalistic spirit as she is defined." (Continued on Page 4)

Reporting Staff Plan Big Event

Varsity Staff's First Party Promises Usual Fun to Participants

The party which all members of The Varsity have looked forward to for so long has finally been fully arranged. The results of the draw will be posted today. Everybody is asked to show that they are aware of the draw by an O.K. on the new list.

The party is to be held Wednesday night from nine to one at "The Hostess" on Bay Street. Craig Lindsay and his Canadian Ambassadors will be the purveyors of melodic harmony. Many former members of the staff will be present to round out a very Varsity good time.

NURSES PLAN SERIES ON CURRENT EVENTS FOR YEAR'S PROGRAM

A series of lectures on current events was planned for the coming year's program at a meeting last night of the School of Nursing, under the presidency of Miss Jean Leask. This year the Nurses, directed by Miss Lillice Read, athletic representative of the school, are waxing enthusiastic about basketball, swimming and badminton. After the business meeting, they waxed even more enthusiastic over the games and refreshments which had been prepared by the freshies.

New Rosedale Busses Are Passengerless

Route is Extension of Usual Rosedale Service to Bloor

SERVICE AN EXPERIMENT

The Wellesley-Rosedale bus route, started on November 1 by the T.T.C., has proven a great convenience for students living in Rosedale. The route is an extension of the usual Rosedale service to Bloor and Sherbourne, and runs down Sherbourne Street to Wellesley Street, and then along Wellesley Queen's Park Crescent, Hoskin and Harbord Streets to the corner of Harbord and Spadina.

As yet the line has not had the patronage it deserves, according to one college official who has a clear view of Hoskin Ave. "Buses have been going past with one, two or three people in them," he said. "But it is to be expected that after the service is better known the volume of passengers will increase."

The service is an experiment, and will be maintained only as long as the traffic warrants. The service is from 6.30 a.m. to 6.30 p.m. with buses as frequent as necessitated by the number of passengers. At present an eight minute service is offered.

ARTS PICTURES FOR CIRCULATION

Two Collections in Public Library Include Books and Periodicals

FINE ARTS COLLECTION

Although the circulating of pictures is comparatively new in Toronto we have two collections, one at Boys' and Girls' House and one at the College Street Branch of the Public Library. Collections, including reproductions of the old masters and pictures of costumes and nature and of history circulate on the regular library card just as books do. Any number of pictures may be taken. These collections are almost self-sustaining. The material is derived from the resources of the library and is prepared for mounting in the department itself. A limited number of reproductions, industrial paintings, and works of French, Dutch, German and Czech painters are being bought. There are also a number of books and art periodicals in the collection.

The branch at College St. includes the J. Ross Robertson historical collection, left it by the late J. Ross Robertson, former editor of the Telegram. For students in Fine Arts courses a collection of pictures for reference work will be available soon in the Fine Arts Seminar.

Professors at Minnesota State University have been receiving threatening letters for alleged anti-Nazi utterances.

ACTA VICTORIANA MAKES APPEARANCE IN MODERN STYLE

Greater Pre-occupation with Intellectual Matters for Own Sake

CONTENT PROPORTIONED

Layout Resembles that Used by Last Year's Undergraduate

One's first impression of the latest Acta Victoriana is of a magazine very well-proportioned as to size and content, and rather artistically done; although the cover design is perhaps a little bare, more on the style of a substantial volume than of a monthly journal. The type is fine-looking and is spaced for a reading pleasure. The titles and illustration follow the modern compact style, resembling, for instance, the layout used by U.C.'s Undergraduate of last year, including the detachable style of fastening on the front-piece illustration.

The editorial policy "that a desiderata are a less urgent demand for a uniform collective consciousness in the college and a greater pre-occupation with intellectual matters for their own sake" is driven home by the concluding paragraphs of the opening article, "Fanfare and Mutes," by K. H. Coburn. The bulk of the article, however, is devoted to the contrary theme; namely, an exhortation to an increased consciousness. (Continued on Page 4)

Student Symphony Plans Concert

The University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of John J. Weinzwieg, III, year Faculty of Music, has already begun rehearsals for the concert which will be presented towards the end of February. This year's turnout is larger than last year's; the only flaw is a scarcity of bass instruments.

The aims of the orchestra are threefold: to provide a symphony for the University, to develop the musical talent of student players, and to encourage a taste for orchestral and symphonic music among the student body.

Last year the organization was in its pioneer stage. It succeeded in filling Hart House Theatre to capacity, and in gaining the commendation of such notables as Sir William Mulock and President Cuddy, although it had had only eleven hours' rehearsal. This year, better organized and sponsored by the S.A.C., the Symphonic Orchestra promises to become an important feature of University life.

COURT INFLUENCED FURNITURE DESIGN

Miss Ruth Home Discusses Louis XIV Furniture in Museum Lecture

Miss Ruth Home, in the second of her Museum lectures on Interior Decoration, dealt with the type of furniture known as Louis XIV. "This name," she explained, "is merely a trade name applied to a particular style, and does not refer to furniture dated specifically during his reign. Nevertheless the ideas of 'Divine Right' and the court as the centre of the country's style and fashion which were held by the famous French monarch influenced the trend of furniture design and other art. Thus the idea of variety predominant in Italian Baroque furniture was changed to one of great similarity, all styles tending to be perfectly symmetrical and otherwise worthy of the glory of the king."

Gilson Lecture

A series of lectures on "Modern Thought—its Sources and Tendencies" is being given by Professor Etienne Gilson and Professor Brett in West Hall on Tuesday afternoons beginning today. Professor Gilson, director of the Medieval Institutes of Paris and Toronto, is an authority on Cartesian thought and will speak on that subject. He is now a lecturer in Philosophy at St. Michael's College during part of the year.

Gay Evening Offered At 1935 Follies

Three Orchestras, Water Sports and Egyptian Pyramiders Features

MORE ACCOMMODATION

With plans taking form for the 1935 edition of the University College Follies, undergraduates are assured of a unique variety of entertainment. Practically the whole of Hart House will be thrown open to meet the plans of the Follies committee.

Three dance orchestras will keep the hilarious throngs ever on the move throughout the evening. The Hart House pool will be arranged for sitting out accommodation. There will be an interfaculty water polo game here as well as fancy and comedy stunts by well-known provincial divers. Also, the services have been secured of the Egyptian Pyramiders, a trained group of athletes who will display their wares between the haunting strains of rumbas and tangos.

As punch will be available all evening, and supper will be served in the Great Hall, those responsible for the Follies feel assured that all dancers and entertainment-lovers are due for an evening which will set a permanent precedent for campus functions.

LEISURE READING TOPIC OF LECTURE

Noted Columnist to Speak at Inaugural Library Meeting

ADDRESS AT HART HOUSE

Mr. J. V. McAree, noted Canadian columnist, who for almost forty years has conducted "The Fourth Column" in the Mail and Empire, will speak in Hart House Library this evening at 8.15 in the first of this year's Library Nights. His subject will be "My Leisure Reading."

One of the most widely known newspaper men in this country, certainly the most commented upon, Mr. McAree's popularity has reached such a peak that a short time ago he was forced by public demand to do into book form a large number of his columns, which had been printed over many years. That book was entitled "The Fourth Column" and received wide acclaim.

For many years now Mr. McAree has devoted Saturday's column to a review of current detective fiction. His biting criticism of these works, which he claims form a great part of his reading, and the courage required for him to admit that fact, as well as his shrewd analysis of the works of modern writers such as Faulkner, Hemingway and Dos Passos would indicate an interesting evening for students interested in reading for pleasure.

The address is open to all members of Hart House. Contrary to the usual custom, smoking will be permitted.

STUDENTS WARNED OF THE PIT-FALLS IN SOCIAL WORK

Lorne T. Morgan Discusses Social Workers' Place in Society

INDIVIDUAL OVERSTRESSED

Maladjustment Blamed on Lack of Equilibrium in Our Economy

"There is unanimity of opinion among writers on the function of social case work," said Lorne T. Morgan, Professor of Economics, in his address on "The Economic Aspects of Social Work Today," to the Social Science Club yesterday afternoon, "and they all presuppose a stable and well-functioning society."

As an economist Prof. Morgan stated that society is not in equilibrium, and in a short sketch of the Business Cycle showed how our economy passes from a depression period of unemployment and restlessness to a pick-up in business, then a boom period of high employment and rampant speculation, on to another crisis and crash, and depression once again.

Unemployment is as characteristic as the business cycle. It also is permanent and growing. Under such an economy, maladjustments are made quicker than they can be cured, and social work is doomed.

It is "psychological determinism" to adopt as a premise for social work that "each client inhabits his own problems". It places too much stress on adjustment of the individual and what has happened within him. For how can you free an individual from something over which he has no control—an environment of business cycles and unemployment?

Such social work over-emphasizes the psychology of the "misfits", and can only end in defeatism, conscious or unconscious. It is merely dodging the real social issues.

But social work is absolutely essential today. It will be essential under any situation. However, it will be much more successful if individual cases are related to the total social reality. If it is understood that social forces are at the base of much of this social ills it gives a social worker a clear perspective.

C.C.F. CLUB BEGINS SERIES OF MEETINGS

Social Planning to be Basis for Study and Discussion

"The meeting in Wymwood tomorrow evening will be the first of a series designed to familiarize University C.C.F. members with the contents of Social Planning for Canada, the new L.S.R. publication," stated Gordon Jack, president of the University C.C.F. Club in an interview with The Varsity yesterday.

"It is the intention of the club this year to base its general program upon a study of this book. We plan to have one of the authors present at each of these meetings to lead discussion and answer questions on particular sections of the text. Graham Spry, editor of The New Commonwealth and co-author of the book will discuss the election and the chapters directly on social planning at tomorrow's meeting."

The club plans to bring prominent socialist speakers to the University this year for meetings which will be open to the University public.

Armistice Day Not a Holiday

November eleventh falling on a Monday this year has been a great temptation to those who desire many holidays. No doubt in the eyes of some people a long week-end next week would compensate for the loss of Thanksgiving week-end this year. But by no means everybody favours the declaration of a public holiday on Armistice Day.

The Caput is to be commended for its decision not to grant a University holiday. Armistice Day, or, as it has been more latterly known, Remembrance Day, was instituted that the world might not too soon forget the Great War. The two minute silence in the midst of a busy day makes an impression that not even the most forgetful nor the most heedless might escape. This two minute silence becomes, by contrast, most significant when it means the shutting down of the wheels of industry, the cessation of all action and conversation.

A full-day holiday detracts from that significance. A holiday for most people is a day of pleasure and in the midst of pleasure how easily could eleven o'clock pass unnoticed, unremembered. It is hard enough for the generation which has grown up since the war to keep in mind the sacrifice and the horror that it was. Armistice Day can only be truly a Remembrance Day if it is marked by services of remembrance. The granting of a thirty-five minute respite from lectures will induce far more students to attend the service at the Soldiers' Tower than any full-day holiday. No serious-minded student will regret the loss of a week-end, we have our full share of holidays anyway, this is our opportunity to show our respect for those who died in the service of their country.

Tennis Courts A Necessity

The suggestion has been made before that the University should provide its members with tennis courts, but since no action has ever issued therefrom we deem it not out of place to discuss the subject once again.

Whatever value they attach to athletics as against other student activities, most people would agree that within the field of sports, the proper objective is the participation of the major part of the student body as active contestants in clean, healthful games. Rugby and hockey are excellent sports for the few who have the time to give to the extended and rigorous practices required for team play. But the present situation in these sports is one in which two dozen gladiators give combat in a big bowl, while twenty thousand roaring spectators shout their approval or disgust. Tennis, on the other hand, is a game in which all may participate, regardless of grade, age, faculty, or sex. It requires no extended training or elaborate equipment. Just let the enthusiast get a racket and another player and he is set for a healthful and exhilarating afternoon—if he can find a court.

There is the problem. No courts are provided by the university authorities except for those fortunates who attend Trinity, Wycliffe or Victoria. Surely some of the funds which the University spends on athletics could be diverted into the tennis channel. We hazard the guess that the number of students actively engaged in outdoor sports as a result of such a step would increase twofold. The point was brought home rather forcibly this year to participants in the U.C. tournament. Out-of-town players especially, had nowhere to practice before the tournament was held, unless at Victoria and Trinity.

There are several suitable spots around U.C. and elsewhere on the campus that could be used for the purpose. The exact location is not so important as the fact that there is undoubtedly enough interest in the University at large to make some such plan feasible. If steps were taken now to form an organization to promote the project it is possible that something might be done along this line when next spring rolls around.

Trees Facing Extermination?

Annually, about this time, the trees which line city streets are in particular danger of condemnation because their leaves form a source of repeated work. But this is only one of several pieces of evidence checked up against city trees. In fact, it may be only a matter of a short time until streets will be treeless. For economic reasons, trees are condemned. Only their beauty saves them. And we are well aware that sentimental barriers cannot withstand the onslaught of economic pressure.

The majority of people are indifferent to the question. A few tree-lovers work, or overwork, to have them spared. Leading the opposition are the men in charge of public works. It is easy to see their viewpoint. Any man who has had to dig where there are tree roots cannot be expected to find a warm spot in his heart for a tree. In addition to impeding work, they clog drains and heave sections of sidewalk to meet one's toe. The branches, too, cause no end of trouble among overhead wires. Yes, trees in a town are a nuisance which must be removed. That is the verdict.

In the meantime, ours is certainly a "prairie town". Rather, tree conservation is pursued to a fault. To prove this, just look at some of the things that are left standing. Since a tree is spared only for its beauty, if it becomes necessary to disfigure it, why not cut it down? Why not remove the thing completely instead of retaining most of the disadvantages plus a veritable Totem Pole?

It is unnecessary to have a forest in a town, (or, possibly it should be, a town in a forest). But it is desirable to retain a few trees whose natural beauty is unmarred.

Speeding Up Studying

It is the little things that count.

For instance, let us consider the matter of borrowing books from the main library. To take out a book the student must sign in order, author, title, name, year, course, city address and date regularly and faithfully for each separate volume, with the addition, of course, of the stack filing number. In our humble opinion this procedure is unnecessarily complicated.

Victoria College has a very simple and time-saving method of tabulating names of borrowers, by a letter and number system denoting the initial letter, the year and the place of the student upon a list. What has been done in the smaller sphere can be adapted for use with slight changes. We may add that the student's directory will obviate the strain and worry upon the library staff of collecting a list, for a numbered list can be produced from the directory without much trouble and kept on the librarian's desk.

It may be argued that he filling up of book slips is but a matter of moments. That is true, and insofar we are prepared to admit that our picture is open to the criticism of exaggeration. But these little things mount up, and student time is valuable. In any event time would be saved and if that object is attained, we have not wasted time in writing this article.

In spare moments, a Cornell professor compiled the following data on what college students do with their time:

1. Senior men spend 55 hours per week sleeping.
2. Women devote four more hours per week to personal appearance than do the men.
3. Senior men are more studious and they spend nine and one-half hours at the dining table per week. (Evidently this does not include breakfasting and luncheon.)
4. Freshmen write home on the average of two and one-half hours a week. Women consume nine hours and thirty minutes each week for entertainment.

At least, the students' spare time is more profitably spent than is that of the professor who figured out this information.

Ding doug bell!
Mary's in the well!!!
Who'll come 'n pull her out?
Mr. Underhill!!!

Miss Mary Dingman, noted authority on World Peace, arrived in town some three weeks ago and nobody's had a peaceful moment since. Miss Dingman announced on her arrival that she had attended meetings in Toronto three times previously, and had enjoyed them very much. That's just fine, Miss D., we're glad you like our meetings.

Certainly they've been a lot livelier since Mary's back in town. She is making a twenty-five stop tour of Canada but in this village she's been using all twenty-five stops full out most of the time. Miss Dingman has addressed the Women's Canadian Club, the W.U.A., the Mohawk Hotel Owner's Association, and the University Chess Club. To one of them the committee in charge invited Professor Underhill of the History Department, thinking that these radicals probably like to get together. Mr. Underhill got to his feet and began, "Here in Canada . . . political backwater . . . social planning . . ." But before he could get any farther Mary was throwing her arms about for all the world like our own Nancy Peyer, and demanded, "But have you anything constructive to offer?"

Upon which the Professor subsided, obviously more concerned whether the Dingman flailing technique had anything destructive to offer.

Mary, Mary, visionary,
How do your meetings grow?
"My gestures and dippings in newspaper clippings—
They keep me on the go!"

And certainly congratulations are in order for Miss Dingman. It took her to shove the sausage bar off the front page.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

The U.C. Players' Guild

The play "The House with the Twisted Windows", by Mary Packington, that is to be produced at the U.C. Players' Guild tomorrow, is one which affords the actors concerned many opportunities to display their ability. It is being directed by Anita Gaessler and Douglas Hicks, who are both in their first year at U.C., this being their first attempt at producing. The cast is as follows: James Roper, Murray Paulin; Charles Clive, Harry Tattersall; Lady Ponting, Joan Renaud; Heather Sorrell, Helen McEwan; Anne Sorrell, Polly Shaw; Derrick Moore, Douglas Hicks; Stepan, Albert Fyfe.

The well-known and well-loved "Blossom Time" is brought back to Toronto this week by the Messrs. Schubert.

The beauty of Sigmund Romberg's arrangement of the music of Franz Schubert is unfortunately lessened by the lack of good singing voices in the cast. The score itself has been composed with loving reverence from the melodies that flowed from the pen of the Viennese composer. The story of "Blossom Time" is Schubert's own romance and the setting of the opera-etta is the Vienna that he knew.

J. Charles Gilbert, in the role of Schubert, gives a fine performance. His voice, although not outstanding, is yet pleasing. He rises to splendid heights of acting at the end of Act II when Schubert finds that Mitzi loves, not him, but his friend, Baron von Schober. This is by far the best and most powerful scene of the whole performance.

Baron von Schober is creditably portrayed by George Trabert, opposite Helen Arnold's pretty and appealing Mitzi. It is regrettable that Messrs. Schubert's company does not include any good feminine singers. The music of the opera-etta, "Sing of Love" and "Only our love fills my heart", depends entirely for its beauty on the harmonious blending of voices.

Let's Go Places

Hollywood Theatre

It would appear that to be educated as a princess has its advantages even though the present Duchess of Kent could only get a job as a saleslady. But royalty must prove its ability to work in these depressing times, so the Princess Natasha, half sister to the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia and related to most of the nobs of Europe, but just Natalie Paley to the cinema going pee-pul, became an actress. And, with the aid of Lelong, Charles Boyer and a charming blonde gentleman, she made L'Esperier an interesting film for every femme from debutante to dowager.

The film was a good old fashioned drammer. A Hungarian count plays the millionaire on what he wins at cards. Trouble develops when his wife's lover catches him cheating. The count sees red—runs home to Budapest for his favourite pistol but at the critical moment shoots himself instead. Boyer as the poverty-stricken count just out of the hospital, is ludicrous—his suit has shrunk, he has lost his gloves and has developed one of those little T.B. coughs that play havoc with a woman's heart strings. His wife discovers that she still loves him however and the blonde third angle can only gnash his teeth (a beautiful set incidentally) as they run off together.

Costumes were by Lelong—and they proved to be quite cute little numbers for sports and the ultra of chic in stunning evening dresses. The princess is perfect as an enigma—her face can express nothing even more powerfully than Garbo's but she can wear clothes.

SAVE THE VALUABLE POKER HANDS

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

WHY NOT MAKE YOUR OWN MASQUERADE COSTUME?

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

St. Mike's and St. Hilda's Seniors are now leading their respective groups since both teams have chalked up two wins. St. Mike's defeated the U.C. Freshies last night 34-29, and the score indicates how close the game was. The advantage swung from one side to the other, and the score was tied often. St. Mike's sprang a surprise when they appeared in new, lighter than navy blue tunics, with pale blue shirts. So far as we know, they're the only team who play in tunics, though we haven't seen Occupational Therapy yet. To get back to basketball, Sunny McLaughlin starred for St. Mike's, and Mary Glass for U.C. Freshies, but Alice Elshout and Vinetta Burke also did noble work.

The other game of the evening also had a tied score at half-time, five-all, but St. Hilda's Seniors snarled up in the second half to defeat Victoria Juniors 23-7. They seemed to come out of their lethargy, and Edie Ardagh ran in some fast shots quick like a flash-light. She made a beautiful shot from way out that didn't even touch the backboard. Muriel Beaton was the star of the Vic team and played a beautiful game. She certainly can pivot and dodge. The St. Hilda's guard held fast, and Vic scored only one basket in the second half.

The baseball schedule is now out. There are to be three teams, one St. Mike's, one Vic, and one a medley, composed of girls from all the colleges. Greia Maxwell, Jean Blundell, and Molly Christie are three of the girls on this last team. Vic and St. Mike's will play an exhibition game Thursday at five o'clock in Vic gym and then the season will open in earnest next Tuesday, when the same teams will play again. There will be six games in all, which will be played either in the Vic gym or the O.C.E. gym. There seems to be more enthusiasm for the sport this year, and the games should be very interesting. Allison Watt of Vic is making most of the arrangements.

SLASHING FEATURES LACROSSE GAME

Pharmacy overwhelmed Trinity 14-4 in a well played lacrosse fixture in Hart House yesterday afternoon. The game was featured by the usual amount of slashing, jabbing, butting and cross-checking but was without any evidence of fisticuffs or hard feeling on the part of either team, and only one penalty resulted.

Bergin of Pharmacy, ex-Fergus flash, was the best player on the floor, scoring 7 goals and drawing down the only penalty of the game for his aggressive play. Pharmacy scored early and often in each of the 4 periods but the outstanding play of Martin, Trinity goalkeeper, prevented a complete rout.

Burchell with 3 goals also stood out for Trinity, while Landon, Pronger and Blackmore, Pharmacy goaler, were the pick of Pharmacy's close checking squad.

Trinity: Burchell, McCreary, Grant, Martini, Bosley, Cox, Howitt, Botterel, Foord, Millyard.

Pharmacy: Blackmore, Bergin, Jackson, Pronger, Ellinghausen, MacIntyre, Berkan, Langdon.

FAUX AND OURAM HOLO DOUBLES TITLE IN VIC PLAY-OFFS

Ernie Ouram yesterday made a successful defense of his Victoria College tennis title when he defeated Carl Husser in the annual tournament on the Victoria courts. Ouram was extended to the limit to beat Husser, the match going to five sets, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3, 1-6, 6-3.

In the doubles tournament Ouram and Faux, winners of last year's title, duplicated the performance by defeating Charlie and Henry Sissons, 7-5, 6-2, 6-4.

JUNIOR MEDS GAIN UNDISPUTED LEAD IN RUGBY CIRCUIT

Issue Settled by Smashing Victory Over Trinity Players

SCORE 12-0

Clinkett and McKone Star in Hard-Fought Game

The powerful Junior Meds rugby machine gained undisputed possession of the "top" in the junior circuit by virtue of their smashing 12-0 victory over Trinity yesterday afternoon. Despite the whitewashing administered by the Rosso-coached squad, the game was hard fought throughout and more evenly contested than the score would indicate.

With the opening whistle Trinity kicked off to Meds and the young doctors diagnosed the situation and immediately set to work. With Clinkett and McKone doing most of the ball-toting, on a completed forward from Clinkett to Wright, they advanced the leather deep into Trinity territory. After a series of plunges and end runs, McKone culminated this march down the field, going over for the Meds' first score, Clinkett converting to make the score 6-0.

In the second and third quarters the Keith-men showed intervals of threatening play but in each case they lacked that final drive that determines the victor in any kind of competition.

A pass from Clinkett to McGoe netted the second major for the Junior Meds early in the last quarter. The attempted convert was blocked. A powerful boot off the educated toe of Clinkett accounted for the other tally—a rouge.

Junior Meds: McCullough, Clinkett, McKone, Flemming, McGoe, Allen, Broadhead, Jamison, Graham, Miller, Wright, Belton; subs, Bean, Barron, Lindsay, Cravenn, Mahood, Moore, Marchand.

Trinity: E. D. Fraser, A'Court, Adams, Tucker, Owen, Ruddock, Bennett, Osler, Hamilton, Lash, Stratton, MacMillan, Ambrose; subs, Morgan, Termouth, Grand, C. L. Fraser, Finlay.

S.P.S. JUNIORS DEFEAT FORESTRY

Fumbles Prove Costly—As Game Ends in Rain and Semi-Darkness

SCORE 11-1

Jr. School handed the Forestry gridgers a 11-1 setback on the Trinity field yesterday afternoon. Both teams were handicapped by the bad weather and darkness, and as a result fumbles were fairly frequent. School tried a passing and plunging attack that gave them two touches in the last minutes of the second quarter when Shaw and Ballagh carried the pigskin over on a couple of nice plays.

As it became a question of groping and hoping instead of playing football, with a decent brand of the game impossible due to the semi-darkness and steady downpour of wetness, the officials agreed to shorten the last two periods to five minutes each. Forestry avoided a shut-out in the dying moments of the struggle when Dishier hoofed a single.

School: Gorman, Galloway, Shaw, Ballagh, Dishier, McLeod, Henry, Otter, Hogg, Fox, Warner, Burgess, Chambers, Forester, Little, Curry and Meall.

Forestry: Sexsmith, Ballantyne, Barron, Lien, Dargavel, Grenell, Hyslop, Bayley, McCann, Bickerstaff, Larson, Cowan, Chalk, Reynolds.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George Vair

Hockey is definitely here for the season and from now until around examination time we will be hearing of the many deeds and misdeeds executed by the blade artists. Under the excellent tutelage of Irvin "Ace" Bailey, the puck chasers will take to the ice within the next day or so and continue practice until the senior O.H.A. group opens. It has been definitely decided that Varsity will remain in the same group as in previous years, that is, playing against Hamilton, Toronto Dukes, Oakville and Port Colborne. The students will play a double schedule (approximately 16 games) while the other clubs will play a triple schedule. The rink owners must be protected!

This season the new Varsity mentor will have more than his full share of troubles rounding out a student squad of the same calibre as contending senior teams due to the departure of at least seven of last year's men. However, despite the fact that the Blue and White are starting at the bottom of the ladder we are confident that they will be in their fighting hard every minute they are on the ice and are looking forward to many a good battle at the Blue Arena this winter.

Dents, last year's Mulock Cup finalists came through with a last quarter offensive to remain at the top of their group by a 7-1 victory over Sr. Meds. Trailing 1-0 going into the final stanza the College Street gridgers scored a touch when Bruce Squires fell on a loose ball behind the Meds' line. The losers were without the services of Slemen but Caldwell filled in at kicking half and outbooted A'Court.

Yesterday afternoon we wandered into the big gym to look over the lacrosse game between Pharmacy and Trinity. Take a top from us, Pharmacy have a powerful squad and have a real chance to annex the trophy for the first time. In their opening game they counted 14 goals to 4 for the Red and Black men of Hoskin Avenue. Berger, late of Fergus Thistles, a topnotch senior club in the O.L.A., is a standout on the druggists' team and a sure-fire member of a university lacrosse team should the athletic directorate decide to form a club and take on the Rochester Indians again this year. He scored 7 goals yesterday.

At least Western were not whitewashed this season. The Storen coached students finally came through with a win after dropping their first four starts. The fact that McGill dropped Saturday's game doesn't look any too well for their chances to put Queen's back in third place and out of the play-offs this week-end. The Reeves will give everything they have to get another crack at Varsity so it looks like the play-off will be here in two weeks. Approximately 17,400 fans paid to see Saturday's game. Can we beat it on Nov. 16?

Varsity seconds have their hardest game of the season this coming week-end when they take on the fast improving Aggies. Varsity needs a win to keep in the running. On Saturday the Aggies lost a hard fought battle to McMaster 32-26 and according to reports the losers looked mighty good even in defeat. They scored 18 points in one quarter.

Some day a certain New York sports writer who writes for one of the Toronto dailies will be amazed to find he has called a winner. He came close last Saturday when he called Ohio State to beat Notre Dame and went so far as to guess the score as 20-13. With fifteen minutes of play left the Buck-eyes (Ohio State) were leading 13-0 but just so our friend Henry couldn't be right the Irish went out and tallied 18 points to win 18-13 and thus keep our friend's guessing average nil.

MASQUERADE TICKETS OBTAINABLE THURSDAY

Everything on Large Scale for This Year's Frolic

Increased sitting-out facilities, larger dancing space and Romanelli's large orchestra are among the many attractions being prepared for the Hart House Masquerade to take place on Friday, November 15th, W. R. Cowan, assistant controller of Hart House, stated yesterday.

The House Committee, who are in charge of arrangements, have practically completed the plans and are experiencing a very gratifying advance demand for tickets. The tickets will be turned over to faculty and college representatives on Thursday, November 7th. Members of Hart House should find out from these representatives what arrangements for distribution will be set up in their particular part of the University.

Asked what arrangements were being made for the regulation of traffic, Mr. Cowan stated that complete details in this regard, together with data giving the time at which each dance will begin, will be disclosed within a few days.

VIC JUNIORS LOSE TO SENIOR SAINTS

Score in Second Game of Series 21-7, Five-All in First Half

St. Hilda's senior basketball team won the second game in their series last night, when they downed Victoria Juniors by a score of 21-7. In the opening half, the Scarlet and Gold team did some close checking, holding the Saints to a five-all score.

During the second half of the game, St. Hilda's settled down and Edie Ardagh and Marg McDonald managed to pile up a fairly substantial lead. Muriel Beaton, on the Vic forward line, also put in some good work for the losing squad.

St. Hilda's: Edith Ardagh (12), Isobel Wallbridge, Marg McDonald (7), Ellen Wilson (2), Kay Grubbe, Mary Dignam, Helen Bernam, Kay Mayes, Jock Whiteside.

Vic Juniors: Muriel Beaton (6), Mildred Sedgewick, Amy Schaffner, Kay Wallace (1), Eleanor McIntosh, Marjorie Beaton, Alice Bassnet, Ruth McKay, Jean Francis, Gladys Kepper.

ST. MIKE'S DEFEAT U.C. FRESHETTES

Better Team-Play Accounts for Win in Close Game

SCORE 32-29

Last night in the O.C.E. gym St. Mike's and U.C. Freshies had an exciting battle in a very close basketball game. St. Mike's had a slight edge on the Freshies throughout and their better team play helped them score the few extra points to win. The game was very fast and the ball was carried up and down the court, both teams keeping even during the first half to end the score 18-all.

St. Mike's got away in the third quarter with Sunny McLaughlin mounting up the score to give them a lead which they were able to keep in spite of nice shooting by Alice Elshout and Mary Glass, stars for U.C.

Both teams were very good and right to the end it seemed as though St. Mike's might not be able to hold their advantage. Vinetta Burke and Sunny McLaughlin starred for St. Mike's on the forward line, and the guards for both teams played good games.

St. Mike's: Sunny McLaughlin 18, etta Burke 10, Naomi Hallinan, Marg Flahiff, Mary Gallagher, Mary Hutch-Jerry Ryan 2, Mary McCarthy 2, Vin-ion, Chris Kennedy.

U.C. Freshies: Alice Elshout 11, Marg Glass 14, Dorella McKellar 2, Marg Nagler 2, Bunty Lang, Jean McKenzie, Jocelyn RCA, Kitty Guest, Kay Robertson.

DENTS DEFEAT TRINITY IN SOCCER FIXTURE

Peggy, Trinity Goal, Played a Sensational Game Despite Rain

The Dents vs Trinity soccer game played on the front campus yesterday evening ended in darkness and rain with Dents leading 3-0.

Stapleton opened up the scoring 5 minutes after play had begun when he captured a loose ball from a scramble and kicked it neatly across the goal mouth. Stapleton scored again a few minutes later in almost an identical play.

In the second half Dents scored again but the game was called by Referee Self, leaving Trinity no chance to catch up. Peggy, in Trinity goal, was sensational.

ACTA VICTORIANA MAKES APPEARANCE

of college spirit and college associations.

There is a soberly written analysis (despite its title "The Triumph of Twistedness") by Gordon Jack of the results of the Dominion elections; and anyone who is interested in learning the C.C.F. point of view on the issue could do worse than glance through it. This theme is clinched with a short note by R.A.H. who gives an explanation of Victoria's relative radicalism of the late straw vote. The following extract represents the point of view: "There is no intelligence so basic and fundamental as the horse-sense and democratic instincts of the non-privileged but educated person".

Reverting to the cultural, an article by H. N. Frye attempts to show that the opera is "entertainment closer in spirit to the circus than to creative art". Opera should be conventionalized, he contends, and the conventionalized lends itself to comedy—or pathos—rather than to tragedy. Whether Wagner escaped the difficulty he is not certain; but he assures us that the German music-dramatist did his work so thoroughly and individualistically that opera has been on the decline ever since.

There is no attempt at creative fiction or poetry, except for Francis Russell's a frolicsome "Song" à la Thomas Gray. Three very short short stories are included, much shorter than any in Liberty; but they fulfil their purpose as anecdotes.

The feature section is signified by the closer spacing of lines, which shows plainly the value of ample spacing as an assistance to appearance and legibility. Included therein are accounts of (relatively) current literary, social and athletic functions at Victoria; a critique of Virginia Woolf, novelist; a balanced estimate of Midsummer Night's Dream; and a department in praise of folly.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

The buffoonery of Robert Lee Allen, as Mitz's sweet, provides the comedy. Marjorie Sweet does fairly well in the role of Bella Brana, the jealous prima donna.

On the whole the production is disappointing. We still hopefully wait for a good performance of "Blossom Time".

Merle Oberon as Kitty is cast in a role quite different from that of her previous parts, but is just as alluring as ever. This picture places her right up at the top, if she wasn't there before. Herbert Marshall as Gerald is slightly miscast as older roles are better suited for him. He does, however, play his part superbly and arouses some pity as the losing corner of this three-cornered love affair.

Boyer suffered from a superfluity of makeup at times which did not help the tenseness of his important scenes. The comedian, however, filled our hearts with joy; it's great fun to laugh at an Englishman speaking French and the pleasure of recognizing an accent as foreign is boundless. The film, on the whole, was fine entertainment—oh sure, it was spicy in spots.

D.H.C.

Madison Theatre

Chapayev, now at the Madison Theatre, may be straight propaganda, but we can take it. The idea of the film is to show the world that Russia knows something about acting, photography and producing; the story chosen is an incident from recent Russian history with a real hero and a dash of love to help it down.

A carpenter, Chapayev, is engaged in guerrilla warfare in the south. Realizing his abilities at headquarters a Commissar is sent to help him. Chapayev proves to be a most human and lovable leader and our sympathies are carefully kept with him to the end.

Needless to say, everything Red is heroic. The Reds are always lacking in munitions and men for which deficit Chapayev must supply courage; the Whites have always good soldiers and horses and prosperous looking staff rooms and barracks.

The drawing card is the cast of fine looking men who play the leads. And there are choruses in the incidental music that rival the Don Cosacks. For those of us who have neglected our Russian the distributors have kindly supplied English subtitles but at those moments when the Russians of the audience were laughing most uproariously there was nothing printed for us. There is plenty of humour though and pathos, too—in fact, the film has all the earmarks of a 4-star production and whether or not you are interested in the U.S.S.R. it should be a must.

D.H.C.

Here at last has come to the screen a really gripping love drama as exemplified in "The Dark Angel", showing this week at Loew's theatre. The picture is in some respects a modern version of the old novel "Jane Eyre" but is handled so excellently that one hardly senses the fact.

Frederic March as Alan gives a masterful portrayal of the young man who has vowed to marry his childhood sweetheart Kitty Kane while home on leave from the war. However, a hurried call informs him that all leaves are cancelled and he is forced to go back immediately. After things have quieted down on the front he applies for leave again, but his cousin Gerald, who also loves Kitty, in a fit of jealousy refuses to give it to him. Alan is reported dead but in reality has been blinded. He becomes an author of children's stories under the name of Roger Crane. He will not go back to Kitty because he realizes the burden he will be to her. Many times their paths almost cross and finally on the eve of her wedding to Gerald they are brought together. Here Gerald atones for his past misdeeds by urging her to go to him and care for him.

Merle Oberon as Kitty is cast in a role quite different from that of her previous parts, but is just as alluring as ever. This picture places her right up at the top, if she wasn't there before. Herbert Marshall as Gerald is slightly miscast as older roles are better suited for him. He does, however, play his part superbly and arouses some pity as the losing corner of this three-cornered love affair.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Washington—Seven Democrats lost their seats to Republicans in the New York State elections held yesterday, giving control of the Assembly back to the Republicans, who regard the victory as an indication of the end of the New Deal.

Addis Ababa—The Italian advance on Makale has been temporarily halted because of the sudden heavy rains and the fear of an Ethiopian trap in the hills near Makale which appeared deserted.

Rome—Food prices have risen considerably as a result of the League sanctions. A serious shortage of meat is threatening the country and "meatless Tuesdays" have been inaugurated.

London—A hastily summoned cabinet meeting was held today in order to consider proposals by Mussolini to the effect that he would recall more Italian soldiers from Libya in return for a recall of British warships in the Mediterranean. Cession of Italian press and radio attacks on Britain were among the counter proposals made by Sir Eric Drummond it is claimed.

London—The Duke of Gloucester, third son of King George and Queen Mary of England will be married this morning at 11.30 (London time) to Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott at Buckingham Palace. Many members of European royalty will be present at the ceremony.

Toronto—A mentally-unbalanced pervert is being sought today by the police as being responsible for the death of 20-year-old Ruth Taylor, stenographer, who was attacked and criminally assaulted by an unknown assailant. The victim, badly battered about head and shoulders, was found yesterday in a ravine near Coxwell and Gerrard. A reward will be offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the attack, it was announced last night.

When Ken Woodsworth, head of the Student Peace Movement at the University, was asked whether that organization would stage a demonstration on the campus on Armistice Day, he replied that it would not. The S.P.M. will, however, take part in a parade of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom from the Metropolitan Church on Monday. This, however, will not prevent it from participating with the S.C.M. in the annual service in Hart House.

There will be a demonstration in the United States under the direction of the Student Vigilance Committee on Armistice Day. This organization is more widespread than the S.P.M., and embodies, to some extent, the National Student League, National Council of Methodist Youth, and the Student Y.M. and Y.W.C.A.

In Canada, McGill will hold a peace conference on the 9th and 10th of November, the Western S.C.M. also on the 9th and 10th, and at Queen's there will be an anti-war meeting on the 11th.

Gymnasium Mentor

AIOEO HANDICAPPED YOUTH

The funeral of the late Mr. Donald M. Barton, gymnasium and physical training director of the University, was held yesterday afternoon at the F. W. Matthews funeral chapel, Spadina Ave. President Rev. Canon Cody gave the funeral address, speaking feelingly of the loss sustained by the University in the death of Mr. Barton.

For the past sixteen years Mr. Barton has been the chief gymnasium instructor of the University. Prior to his coming to Toronto Mr. Barton was associated with Hamilton Y.M.C.A. and in his younger days was known as one of Canada's great athletes. Although an expert instructor in all phases of gymnasium work, Mr. Barton was chiefly noted for his ability in all types of corrective exercises, and has been able to help many youths who are physically handicapped.

Interment took place at Mt. Pleasant cemetery. Members of the staff closely associated with him acted as pallbearers; these were Messrs. W. H. Martin, J. E. McCutcheon, W. W. Winterburn, Warren Stevens, T. A. Reed and Charles Walters.

It is easy to say that Descartes is merely a copy of Montaigne," continued Professor Gilson, "but actually, although it is impossible to conceive of a Descartes without first a Montaigne yet (Continued on Page 4)

HUMANIST MOVEMENT COMBATS GROSSNESS, SAYS PROF. BROWN

"Humanism is the modern reaction against both nineteenth century romanticism and materialism," declared Principal W. T. Brown of Victoria College, addressing the Philosophical Club last night in the Women's Union. In presenting the concepts of humanism to the club for critical discussion Dr. Brown explained that the humanist creed placed the main emphasis on the true "spirit of the lady and gentleman" in restoring classical culture. Classical culture suffered when the naturalistic wave swept the world with its placing of men on animal levels.

This wave produced a coarsening effect on the literature of the day. The humanist movement aims to combat this grossness in contemporary literature by raising literary standards. The cultured gentlemanly man of letters is essential to civilization, contend the humanists.

Students of Victoria College had their opportunity to express opinions on the Varsity, monthly magazine, yesterday, when a Varsity reporter, picking them at random asked them to express themselves on the subject. While the girls seemed to be more reluctant about committing themselves than the boys, they had very much more to say when they finally began to talk. All comments were frank and criticism was of the constructive type.

First of the Victorianists to be questioned was Donald McClean. Although Mr. McClean has been out of school for the past seven years and cannot compare the present Varsity with former editions, he is of the opinion that it is an excellent magazine, refreshingly written and contains many really sound ideas. Bill White, of the freshman class, did not entirely agree. Many of the ideas in the magazine, particularly those (Continued on Page 4)

Varsity Reporters at Java Joint With Chocolate Their Lips Aoint

Frankie and Johnny—two waiters not lovers—sped lither and yon in the narrow confines of the Campus Java Joint last night and between trips solemnly muttered that college men and women were developing an amazing penchant for chelsea buns and piping cups of hot chocolate.

Two reporters, mooching around the campus near the midnight hour, sit themselves down in the Java joint and tries to find out just what undergrads tastes run to these days anyway.

"Breakfasts to the Varsity boys just consists of a couple pieces of toast and a slice or two of bacon," Frankie indicated as he mopped up the counter. Last evening in the S.C.M. library in Hart House, Professor Dale of the Department of Classics of University College, spoke to an S.C.M. group, his subject being the Bible as Literature. He pointed out that many people fail to understand the Bible because when they first begin studying it they do not regard it essentially as being literature and ceremonial decrees, laws and genealogy baffle them. The division of the Bible into chapters and verses for purposes of reference is a barrier to literary enjoyment, and in the English (Continued on Page 3)

DETECTIVE FICTION 'ESCAPE FROM LIFE'

Greatest Sleuth Stories Have Slightly Unreal Atmosphere,
Considers J. V. McAree

CONAN DOYLE ACHIEVED IT

The essential quality of the detective story is that it shall engage the intellect without touching the emotions of the reader, Mr. J. V. McAree, eminent Canadian columnist, told his listeners last night at the first of this season's "Library Nights". It must have none of the soul-wracking qualities of Hardy's Tess. "In life we are wracked and tortured. Detective fiction is an escape from that."

The successful writer, he said, is the one who can make his characters convincingly real, yet stop short of making their private history of interest to the reader. He drew attention to H. G. Wells' criticism of Sherlock Holmes, that no one could image his falling either in love or downstairs, and said that fact was one reason for the greatness of Doyle's work.

Conan Doyle was the writer who made the reading of detective stories respectable, was Mr. McAree's opinion, pointing out that one of the great (Continued on Page 3)

"Travellers carry too much in their hands and too little in their heads," was the remark made by Howard B. MacDonald, F.R.G.S., in his illustrated lecture at Eaton's Auditorium last night. Introducing his lecture with a short review of the various civilizations of the Mediterranean basin, from that of Egypt down to the Black Shirts of our own day, Mr. MacDonald then took his audience on a detailed and striking tour around the historical sites of the Mediterranean.

Proceeding to the Holy Land the magnificent Y.M.C.A. building was shown, recently built outside the walls of Jerusalem, a building which in its symbolic architecture represents the three principles on which the Y.M.C.A. was founded, the physical, intellectual and spiritual elements.

Has the clergy a place in the next war? "Yes," says Mr. Raymond Booth "I think there is a place for those clergy who would sanction the next war—in the front line trenches!" Mr. Booth is well known as an exponent of pacifism, and is a member of the Society of Friends. At the third of a series of lectures the Students' Christian Movement is sponsoring, he made a stirring address in Hart House Theatre yesterday afternoon.

His subject was Christian Pacifism, and he treated it purely from an idealistic and Christian point of view. He opened his address with a definition of pacifism as meaning the manufacture of peace. The early church, Mr. Booth said, was a pacifist church until the reign of Constantine, and from that time on the church sanctioned wars, and even instigated them. Criticize Members'
Writings

An opportunity to appraise the recent work of their fellow-members was given to all who attended the work meeting of the University Women's Press Club held in the Women's Union yesterday afternoon. Following the club's usual procedure, the contributions were read without the name of the author being divulged. Most of the contributors proved to be devotees of the poetic muse, a notable feature being the wide diversity of subjects tackled, ranging from an Ode to a Flapping Curtain, to a dissertation on the fickleness of women. Only two prose stories were read, one being a charming children's story, and the other a short, short story on the cheerful topic of suicide. After each contribution had been read, it was subjected to criticism by the other members of the club, such points as its artistic merit and saleability being discussed.

A Suggestion For Footballers

Mr. J. P. Fitzgerald, sports editor of the Evening Telegram, writing in yesterday's paper, gave voice to a situation which has for some time been in need of a remedy. The situation concerned football players, who having starred as undergraduates on the intercollegiate football team, pass beyond the gates of the college, into the world and return as strangers, with no further consideration given to them.

About this time of year many of the football players begin to wonder just what they are getting out of the efforts they are expending on behalf of the University. Certainly their efforts are far in excess of anything requisite for the purpose of keeping in physical condition. For several weeks they turn out daily, endure inconveniences of every kind—and get little for it except the publicity they receive through the press. Publicity is in many cases, particularly to men entering a profession, a very desirable thing. But the tonic effect it produces ceases to function long before the injuries they receive have ceased to be troublesome. In the final analysis, all the players receive for their efforts and bruises which has made their University famous and incidentally contributed in no small way to the support of the remainder of the athletic activities around the University is a letter and, if they happen to be on the first team on graduation, the sweater which they have worn during the season.

Last Saturday some 20,000 people saw Varsity beat Queen's. And the University was benefited to the extent of the funds contributed by that 20,000 customers. But at least two players, who a very few years ago, played on the Varsity team, and helped in their individual ways to attract similar crowds were unable to buy admittance to the grounds to watch the game. This situation does not display any great abundance of gratitude.

The suggestion has been made, and it appears to be a good one, that the graduating players be issued life passes. On the face of it, issuing life passes to all football players, would appear to be quite an undertaking. But how many of the players remain in the city, or near enough to their alma mater to be able to attend the games? Obviously the percentage is very small. The greater number of players make only the occasional visit to the city to see the games. It would thus appear to be only a small token of gratitude to allow the former players free admission to the grounds. A small section of seats, temporary or permanent, could be reserved for them. Such a section would not cause any great drain on the University funds and a section for ex-Varsity football players would add an element of impressive colour to the proceedings. It would also give the players who had thrilled previous crowds, and given their best for their University in a game which makes great demands on men, something tangible and permanent for their efforts—a token of gratitude and appreciation which would be renewed with welcome every time they happened to be able to attend a game at the scene of their former triumphs.

Today's history lesson. Oxford University officials once forbade the installation of baths in dormitories because students attended the school only eight months each year.—Southern California Trojan.

News versus Editorials

Within the sacred precincts of their editorial pages editors of newspapers throughout the world daily give voice to their pet peeves and prejudices. Not infrequently, also, they use their pages for more worthy causes. Toronto, for instance, is singularly fortunate in that the editors of its daily newspapers are keen students of world affairs and present in their editorial columns thoroughly sound analyses of the domestic and international situation. During the past few weeks editorial writers in The Varsity have been criticizing the news sections of our downtown papers and have shown that circulation-catching headlines often lead to exaggeration and misinformation, but with regard to the editorial content of these papers, we find no serious fault.

The Star's recent expression of indignation at The Varsity's claim that very often the newspaper through catering to demands of the public for news rather than facts encourages ignorance of what is going on in the world, is therefore quite out of order. But the Star must be aware that the news columns are more widely read than the editorials, and are correspondingly more influential. The readers of editorials may be the most intelligent part of the reading public but a small proportion they are nevertheless. The wrong impressions, the gross exaggerations, the misleading quotations found in the widely read news sections of our daily papers cannot be easily glossed over, and their undesirable and anti-social effects cannot be easily minimized by pointing with pride to the little-read editorial sections. This no one, not even the editors of the downtown newspapers, can deny.

Are We Fooled Again?

Barnum, the circus baron, made millions by assuming that the public like to be fooled. Professor Davis of Harvard has probably found out that it is not a short cut to popularity to be the individual who takes it upon himself to enlighten the public to the fact that they have been fooled.

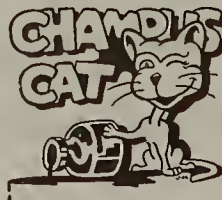

For several years we have been accustomed to roam at random about the Royal Ontario Museum at periodic intervals and admire the work and creations of the race of men who lived long before the machines began to perfect the work which man began. Now it seems Professor Davis is informing us that we have probably been fooled, regarding some of the things which our archaeologists have believed to be genuine. While his charges affect only isolated objects in a large museum, the effect is slightly discouraging. For we have no way of finding out whether he is right or wrong in his assertions.

For some years it has been public knowledge that modern factories are working overtime to produce antique furniture, complete with worm holes and dust of centuries, suits of armour which medieval knights wore into battle, punctured and damaged by fierce combat of our warlike ancestors and covered with the rust necessitated by their age are produced by the factories at the rate which the demand necessitates. The public found this type of ornament immensely attractive because of the element of romance it produced and because of the fact that few if any guests would ever turn up and convincingly refute the romantic stories which the ornaments conveyed. The public had no way of knowing the truth of the matter and were little concerned with it. They liked to be fooled.

Now it appears there is the possibility that this form of deception has found its way into the museums—the one place where it was believed that the genuine article was displayed. The public which is interested in such things cannot possibly hope to discover the truth of the things themselves. How can they if even the men who make a life study of such things are deceived. In this controversy we can only look on and wonder. Professor Davis may be right in his charge. He may also be wrong but aware of the fact that the public, despite their habit of visiting museums and looking wise, are in no way capable of judging the truth or error of his charges.

Life's idea of something hard used to be a palsied neurotic with a hangover calling the fire department on a dial telephone. To our mind this is equalled by the night watchman in the tin can factory reading a detective story during the earthquake.

Goodness sakes, what will these college students do next? An edict issued recently at the University of Toledo decreed that "There must be no walking around the campus in the nude."—Southern California Trojan.

PEN POINTS

Anyone who loves to keep his finger on the pulse of a living world must be tremendously concerned about the question of prison reform. There has been little or nothing accomplished since the Great Reform Bill of 1932, which changed the regulation prison garb from white stripes on a black background to black stripes on a white background. Today we find our prisons in a wretched condition. Let me take you on a visit of one of our penitentiaries.

On entering the gates we notice the inscription, "Let your joy be unconfined,—nothing else will!" We find the warden in his office, and it is immediately apparent that here we have a man of metal. His father was a copper. The warden offers to show us about his establishment, and leads the way to the quadrangle.

C-C

The warden relates interesting things about the various prisoners. This fellow in the striped suit we are just passing, won a cup for staying under water the longest. He jumped into the jail swimming pool without remembering to remove his ball and chain.

Over there on our right by the rock pile, a group of the boys are breaking rocks in stony silence. The chap over there by the machine shop is an interesting character. An absent-minded radio comedian, one night he tried safe-cracking instead of wise-cracking.

C-C

Now the warden takes us down several flights of stairs to a cold, damp, mossy, eerie, dark cellar. This cell is used for solitary confinement.

If you'll excuse me, this is my stop. —Monkey's Paw.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Convocation Hall

Dr. Hcaley Willan opened a new series of organ recitals in Convocation Hall with a brilliant all-Bach program. The recital commenced with "Prelude and Fugue in C Minor" which rose to sublime heights reminiscent of tragedy unadorned with passion but rather expressing simply great sorrow and deep longing. Three Choral Preludes were presented. The first two possessing a beautiful plaintive melody formed a sharp contrast to the third, "Come Holy Ghost, Lord God", which suggested in power a great conflagration.

The "Prelude and Fugue in A Minor" was a gem of sheer joy of poetic beauty in music. Always serene, it depicted the tranquility of nature. A group of four selections followed, including an Aria from the suite in D with its melody of quiet beauty, Adagio from Church Cantata having a religious theme suggestive of devotion and piety, an Air "Be Thou but near", a short prayer-like plea, and concluding with the familiar Choral Prelude "Jesus, Joy of man's desiring", with its pleasing repetition of intricate variations in a melody depicting exalted joy.

The program concluded with the brilliant "Toccata and Fugue in D Minor" which revealed Johann Sebastian Bach as the consummate master of organ composition. Dr. Willan gave it all the characteristic dignity and power. It is amazingly complex making use of every type of organ technique yet always maintaining a perfect balance of expression.

Richard Bonelli sang last night what was essentially an after-dinner program. Confining himself to well known operatic excerpts and numbers whose appeal was in their novelty, this typically operatic baritone loaded through his pipes.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Occupational Therapy will make their first appearance on the basketball floor tonight when they meet St. Hilda's freshies at seven o'clock. Their team is an unknown quantity, and they may spring a few surprises. The St. Hilda's freshies will be playing their second game, and it is hoped that they may be better organized than they were in their first encounter with the U.C. seniors.

The second game between Meds and St. Hilda's seniors will start immediately afterwards. Meds lost their first game to Vic juniors, and the Saints defeated the Vic girls Monday night, so on the surface of things it looks as if the Saints should take the medical outfit, but you never can tell about these games. The spectators at these games are increasing in numbers, and quite a number of Trinity men turned out the other night, resplendent in their red blazers, to cheer on the St. Hilda's team.

Vic are starting their swimming practices this week, and getting their organization under way. The athletic executive are hoping to arrange a scheme whereby the girls will not have to pay all of the four dollar athletic fee, for which they get only swimming and perhaps tap dancing. The Vic, St. Hilda's and St. Mike's girls are booked in some respects, for they have to pay fees to their own college athletic executives, as well as to the University, even though first and second year Vic are the only ones who take P.T. It is to be hoped that some satisfactory arrangement will be made.

ST. MIKE'S DEFEAT SCHOOL DECISIVELY

Schoolmen Play Sloppy Rugby; Irish Keep Play in Opponents' Half

SCORE 13-0

St. Michael's College finally broke into the win column in the intercollegiate football race by defeating St. S.P.S. 13-0 on the back campus yesterday afternoon. In gaining their initial win they did it very decisively, holding the powerful School backfield for short gains. The Tooley Oilers played very sloppy football and couldn't get close to the Irish goal line at any time.

Right from the start St. Mike's started to press. Stumphauer and O'Brien cracked the line for long gains, and completed forwards, T. Sullivan to Stumphauer put the ball on the ten. However, three plunges failed and School gained possession. Gartshore's kick went straight in the air to give St. Mike's possession on the twenty. From here on an attempted placement by Sullivan went for a single.

In the second half S.P.S. were held inside their own twenty-five for most of the stanza. Finan broke up a School end run and went over for a major unblemished. The true toe of Sullivan accounted for the convert.

St. Mike's got close again in the third quarter but an attempted pass on the third down cost them a score. However, in the fourth they denied the S.P.S. line on two successive plunges by Stumphauer, one good for thirty yards. Just near the end of the game this same flashy backfielder made a sixty yard run to put the ball out of danger when School got close.

St. Mike's: Sonberg, Stumphauer, N. Sullivan, O'Brien, T. Sullivan, Peters, Dooley, Carmito, Roberto, Read, Antenbacher, Finan, Cavanaugh, Agaglia, Cunningham, Bitner, and McGivern.

St. S.P.S.: Gooch, Gartshore, McArthur, Ballanyne, Wood, Walker, Press, Wilson, Clarke, Cavanaugh, Phene, Lilley, Schmidt, Sherwood and Thompson.

S.P.S. SOCCERITES DEFEAT WYCLIFFE

Second-Period Scoring Rush Brings Schoolmen into 1st Place Tie

GAME ENDS IN TWILIGHT

S.P.S. soccer team defeated Wycliffe by a score of 4-0 on the front campus yesterday afternoon. By virtue of their win they now share first place in this group with the Wycliffites. Wycliffe, however, have played three games, winning two. S.P.S. have won both their engagements.

For the first few minutes of play Wycliffe had the best of it, Mitchell in the School goal having to make a few good saves. As play progressed S.P.S. seemed to gain in strength and finally scored on a corner kick by Ashenhurst, Kerr netting it. Both teams tried hard but the half ended with no further scores.

The school team started the second half with a rush which resulted in a score by Marks. They kept on the pressure and Self scored when Woods centred nicely. In the closing minutes of the game, and in semi-darkness, S.P.S. scored the final goal of the game on an effort by Woods. Woods kicked the ball which caromed off a Wycliffe man and trickled between the posts.

Woods and Self starred for S.P.S. while Simmonds was outstanding for Wycliffe.

S.P.S.: Mitchell, Powell, Link, Maynard, Tuke, Jackson, Woods, Thompson, Kerr, Self, Ashenhurst, Chute, Mudie, Marks.

Wycliffe: Wenham, Symons, Toone, Fairweather, Wood, Markle, Vance, Abbott, McKibbin, Simmonds, Ruch, Simpson, Blackaller.

Referee: S. Roxborough-Smith.

VIC BEATS KNOX IN SOCCER GAME

Muddy Field Makes Finished Game Difficult; Final Score 3-0

The two representative intercollegiate soccer teams of Victoria and Knox fought a close game on the front campus yesterday with the final score 3-0 in favour of Vic. The field was just muddy enough to make a finished game of soccer difficult but it was interesting despite of, or on account of, this.

The forward line for Vic played well in position thus being ready to receive advantageously any ball passed from back field. Their shots on goal were cleaner and more accurate which might, in part, explain such a proportionately high score in goals to the general play of the team.

Victoria: Dykes, Scott, Cooper, Woodworth, Sim, Simpson, Mezzies, Rutherford, Smill, Campbell, Brown, Subis, Pacey and Macdonald.

Knox: R. Thompson, Weir, Knox, F. Thompson, Evans, Brown, Stewart, Milroy, Young, Johnston.

Referee: Self.

DETECTIVE FICTION "ESCAPE FROM LIFE"

household words of the last thirty years has been his character, Sherlock Holmes. That fact he considered to be evidence of the vast number of people interested in this form of reading.

His own weekly newspaper criticism of current detective fiction Mr. McArree said was the result of the attitude of the Literary Editor of the Mail and Empire in dismissing all such work with the mere notation "Detective Story." Because he considered that many people would like to know the good from the bad, he voluntarily decided to devote part of his column to reviews of it. From the first the interest shown was extensive.

"I am not advising you to read many detective stories," Mr. McArree concluded his remarks. "Save them for your old age." But he did advise that his listeners read just what they want. "Because in later years you will, particularly if you are in journalistic work as I am, have to read what someone else wants."

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crockett

As Warren Stevens takes his Blues over the jumps in preparation for the battle up at London this Saturday one can't help but let one's thoughts drift back to a Saturday evening of last winter when another band of Blue warriors, with a perfect record for their season's labour, were sent out against the wearers of the Purple and White of the University of Western Ontario. Of course we're thinking of Lew Hayman's championship basketball squad. With a perfect record for their season's activities Hayman sent his Blues out on the Hart House floor against Lew Davies' Mustangs in the last game of the intercollegiate basketball schedule. Most of you will remember that the Varsity cagers were handed their lone defeat. We're just wondering whether the same thing will happen on Saturday. The set-up is almost exactly like last year's—with two slight changes, namely that the game will be rugby and that Steve's Blues have a tie against their record. Bill Storen's lads are an up-and-coming bunch and we hope they will not be coming too fast for the Blues to handle on Saturday afternoon. The Mustangs' victory over McGill last week was no fluke and who knows but that once having partaken of the pleasures of success they'll keep right on tasting joy for the remainder of the schedule. However, in spite of everything life rolls merrily along at Blue workouts and nobody in these parts can see anything but a Toronto victory up at London this week-end.

The training plans of Coach Bailey have not worked out as expected due mainly to the fact that when there is no ice there is no hockey. However, Ross Workman promised to have ice put in and the Arena is at Bailey's disposal today. There seems to be no startling information floating around at present as to the make-up of the Varsity hockey squads so we'll all just sit tight and look hopeful. One thing is certain though and that is that the new hockey mentor will start out with practically nothing with which to work and if he is able to accomplish anything during the course of the season he will have taken preliminary steps towards putting the U. of T. back on the hockey map.

Last week we discussed the O.H.A. situation as far as Varsity was concerned and gave our reasons for thinking that it would be a good idea for the Blues to enter the Western group of the O.H.A. senior schedule. Since then the question has been decided and Varsity will again be found displaying its hockey talent in the Eastern division. The officials of the U. of T. Hockey Club advanced some sane reasons for their attitude in the matter and the O.H.A. strung along with them. The Varsity officials maintained that as the U. of T. was the only team among the present squad which had been in the O.H.A. since its inception, and since they had produced world champions at various times, that they had first rights to a position in the best group of the O.H.A. Toronto hockey fans, it was claimed, were very discriminating and would classify the Western division of the senior O.H.A. as an intermediate group despite their senior rating. Attendance would fall off it was maintained due to this conclusion. And so the fight was won. It is now up to Coach Bailey and his hockey machine to prove that the decision of the O.H.A. was a good one.

Keeping step with hockey, basketball is getting some notice these days. The former Big Six will be a vastly different organization this year. McMaster will confine its cage activities to Hamilton floors. The colourful Lizzies have decided not to enter a squad in this year's cage race and former Lizzies are reported catching places on some of the other squads of the league. The departure of these two powerful quintets will rob the Big Six of some of its colour and gate attraction no doubt, but basketball officials promise to provide the necessary replacements to make the league as strong as ever.

was a take-off on the W.U.A., that could have been recognized even without the chorus. "We're the girls' executive, the W.U.A. We run the basketball and things and run them our own way." The "girls" all appeared in their curls, paint and powder, complete with knitting, crocheting, and much giggling. The president smoked a cigar. The skit provided an opportunity for introducing the members, each of whom obliged with a recitation.

The entertainment, however, did not stop there. The next feature was a talking picture, "Who Killed the Cat," but as something had happened to the sound effects, it was reduced to a "silent" and the audience had to use their own imagination for the rest. The film was a thriller in the real sense of the word, full of excitement, with plenty of sound effects from the piano and especially from the audience. There is always someone in any audience with a weird, ghostly laugh, and in this case it came in handy. The picture had everything from ghosts, skeletons, waving walls and moving furniture, to a deaf and dumb dour-faced servant and gorillas; and last but not least a beedootiful heroine. The proceedings were topped off by a Silly Symphony, "The Terrible Toreador"—always a pleasant and acceptable diversion. The men proved themselves efficient hosts in every way. The floor was cleared for dancing in a very short time and a four piece orchestra provided dulcet rhythm. A remark overheard in parting: "It was top-hole" gives an idea of the audience reaction to this effort on the part of the U.C. Lit.

cathedrals there in an attempt to carve out spheres of influence. The opening of the Suez Canal in the 1870's made it especially important for Britain to assert herself in the region. In the scramble for spheres that followed Germany and Austria were left out in the cold. This resulted in the Berlin to Baghdad railway project which was curtailed by Britain and which was a factor leading to the Great War.

After the war the situation was complicated by the Zionist movement and the assertion of Arabian nationality. The attempt to form an Arabian Empire came to nothing, leaving many discontented Arabs and a difficult situation in Palestine which is claimed by both the Arabs and the Jews.

On the subject of Egypt and the Soudan, Dr. Taylor stated, "The fact that Lake Tsana, the gathering basin of the blue Nile, and so important to the irrigation projects in the Soudan, is in Ethiopia, makes England doubly anxious to curb Italy there."

DISCUSSES BIBLE

Bible there are more of the parallels of the original Hebrew poetry. Most people read the Bible a chapter at a time and this detracts from the full understanding that a person would receive if the Bible were read as a book of literature.

Because the Bible is a whole library of books written at different times and for different purposes it is unwise to look upon all sections as of equal importance. Some religious sects would do this, taking written scripture authoritatively and accepting it word for word as being infallible. However, Professor Dale pointed out, in more recent times there is a breaking away from this old idea as people come to regard the Bible as the record of the progressive revelation of God to the Hebrew people, the Old Testament serving as a background leading up to the New Testament. In the Old Testament, God was regarded as being a jealous God, mighty in battle and being for the Israelite against all others, who were regarded as heathen; however, the later prophets such as Jonah, saw that God was the God of all nations.

If we treat the Old Testament as being as important as the New, we do not give the teachings of Christ their proper value since nearly all of the Old Testament leads up to the coming of Christ and after He came He modified and remolded the old ideas held by the Old Testament writers. Many people even today hold to the old Jewish laws and when they try to accept the teaching of the New Testament they fail because they do not regard it in the light of the present day.

written about the initiations and such activities as the tomato fight, were hardly in accordance with his ideas. He also thought there was a lack of humour, in which he was seconded by Jack Lake, Bill Frechette, Harvey Jones and Erna Laing.

Miss Laing also had some comments to make on K. H. Colborn's article, opinions which were also those of Edith Clysdale. Both thought that Friday's class party deflated that article. They pointed to the fact that the class party was successful in every way and Miss Laing emphasized the fact that a party such as that is really the only way to bring members of the class together and allow them to know one another. Miss Clysdale, however, considered the issue to be very much superior to last year's on the whole. What she objected to was, as she put it, that many times, the criticism was, or seemed to be, made solely for the sake of criticizing something. Miss Laing suggested that the entire magazine seemed to be written in the direction of one small clique—the intelligentsia of the school. It seldom, she thought, was a magazine which was voicing opinions of the student body as a whole. She was ably supported in this opinion by Peg Fleming, Ruth Emerson, Miriam McCormack, W. Pacey, Bill Frechette, Bill White and Lloyd Whiting. Many of these thought that certain articles were a deliberate attempt to down school spirit and upset the traditions of freshman initiations and other activities.

There were several, however, who considered the new policy of criticism a splendid one. Dyce Scott, Sheila Brown and Betty Sparling were prominent on this stand. They considered the new issue to be a splendid attempt to get away from "funny paper" humor and high school silliness in a college magazine. The dramatic criticisms, they considered very fine, as did Eleanor Kelly.

Miss Kelly, however, offered a plea that the magazine refrain in future issues from panning traditions. Peg Fleming and Ruth Emerson agreed, Miss Emerson considering the criticisms a silly attempt to be blasé and sophisticated. Both of these girls and several others felt that more fiction would aid the magazine.

Even on the cover were the opinions differing. The Misses McCormack, Brown, Fleming, Kelly and Clysdale thought it modern and striking. The Misses Sparling, Laing and Emerson and several of the boys disagreed and thought it entirely too plain and monotonous. But any of the complainers were outdone by one comely lass, who unfortunately would not reveal her name. She thought the whole magazine was just plain "lousy".

things because the church is no more than the spiritual arm of the state. "All of this I frankly disagree with," said the speaker. "I say that war is not compatible with the Christian religion."

"We realize that unless we resist the oppression of the unscrupulous and brutal, we are liable to be in danger. I have been asked 'What would you do if you saw a brute beating your mother?' Mr. Booth would answer that he would not rush to beat up the brute's grandmother, following the law of retaliation as is the case in war."

Mr. Booth quoted Norman Angell on the futility of ever hoping to win a war, since the supposed benefits are offset by greater disadvantages.

Mr. Booth mentioned Julia Ward Howe's Battle Hymn of the Republic, saying that instead of "let us die to make men free," if she had been honest she would have said "let us kill to make men free."

"Our fundamental difficulties are not in the struggle of good people against bad, but are caused by stupid systems—and that goes for the leaders of government and the Christian church," asserted the speaker in conclusion.

Crabapples Here, Crabapples There,
Which Were Grabbed, and . . . Where?

By James Evans

(This week our precocious cub tried an upstairs court, known as General Sessions, and here presents further fascinating findings on the frenzied discussion of frantically impartial justice. N.B.—If any living person is mentioned in this report it's a miracle.)

Sobbing wildly, Hattie Spintwhittle, 53, hung a bag of ball bearings at Chief Justice Abraham Beard this afternoon in General Concessions court when he pronounced her son Hjalmar guilty of picking and making dirty of crabapples from a tree owned and operated by Tillie Sissabum, young and pretty blond fruit grower.

"You ain't no justice, you're a crooked dimwitted old money!" quavered the weeping silver-haired mother as the Chief Justice ducked to avoid the unusual missile.

The jury, which had been out for three days following a sampling of exhibit A, was wheeled in to give its verdict, which Mrs. Spintwhittle and nine of her sisters, all in court this afternoon in various capacities ranging from three quarts to a gallon and a half, now claim was "not guilty." It was impossible to verify the claim, as the foreman, having spoken the word, or sentence, immediately relapsed into a coma and was wheeled back to the Inebriates' Ward of the Toronto Particular Hospital, from which a special underground tunnel had been built for the purpose, after several years' consideration by the City Council, during which time Defence Counsel Alastair Bipp, K.C., made an impassioned plea of his client's innocence, concluding with a terse summation which is likely to go down in history, according to his mother, Mrs. Evangeline Bipp.

"In short, your Honour," he said,

"there can be no possible vestige of doubt in your Honour's keen well-balanced mind or in that of this estimable body of well-intentioned citizenry that the accused, little more than a boy—29 on his last birthday but two—has been wilfully and wantonly maligning by this designing hussy, who in order to pursue her fiendish machinations, has enmeshed in her toils an innocent youth who had never so much as seen her before the night when, as she inaccurately and viciously alleges, he, to use her own mendacious phrase, 'crept up and plucked her crabapples'—that this ingenious and unsuspecting strippling, in very truth, got no nearer his accuser's crabapples than the trunk, if that far."

Silence greeted the delivery of this incisive appeal, until the speaker, seizing the judicial gavel, roused the court by snatching the bald head of Crown Counsel Cyril Owenberry, K.C., whom, when he protested, he declared "out of order." "That is probably now the case," admitted the crowned attorney.

"You pronounce my son guilty because you cannot pronounce his name!" the indignant mother charged, on seeing her attempt to slay the Chief Justice fail.

"Just call me Elmer," invited the accused, cordially.

Showing signs of what Defence Counsel Bipp termed "irritation," his Honour sentenced Hjalmar Spintwhittle to 98 years on each count, the sentences to run concurrently.

Objection by defence counsel that "no sentence inspired by crabapple cider could run concurrently" was not sustained by the Justice, whose remarks were later expunged from the court record.

Headline in the South Dakota State paper: "Concave, Dinner Planned for High School Presidents." That is the "I" of it. The word should have been concave.

When a professor at a western university asked his class to write a paper on the "Middle Ages", he received one that was a review of "Life Begins at 40."

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

DESCARTES CALLED

ORIGINAL THINKER

Descartes brought his own original thoughts and ideas to philosophy. The sceptics and philosophers had said that nothing could be proved and Descartes said, "Doubting is the highest expression of intelligence." Descartes was not by nature a sceptic, but he was not pleased with the empty wisdom he had learned from Montaigne, but was searching for a positive wisdom. This he found in the very college where he had learned the ideas of Montaigne.

Had Descartes been left to his own private interests, he would probably have spent his time more or less in retreat, in the study of mathematics, as is shown by his treatise on analytical geometry, in which he was very interested. In mathematics everything could be proved conclusively, but in philosophy everything was just the reverse. Descartes' own original contribution to philosophy was his idea that all that could not be proved by mathematics should be rejected until it could be proved, and demonstrated. His meeting in 1619 with Beckmann gave him a new incentive, for Beckmann's ideas were almost identical with his own, and it was after this meeting that he formulated his "Method", for reducing all philosophical problems to a mathematical basis.

Professor Gilson went on to say that for a proper understanding of Descartes we must try to make the same effort that he did to rid ourselves of all unproven doctrines, and we cannot understand unless we see in Descartes a young man who received unexpected illumination from God.

Descartes was a mathematical philosopher on a grand scale, and his treatise on analytical geometry remains one of the outstanding achievements of all time, even apart from his philosophical powers.

her balcony. When the young man decides he has had enough of this platonic monkey business and desires to get down to the matter in hand, or should we say up to the balcony, he may enter the house for inspection. After three such visits (audience, the assembled family), if the pleasure is mutual the young man of necessity must state his intentions. What's more! All the churches have courtyards and on Sundays the girls and boys may assemble there. Now don't get alarmed! The girls walk one way, the boys the other, "making eyes" at each other only. "Almost as good as The Varsity Date Bureau," we agreed with Mr. Woods.

"Are there many opportunities for University graduates in South America?" we asked. "Indeed," responded this tall and genial interviewee, "Colombia is rich in oil and minerals, chiefly lacking transportation facilities. Most University graduates are with the oil companies." Mr. Woods himself was connected with the Standard Oil Company which holds many concessions. "Just now," he added, "several Canadian mining companies are opening there."

business of singing long roles in opera. He has the faults with which all but the very great opera singers are afflicted: lack of precision, appreciation of only the most obvious musical effects and, above all, sloppy diction. Bonelli's concert threw much illumination on the perplexing question of why opera on this continent is artistically and intellectually unsatisfying. There was no accuracy in his voice and no imagination in his interpretation. Resonance and volume in voice are valuable but they cannot transform a mediocre program into a musical treat.

Of his numbers, Debussy's Beau Soir was the best, and best done. The rest of the program was made up of next-best compositions of the near-great, Saint-Saens, Rossini, Grieg, etc. Bonelli did not insult his audience by casting pearls before them. He knew better; he cast imitation pearls. The aria Dank sei dir, Herr (Handel) would have been good had he not sung it first, before he was properly warmed up.

O'Donnell was detained yesterday at 11.30 a.m. at Woodfield Road and Gerard Street, where he is employed, but it was not until nearly midnight that police announced he would appear in police court today to face the formal murder charge.

Chicago: The Rev. William A. (Billy) Sunday, 72, well-known evangelist, died suddenly last night of angina pectoris at the home of a brother-in-law here.

Geneva: League of Nations officials announced jubilantly last night that information had been received indicating Germany will co-operate indirectly in the sanctions program to the extent of preventing abnormal quantities of embargoed materials reaching Italy.

Washington: A policy of using "appropriate" influence to stop foreign wars, while still keeping out of them, was enunciated last night by Secretary of State Hull.

Rome: An end of Italy's bulk shipments of soldiers to Africa was indicated today. Premier Mussolini, with approximately 350,000 on the two fronts and in Libya, ordered seven principal ships released from transport service.

In speaking about "A Life of Prayer" to the members of the T.I.C.C.U. last evening, the leader, Mr. Stacey Woods, explained that the aim in discussion was not to deal with prayer, philosophically or psychologically but with prayer as a fellowship with God. Mr. Woods pointed out the fact that some say prayer is an absurdity because they feel that God knows all about them whether they pray or not.

Complimentary Pass For Grad Players?

Past Members of Teams Have Always Been Admitted—Stevens

"IDEA IMPRACTICABLE"

In yesterday's Varsity the suggestion was made that all players on the University team should, on graduation, be issued life passes for the Stadium. Opinions with regard to this suggestion seem to be varied and not very definite but most considered it unnecessary.

T. A. Reed of the University Athletic Association said that "although the idea is a good one in many ways, it is rather impracticable." He also stated that graduate players, provided they take the correct steps, have never been refused admission. In years past, in the case of a sell-out, Mr. Reed explained, that graduates of former teams had been seated on the players' bench. Warren Stevens, Athletic Director of the University, said that members of past teams had always been admitted to the Stadium whenever the Athletic Directorate had anything to do with the matter. He added also that Mr. Fitzgerald in his column in the Evening Telegram, was passing criticism concerning something about which he knew only one side. Mr. Stevens neither approved nor disapproved of the question of passes.

Pulitzer Prize is not Available for Reporters in This Country

RULES CHANGED

Feature Writers Are No Longer Given Any Special Consideration

No such encouragement as that afforded by the Pulitzer Prize award in the U.S.A. is given to the ambitious Canadian reporter, it was learned yesterday. Newspapermen here who produce good stories are not rewarded for their efforts by any similar type of recognition. The Globe's city editor, when questioned, said that he knew of no such award in Canada; and the American Pulitzer Prize is not, of course, open to Canadian news writers.

The rules governing the award of the Pulitzer Prize have recently been revised, the aim of the revision being to place more emphasis on good reporting as such, and less on the possible good effects to the community. In an interview given to the New York Times on Saturday, C. W. Ackerman, dean of the Columbia School of Journalism, explained the changes made in the formula, which now runs as follows: "For a distinguished example of a reporter's work during the year, the test being strict accuracy, terseness, the preference being given to news stories (Continued on Page 4)

'Hollywood' Shows Dumas' Classic

The first classical romance and adventure of this year's series of French pictures, The Three Musketeers, comes to the Hollywood Theatre on Saturday. This is a Parisian super-production with a cast carefully chosen from leading legitimate theatre troupes. Trevelle is played by Harry Barr—good news for everyone who saw Les Misérables or Crime et Châtiment. Other important roles are taken by such well known artists as Aime Simon Girard (D'Artagnan), Paul Colline (Planchet), Francis (the King), Samson Fainsilber (the Cardinal) and Andre La Fayette (the Queen).

SENIORS IN FORESTRY FAVOUR CAMP LIFE

To Take Place in Spring Rather Than Fall in Future

The Forestry camp attended by fourth year students is an integral and necessary part of the course, and as such is accepted and welcomed by most students. This is the consensus of opinion gathered from student interviews held by The Varsity.

"The camp lasts the first five weeks of term, starting in the last week of September. It is forty miles from Pembroke, away from the distractions of civilization. The work is concerned entirely with the Forestry course, and there is little in the way of amusement. However, I enjoyed the work immensely," said J. Boulbée, IV Forester. "This is the last year of the present system. Next year the camp will occupy the last three weeks of the spring term."

"Poker was the only amusement besides cutting down trees," said J. W. Mundy. "The game started when we reached camp, and some of the boys are still trying to collect."

"Camp life is pleasant enough, but sometimes we hungered for the bright lights of the city," said P. M. Morley. "But still I'd rather cut down three trees than listen to three lectures."

FAMOUS ORIENTAL WILL SPEAK HERE REMEMBRANCE DAY

Dr. T. Z. Koo Being Brought by Students' Christian Movement

"A MAN OF FIRE AND STEEL"

The Student Christian Movement has again shown its progressiveness in bringing to the campus Dr. T. Z. Koo, of China, secretary of the World Student Christian Federation at Geneva. Dr. Koo has become known to thousands of Canadians as one of the ablest and most interesting Orientals who have come to this country. A graduate of St. John's University, Shanghai, he was for nine years an official in the Administration Department of the Chinese Railway Service. In 1925 he was a member of the Second Opium Conference called in Switzerland by the League of Nations. From Geneva, Dr. Koo went to England where he made a remarkable impression. A report of his farewell address in Central Hall, Westminster, says "A man of fire and steel, he gripped our attention and held us spellbound from start to finish in a speech as remarkable for depth and intensity of conviction as for lucidity of thought and fluency of diction."

The more recent years have been spent, first as Associate General Secretary of the China National Committee; latterly he has been giving most of his time to work among students both in China and in co-operation with (Continued on Page 4)

DR. VICTORIA MUELLER AT NEWMAN HALL

Sees God as Essence of Being in Christian Religion

Last night at Newman Hall, Dr. Victoria Mueller began a series of talks on Modern Catholic Literature as found in the twentieth century. Dr. Mueller said that in the Christian faith God is the essence of being and hence He could give existence. Creation has to be a voluntary act and God will not create.

To back up the opinion that man is self-made Dr. Mueller stated, "You cannot question your own individuality since God gave His promise of individual redemption. Each man has an intellect of his own and is the responsible maker of his own person."

A short discussion followed during which the difference between individuality and personality was brought out. Dr. Mueller will continue on her next topic which is, "The Conception of the Christian World," on Wednesday, November 20.

Canadian Constitution Concern of U.C. Parli.

The Canadian constitution will come in this afternoon for a thorough overhauling at the U.C. Parliamentary Club. "That this House favours the abolition of the Senate of Canada" is the tenor of the resolution.

Bruce Marshall, who as Prime Minister will broach the motion, is a former Liberal who is gaining fame as a Radical, and last week declared himself in favour of Social Credit. Edward Shortt, III Law, will "defend the Senate to the last ditch."

In reference to the appointment of women to the Canadian Senate and the question of their admission to the Parliamentary Club, Speaker Minsky said: "They may attend in the gallery when the Governor-General is here, but at present not otherwise."

Junior Grid Stars Enter Play-offs

Will Meet Tonight's Winners in Second Round for Title

DREW BYE IN FIRST ROUND

Varsity's powerful aggregation of junior gridlers which finished the season undefeated, will enter the play-offs this Saturday. Their opponents will be decided tonight when Westsides and Eastsides clash in the second round of the playoffs. Varsity drew a bye to the finals while Eastsides and Westsides and Balmby Beach, who finished the season tied, play off. Last Saturday Westsides eliminated Balmby Beach by 10-0.

Varsity on past performances should emerge victorious in the coming test. Although smothering Eastsides 14-0 in their previous meeting they were extended to the limit to hand Westsides a 3-0 setback. The Graham-Harris-coached outfit is very strong defensively while at the same time possessing a good offensive punch.

Friendly Wrestling Bout Results in Dislocated Shoulder

St. Mike's smoker in the East Common Room last night was marred by an accident to "Red" Killian, a first year student. He was engaged in a friendly wrestling bout when a heavy fall dislocated his shoulder. First aid treatment failed, and the injured student was removed to the hospital. An anaesthetic was required to reset the bone. His condition was reported not serious.

Nearly 200 students gathered for a varied program of boxing, wrestling and fencing bouts. Joe Connelly, Varsity's star backfielder, acted as master of ceremonies.

After a sing-song and imitation of the college officials, the company adjourned to the Great Hall for refreshments.

A. F. W. Plumtre Discusses Results of Committee's Findings

MADE EXTENSIVE SURVEY

Suggests Possibility of Rehousing People in New Communities

Mr. A. F. W. Plumtre, who recently had charge of editing the Lieutenant-Governor's report on housing conditions in Toronto, discussed our slums and the committee's findings yesterday in the Music Room.

This committee made an extensive survey of many exceptional cases of poor housing as well as an intensive survey of Moss Park and the Ward. They found that a great many people were living in dwellings with poor ventilation, inadequate lighting and very rarely a central heating system. The lack of plumbing, generally in ill-repair, if any at all, the prevalence of nauseating odours, the presence of all sorts of vermin were found to be deplorable in a city which has money enough to consider a large tunnel project.

This type of home has disastrous effects on the health of the people and the number of cases of tuberculosis was found to be double the average for all Toronto; also the infant mortality rate was very high. Living in crowded unsanitary quarters also has an ill-effect on the standard of morals as the sex immorality, juvenile delinquency and the crime situation in general were found to be very much worse than in other sections and a surprising feature of this situation is that about seventy-five per cent of these people were Canadian or British born.

Even with a great deal of doubling up, there is a serious shortage of dwellings and the committee estimated that 25,000 housing units are needed. The city of Toronto must face these facts and shoulder the responsibility for this deplorable situation, but the present city council and board of control are not doing much about it. They have condemned certain undesirable dwellings but where are their occupants to live until the buildings are replaced? A program of demolition without reconstruction will make matters far worse even than they are now.

Western Game Rekindles Flame A Man Required For Every Dame

"In spite of popular sentiment the Date Bureau is still an important function of this University," said the Date Bureau Operator when interviewed yesterday. "We have a most delectable hevy of charming females who wish to give some few males a break by accompanying them to the Western game in London next Saturday, expenses to be shared."

"In addition we have a preponderant number of men who wish to make contacts with soul mates for various functions in the near future." This statement by the Bureau Operator was somewhat of a surprise to his interviewer since the opinion has always been held around this campus that "the female of the species is more predatory than the male."

The Operator intimated that the demand for men in residence with cars simply could not be satisfied. However, he held out the hope that these arbitrary demands of his female patrons would be somewhat assuaged in the near future. Priding himself on the fact that he had successfully filled several large orders for group requests the Dater "par excellence" expressed the hope that he would be the recipient of similar demands in the near future. The Date Bureau form appears elsewhere in this issue.

Novelists Face Discouraging Future

It must be very disheartening for the person who is writing the great Canadian novel or the great American novel to read the New York Times Literary Supplement, and to see there among the books received, about thirty or forty new novels published every week. What chance has the unknown novelist in a field so crowded as this?

We hear of the better novels through the recognized critics who are privileged to pick out the books which come to their attention, and after reading them, to pass judgment on their literary and artistic value. But what happens to the twenty-nine others of our weekly supply? A few are picked up by rental libraries, a few more are chosen by book-of-the-month clubs, a few decorate the library shelves of the friends and relations of the author, and the rest are given to the cheaper book-shops to be sold for thirty-nine cents as publishers' extras.

It is very likely then that a great deal of worthwhile talent is going to waste simply because there are too many books being published. In all the welter of print which is pouring from the presses of the country, a few magic words are concealed. We cannot hope to get at these words with our present equipment. The men who devote all their time to reviewing novels and classifying them confess that they cannot keep up with the output. Certainly at the present rate of production, the ordinary reader of novels is left hopelessly behind in his efforts to read the current supply.

At present we must take whatever the critics recommend, an undesirable state of affairs, since the publishers, interested only in the novel as a best-seller, may be hoodwinking us right and left, keeping much of the better work from us simply because it will not sell well. No publisher with an eye to dollars and cents would have published Virginia Woolf's novels, because they are not best sellers. Think of the margin by which we have almost missed some of the better novels and then consider how much more we may be missing right now.

Learning To Live

To most of us our school years are filled with dreams of the future. Bright, rosy dreams they usually are—but, sad to say, they are dreams that will seldom be realized in their entirety. The first few years out of school are apt to be anxious, disappointing ones. We may find that the world is not the same as it seemed in our fanciful expectations. Money may be harder to earn than we thought. Our theories may fail.

Modern life is not a stable thing. Its institutions are forever changing and its tempo continues to increase year by year. To the recent college graduate, it presents a puzzling front.

One life to live!

We all want the best from it, and it is the best that we intend to have—when we start. No other thought enters our minds. But, are we starting right? How are we to know or to judge?

There is a man—a human being if you please—everyone knows him. His appetites have become so jaded that he feels that the future is not big enough for him, and that life henceforth is to be dull and uninteresting. He has ceased to love and be loved. He looks at a past filled with nothing but memories of deceit and ruthlessness and reckless indulgence. He has faced disillusionment after disillusionment, and has lived to feel the pain that he has inflicted upon others. Now, in middle life, he seeks to hide within himself the knowledge of the fact that he has sought vainly for happiness through anticipations misdirected during the formative years of his life.

But there is a solution; one that is basic in its scope. It is the acceptance of education as a means to happiness rather than as a means to monetary heights.—Oregon Emerald.

In Interests of Uncensored News

To calm the fears of one of its readers, a Denver newspaper this week emphatically announced that it was not going to be guilty of helping dupe the American public with propaganda in the guise of news, if it possibly could help it. Its announced method is to label all censored stories as such, so that readers can use their own judgments in accepting for fact what has been worked over to suit certain interests.

The idea is a "noble" one, of the sort which should be adopted 100 per cent among the press of the world. Who needs to be told the strength of vicious propaganda in sweeping the United States into the last great war? It is toward preventing repetition of just that sort of situation that this Denver daily wishes, evidently, to do its part in the current tension.

But can censored articles be that easily marked? Some "news" that smells of prejudiced blue pencil has already appeared in the press; surely a foreign correspondent cannot simply mark his story "censored" and expect to get past the censor! Unless there is some dependable arrangement made to identify "news while it is not news", such "noble" intentions to refuse to print propaganda as news are specious.—Silver and Gold, U. of Colorado.

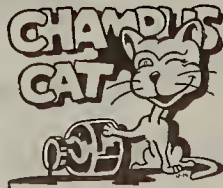

Correspondence Must Be Signed

A problem with which the Varsity like any other newspaper has to deal is that of anonymous correspondence. The Varsity has always welcomed criticism constructive or otherwise, from its readers but it is quite impossible to publish unsigned letters. Through adhering to this rule we are frequently forced to consign to the waste-paper basket really worthwhile and instructive letters.

The motive for this desire of the letter-writing public is difficult to explain. No doubt in some cases it is mere thoughtlessness or ignorance; a symbolic pen-name has an appeal to some people. The great danger from the newspaper's standpoint is of course that the writer is a mere trouble maker who delights in stirring up strife but who is unwilling to have his name attached to it. There is no valid excuse for anonymity. For the sake of those timid individuals who dislike the thought of seeing their names in print we always agree to withhold the actual signature from publication as long as we have the name as evidence of good faith on the part of the writer. Surely anyone who has an opinion which he considers worthy of publication should not be ashamed to acknowledge it.

We are always willing to give our readers the benefit of the doubt and to believe that the reason we have been receiving unsigned letters is merely that the writers did not realize the importance of a signature. The signature is our only safeguard when publishing correspondence so we take this opportunity of reminding all would-be correspondents to sign their letters in future if they wish to see them published.

One eastern college paper claims that an S.C. student earns his tuition by playing nursemaid for babies when their mothers go out card-playing. It is funny how some people can discover odd incidents although they are hundreds of miles away.—Southern California Trojan.

But the trouble is, they don't. These occasional contributors come along with their brilliant little passages, hot off the griddle of inspiration, and quickly depart. They never give us a sizable Cat of any respectable length, and we are left, as usual, frantically patching-up and putting-together from the odds and ends department. But on with the task.

To revive the war question, we can not understand why so much fuss is being made about Ethiopian women going to battle. They don't have to stay home and knit socks for their soldiers.

A little incident which passed unnoticed by most of those sleeping in the pews occurred in a recent Pass English class up at Vic. Miss Coburn was criticizing Jane Austen for her treatment of the character, Collins, at the conclusion of the novel Pride and Prejudice.

"What would Scot have done with Collins?" asked the lecturer.

And it was our old friend Ignatz who muttered in his sleep, "What any Scot would do with a Collins."

We offer next a charming little poetical definition, translated from a recently discovered Rhodesian fragment: A Pal—

Tomorrow instead of such a hodge-podge as this, you will be regaled with a scientific treatise on the gentle art of Crashing. Certainly no one is better qualified to address an audience on this subject than our special representative, Julep, whose years of experience have taught him all the tricks of the trade. His career has been a brilliant success, although marred to some extent by the little-known occasion upon which he mistakenly crashed a lecture. The floor is yours, Mint.

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

The H.C. Players' Guild

The high standard of production which the Guild has set for itself this year has shown no signs of being lowered and it is more than probable that this standard will be maintained for many years to come, when new members can direct and produce as admirable a presentation as two newcomers did yesterday afternoon.

"The House with the Twisty Windows", with a cast of seven and directed by Douglas Hicks and Anita Fessler was very well managed. The grouping (so essential on such a small stage) was excellent, all the voices were pleasing, although Murray Paulin and Helen McEwan were sometimes inaudible, and the production was well directed and the essential co-operation of timing and movement was good. Harry Tattersall carried off a difficult part well. He maintained the speed and tension necessary. Both Murray Paulin and Joan Renaud did excellent characterizations. Polly Shaw made the most of her new part and did not yield to the temptation of overdoing it, the result was a finished piece of acting. Douglas Hicks managed his Irish brogue very well and did good work in a difficult part. Albert Fyfe as Stepan was well made up and conveyed his broken English intelligibly. The play itself was difficult, great

Exchange Student Sees U. of Montreal

By Tom Irving

One of the first things that strikes a student strange to French Montreal is that though the people speak a different language, yet they are still all Canadians. It is certainly not foreign territory, but yet you have a feeling that perhaps you are intruding, that you are a foreigner in your own country.

The people are all "Canadians", and you are an Englishman. You begin to wonder if you have been taught wrong at school, and if England is not a vague region west of the province of Quebec instead of the tight little island across the sea. However, you become quickly undeceived when you have someone introduced to you by the name of O'Reilly with all the signs of being brought up in a potato patch, and receive the traditional recommendation that "I'm sure you'll be glad to meet him: he's an Englishman like yourself."

Thanksgiving was celebrated like Remembrance Day in Toronto; that is, hardly at all. We met one student that day who was quite put out because he had gone to buy something at Eaton's and the store was closed. "All the English stores are closed today," he said, "but thank fortune the Can-tension was necessary. The tempo was, if anything, a little too well kept, although the smoothness and lack of pauses which were achieved are too often absent in the Guild performances.

The audience was, as usual, hypercritical, and it speaks well for the players and their directors that the less successful parts of the action were overlooked by their audience in enthusiasm for the excellent standard which they maintained throughout the greater part of the play.

At Harvard, no man is socially correct until he has a "wiffles" haircut. A "wiffles" is nothing more nor less than a convict haircut. And they order "tonics" instead of soft drinks, and send their clothes to the "cleansers". There is also the tradition that the men grow bushy beards during finals.—Los Angeles Junior Collegian.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Frank Lambert

Still held in the tremor of excitement which shook America last week, the sports world reverberated and then tottered cheering, as from the morass of embattled behemoths of the gridiron, Victory singled out the University of Toronto, Western, Tigers and Notre Dame along with Dartmouth which ended a fifty-one year quest for a win over Yale. Another remarkable factor in the football world was the scoreless tie between Fordham and Pittsburgh.

While Dartmouth was gaining their first win in nineteen starts against the Blue Bulldogs of Old Eli they ran up their season point total to 214 for six games played, to rate first among the scoring teams in the East. This breaking of the old time jinx also saw Mount Allison University gain a victory over the University of New Brunswick to garner the New Brunswick intercollegiate title. What makes football the colourful spectacle that it is, is the attendance at the games. The amazing scene of dense crowds packing the stadiums to give vociferous acclaim to their football heroes gives the game the zest and punch which otherwise would be lacking, and last Saturday the University of Toronto fans certainly rated tops in comparison with any of the crowds across the border.

Peculiarly enough Notre Dame is the leading contender for the Rose Bowl game and provided they finish their schedule without any mishaps they should once more demonstrate their prowess as box office attractions as the Ramblers from South Bend attracted a crowd of 112,912 in their clash with Southern California in 1929.

The recent intercollegiate track meet held in the golden west shows some interesting figures, in the fact that four records were shattered, namely the shot put event having the new mark of 40.9 ft., a foot better than the recognized mark of the Intercollegiate meet here. The other two marks in the high jump and the 100 yard dash which were bettered were 5 ft. 11 3/4 in. and 10 secs., of which the former is short of the mark here.

However, the western intercollegiate series are in a position of their own as far as women's track meets are concerned as there are none held in Eastern Canada. It seems that track and field events have little or no interest here for the ladies' athletics either for the reason of a lack of facilities or that track and field events are abhorred by the refined co-eds, of whom very few have competed in their prep school days.

Coincident with Western's first victory in the Intercollegiate series is Bill Storen's first win as coach of the Purple and White gridmen, all of which is outstanding enough but when we consider that Bill Storen's first win in the Senior O.R.F.U. was made at the expense of the vaunted Sarnia Imperials speaks volumes for his ability. Incidentally at the time Storen was coach of St. Michael's and this feat was only duplicated since by Argonauts and Winnipeg. This warning should instil plenty of pep into the Varsity attack if they are taking the game on Saturday real serious.

Mid the disgorged void of Varsity Stadium last night the hard fighting junior Blues proceeded to tangle the mighty senior rugby machine into a gordian knot, refusing to back away before the fierce haughtiness of the senior gridders and for forty-five minutes kept the score sheets devoid of any marks and it was only with gathering dusk that the seniors scored some points. You never can tell about these junior editions but we guess the seniors can?

Soft rapid thuds, pattering feet, and rattling noises emerge from the boxing room nightly while inside sweating aspirants toil at their tasks in preparation to mull some knowledge on the art of fistiana. Throughout it all the boys are put through their paces and even the novice receives the same diligent instruction as the most ambitious expert, while no one is ever mauled as in outside clubs. To those who have always had the urge to step into the corded square but have had the premonition of impending disaster we urge a try at the game anyway.

Last night hockey finally arrived at the University of Toronto and with the first game only twelve days away the formation of the Big Blue sextet will be getting under way soon under the guidance of Coach Irwin Bailey.

Yesterday afternoon the Sports staff evened the count on the News men in the touch rugby department, and next week should see the mythical title of unofficial ambassadors of touch rugby into prominence go to—well you guess.

But anyway, the Meds had plenty of male supporters out to cheer them on, and the Saints managed to get along even without the Salts of the Earth from Trinity House to scare away any new ideas which might come near them.

Tonight at eight o'clock St. Mike's meet Vic Seniors at the O.C.E. gym. Both these teams have done well so far so this is one game that should be close.

Meds have engaged the O.C.E. gym for Tuesday nights to play badminton so they're hoping to enter an inter-faculty team, and the Therapists expect to have a swimming team.

Assault

WRESTLERS BEGIN SOON

Boxing instructor Frank Brown has a number of promising mittmen working out in the boxing room every evening from 5 to 6 and the leather pushing industry is well under way. The wrestlers will begin their preparation for the coming season some time next week.

Beginners' classes in the art of parrying and punching are held on Tuesdays and Thursdays with an eye to the junior assault to take place about the middle of December. Anyone interested in boxing is invited to attend these classes and become familiar with the rudimentary principles of self-defence. To quell the fears of any first year men, or others, who do not dare to venture into the boxing room lest they should receive a beating-up, Instructor Brown issues a solemn assurance that members of the beginners' class will not be exposed to any indignity such as the loss of a tooth.

FELLOWSHIP OF PRAYER POINTED TO BY SPEAKER

pray or not. The students replied promptly by saying that God tells us in the Bible to pray and that it is no longer reasonable to pray, but a question of our co-operation with God.

"Is it possible to communicate with God?" asked Mr. Woods. The students replied that they thought so because of the experiences of people in this connection, through the years, also because we have the definite promise of Christ.

"Do we say hello to God in the morning as we do to our parents?"
asked Mr. Woods. He thought that people were apt to forget this in the hurry of the morning, just as they were more inclined to read the comics than God's newspaper. Mr. Woods mentioned that some say a prayer to God in the morning as a matter of course but that this prayer would be a part of the morning routine and not praying.

There would be no fellowship in it.
He wanted the students to understand the difference between praying and saying a prayer.

He stated that many of us as children believe that to pray one must use a special language and work oneself up into a special mood. He felt that it was well to choose a time and place for prayer and to talk to God as a friend.

Mr. Woods represented the relationship of the child to its father as the relationship of humanity to God in prayer.

thought that passes were a nice idea but totally unnecessary. Coulter, when asked his opinion, replied, "Excellent", and Connolly agreed, although perhaps with less enthusiasm. Holden, when asked to express an opinion said that passes would perhaps encourage graduates who live not far from Toronto, to make more of an effort to attend the games. As far as "Moose" Buck was concerned he could see no particular advantage one way or the other.

this change," said Dean Ackerman, "is to make good reporting the basis of judgment, rather than public service.
The advisory board believes that the prize for reporting should go to a newspaper man or woman who, in the ordinary day's work, writes a news story which is a credit to the profession of journalism." Under this new ruling, the writer of special articles or features will not be eligible; only the best work of the ordinary news reporter will be considered. The award may be divided; for instance, the reporter who telephones a story is equally eligible with the man who rewrites it.

The aim of this revision of the formula is to encourage reporters to submit their work by removing discriminations in favour of special feature writers. "It is," said Dean Ackerman,
"the hope of the board that the prize may be awarded to a reporter who receives an assignment without preliminary notice, who brings to bear upon the story he is investigating and reporting all of his abilities and judgment and who writes the story under the adian ones are open!" He refused to believe us when we said that the holiday was American and not old country in its origin. One French lady was quite annoyed because the postman came on All Saints' Day, "which everyone knows is a real Canadian celebration."

The French is different too in its accent and in its vocabulary. Pommes de terre change to patates, and dollars are dollars no longer, but piastres— shades of the pirate days!

One reason that Mr. King won out so proudly in Quebec is that he speaks a passable French, whereas Mr. Bennett should not have attempted it, for his few words seemed more a condescension than anything else. The elections passed enthusiastically but peacefully, except that two days in one week the students banded together to chase a communist candidate in the neighbourhood, smashing his committee-room windows and tearing down billboards with his posters.

When on the rampage, the students wear berets and carry canes, formidable steel ones when they want to do real damage. It might also be said that the police here are more implacable than
Mr. Draper's boys.

But there are no "frosh" as we know them in Toronto. Perhaps it is because practically every one has his B.A. before entering the University. They get them in the "classical colleges" of the province, which could teach us something for our secondary school system in Ontario.

At Montreal they do not know much about the University of Toronto, and they have a fear too that it is a hotbed of Orangeism. But it also may be said that Toronto does not know much about the University of Montreal, and we can therefore hardly criticize their attitude. However, they are interested in Varsity, and many students would be glad to go there to study English if they only had a chance.

This short sketch does not give a very broad image of the University of Montreal, but at least introduces the subject at Toronto. Later on we may have an opportunity of discussing it more in particular.

win from the St. Hilda's Freshies by a score of 26-18. It was a feverish game featured by sloppy passing, but both sides showed plenty of spirit, the Saints holding the score to 18-16 at three-quarter time. But the Therapists made good use of their height and showed much accurate shooting from far out.
Ruth Carlyle and Phyllis Webb put in some very good floor play and their shooting was sensational. The Saints tried hard and kept up a continual barrage on the basket, but their defence was weak.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Washington, Nov. 7: Prime Minister Mackenzie King, a visitor at Washington, refused to comment on the trade pacts, saying his trip was solely a holiday. However indications point to some kind of a trade treaty between Canada and the United States—the full agreement of which seems to hinge on the 1936 elections.

Newark, Nov. 7: Katharine Hepburn narrowly escaped injury or death by an aeroplane today. The plane having apparently stopped the actress left it, only to be barely missed by the whirling propeller.

Addis Ababa, Nov. 7: Waizeru Asgedetch, Ethiopia's only woman general, yesterday led a successful attack on the Italians at Makale. Actively taking part in the warfare the princess is said to have thoroughly investigated the district and routed several camps.

Toronto, Nov. 7: Information has reached the defense counsel for Harry O'Donnell, accused murderer of Ruth Taylor, which points unmistakably to another man not yet identified as the slayer of the girl. Frank Regan, the lawyer of the defense, would not disclose the important facts upon which so much depends.

HOUSE BACKS MOTION TO ABOLISH SENATE

Premier Marshall Charged with Radical Ideas

PARTIES FLING FIERY WORDS

The government's motion "That this House favours the abolition of the Senate of Canada," was carried by a slight majority at the U.C. Parliament yesterday. When the result was announced the opposition attempted a want of confidence motion but it was defeated. Premier Marshall left the support of the government to his followers.

W. C. Smith, opening the debate, declared that the Senate protected a wealthy minority and flouted the elected representatives of the people. Senile, futile, and puerile, was the government's description of the Senate. The opposition was charged with belauding the issue.

Opposition Leader Shortt emphasized that a two house government was in vogue throughout the world and claimed the Canadian Senate protected divisional rights. Charges that he was a radical embracing fantastic ideas were hurled at Premier Marshall. "When I embrace, I don't embrace ideas," replied the Premier in demanding an adjournment. Open Meeting Of Victoria Union

Victoria College Union will today hold an open meeting to discuss the policy of the body regarding the attendance at the Armistice Day service. A portion of the body are in favour of supporting the S.C.M. peace movement which is sponsoring a service in Hart House Theatre. This service will be of a non-military nature and open to all undergraduates. There are, however, many members of the V.C.U. who believe the service at the Memorial Tower, sponsored by the Alumni Society, should be supported by the body. Today's meeting is to decide the position the Union will adopt in this regard.

HART HOUSE MEALS ATTRACT STUDENTS

20c LUNCHES PREFERRED

The total number of meals served in the Great Hall of Hart House for the first five weeks of the year show an increase of 35 per cent over those served in the corresponding period last year, stated Controller Gillies in an interview yesterday.

The executive of Great Hall feel that this increased patronage is ample proof that the radical changes made last January have met with the general approval of the students. These changes consisted of the replacing of benches with chairs, the permission of diners to sit where they pleased no matter what priced meal they were getting, permission to smoke in the dining room, and a wider range of choice for each price of meal.

Aside from these reforms, there has been little change in the actual administration of the dining room, said the controller. The personnel of the kitchen and dining room staffs is practically the same, particularly those in key positions, while the general system of management is practically unchanged.

BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENTS DISCUSSED BY RIDOELL

Peace of Reconciliation Difficult Immediately Following a War

"If you had to remake the map of Europe, on what basis would you determine the countries and their boundaries?" was the question posed by Mr. R. G. Riddell to the Current Events group at Wymulwood yesterday afternoon. Strategic, economic, geographical and racial characteristics were advanced by the group as factors in this determination, but the general opinion seemed to be that although each was an important consideration, no one could be called a criterion.

"The task of making a peace of reconciliation instead of one of vengeance is a very difficult one immediately after a war," Mr. Riddell remarked in discussing the Versailles Treaty. The "Hang the Kaiser" election after the war committed the British Government to a more drastic treatment of Germany at the Peace Conference than was previously contemplated. Besides this psychological factor, there were also the secret treaties made by the Allies with (Continued on Page 4)

U.C. BADMINTON CLUB PLANS ACTIVE YEAR

The U.C. Women's Badminton Club held its first meeting of the year in the Women's Union yesterday afternoon. The president announced to the meeting that the members may play at the York Club two afternoons a week, on Tuesday and Friday, with a charge of 25 cents a day. The courts at the Women's Union may be used 3 mornings a week, notices of the days to be posted later.

"Geography," he declared in his inaugural address, "is concerned with the description, localization and explanation of facts relating man to his material environment."

A distinguished audience including his honour the lieutenant-governor of Ontario, and representatives of several geographical societies, listened intently as Professor Taylor outlined the practical uses of geography. Co-eds Broke, Peanuts Don't Sell Vendor's Business Goes to Ruin

By R. G. Anglin

Thundering denunciation of the raised fees was voiced by George Janitos, official peanut vendor to the University, when interviewed by The Varsity at his Hoskin St. headquarters yesterday afternoon.

"The students, they broke," explained George sadly, in explanation of the slump which has hit the peanut business this season.

"They have to pay more now to go to college," suggested the reporter. "Yah,—that's it!" exclaimed George. "They broke!"

Mr. Janitos may be in the food business in a small way just now, but there was a time when he helped his brother run a restaurant and George knows all about food values.

"More peanuts I sell in the winter time,—in the summer more pop-corn."

The boys watching the rugby games on the back campus help business to a certain extent, but Mr. Janitos indicated that he owes very little of his success to coed support.

"Is da motor cars,—they make this business poor!" muttered George, hands dug deep in the pockets of his big brown overcoat. "The people that should come along here and buy peanuts,—away they go!" he waved an eloquent arm at the flying traffic, withdrawing it just in time to narrowly escape a big red Wellesey bus that

The question of permanent chairs for the Great Hall has engaged the attention of the Hall Committee since the benches were removed last January. Chairs taken from the various common rooms have filled the need in the meantime.

The Board of Stewards and the Hall Committee have great pleasure in announcing that through the generosity of the Massey Foundation permanent chairs of a suitable design will be provided. The keen interest shown by Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Massey in co-operation with the Hall Committee insures the best possible design for durability and comfort. Although the final model has not been approved, it is understood that the chairs will be heavy oak construction and in keeping with the architectural character of the Great Hall.

ISBISTER BACK

Varsity Stronger Than at Any Time Since First Queen's Game

By Jim Tiller

Hullabaloo and Caninnyms of defiance echoing all the way from London town announce the Western Mustangs to be Hip-up, Sky-up since they trampled over the McGill Redmen to a 6-2 victory last Saturday. After giving McGill the Broncos' cheer, the Western Broncos are all set to take on the Big Blue team from the U. of T. and relieve their embarrassment due to four straight defeats. Already assured of first place in the intercollegiate loop, Varsity will have nothing more than their unbeaten record at stake when they kick off in Molson Stadium tomorrow afternoon.

All reports of last Saturday's game in Montreal seem to indicate that Bill Storen has finally accomplished what certain well-known sports writers have been calling him to do all season, i.e., build up a winning team out of the aggregation of undeveloped talent at his disposal last September. The Mustangs evidently put up a fine battle, coming from behind to score four points in the last quarter; and any team that can hold Westman, Anton and Co. to two points is some team. It will be re-told. (Continued on Page 3)

BLUES TO CLASH WITH AGGIE SQUAD

Fighting Farmers Are Said to Possess Dangerous Strength

MILLER PLAYS QUARTER

The Blue Seconds will clash with Coach Baldwin's Aggie squad in the opening game of the double-header football fixture at Varsity Stadium on Saturday. As their championship aspirations will fade with a defeat the Dawsons will be in there fighting tooth and nail for the entire sixty minutes. Their first encounter with the Fighting Farmers resulted in a close 3-1 decision for the Toronto students. However the Guelph gridders showed unexpected strength by holding the powerful McMaster aggregation 36-25 last week.

The Blues will be fortunate in having the services of Whitey Miller at quarterback. Jarvis, Jarvis and Taft will again present a strong rearguard. Beatty, Willoughby, Shuben and Powell are all stumbling blocks in the way of ambitious ground-gainers. With the remainder of the team in fair condition the Toronto crew will be difficult to knock off.

POLITICAL SCIENCE ELECT EXECUTIVE

Canadian Class Struggle to be Studied This Year

A large group of political science students turned out yesterday afternoon for an organization meeting of the Political Science Club for this year. An executive was elected and date for the first meeting decided upon.

J. E. L. Graham, fourth year University College, was elected president; George Ignatieff was chosen as fourth year representative and Jim A'Court as the representative for third year.

The first meeting will be held at four o'clock on Monday, November 18. Two members of the club will read papers on the question that Canada's problem is that of a class struggle rather than that of regional interests. A discussion will take place following.

INCENTIVE LACKING FOR EMPLOYMENT

Dr. Hamilton Discussed Vice and Unsanitary Conditions of Slums

HOUSING PLAN URGED

"It is employment rather than unemployment that we seek to achieve in our country," was the statement made by Dr. Hamilton of St. Andrews, Scotland, in addressing the women's study group of the Students' Christian Movement.

"The children of the slums," she said, "are being allowed to drift aimlessly in an environment which is unsanitary and corrupt and lacking in individuals who could be an inspiration to the rising generation. Consequently, they acquire no incentive to prepare themselves for work, living a negative sort of existence which can end only in unemployment and vice."

She stressed the need of a housing plan that would improve the conditions in the slums and thereby decrease the ranks of the unemployed and the astonishing numbers that fill the insane asylums.

Russian General To Lecture Tonight

General Yakhontoff, well known author and editor of a Russian weekly in the Far East, is lecturing tonight under the auspices of the Student Peace Movement in the Women's Union.

His latest publication, "Russia and the Soviet Union in the Far East", is regarded by many critics as the most authoritative and impartial exposition of Russia's Far Eastern policy, past and present, which is now available. During recent years General Yakhontoff has been active in the work of the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, Massachusetts, and his lectures in various cities in America have aroused very favourable comment.

Chair in Geography Asset in Canada

We had always associated geography with the rather tiresome routine of repeating countries and their capitals and learning the names of lakes, rivers and mountains, to which we were subjected in our public school days. Last night we attended the inaugural lecture of the new professor of geography in Convocation Hall and discovered what an immense field geography in its widest sense embraces. Geography is, in fact, as was pointed out at the lecture, a correlation of a great many subjects including history, economics, anthropology and sociology, and an endeavour to study the world as the home of man.

The establishment of a chair in geography here marks the fulfilment of an ambition long held by the University and is definitely a step forward and upward in the realm of education. The University is indeed fortunate to have obtained a man of the eminence and attainments of Dr. Taylor to fill that chair. We can look forward to a renewed interest in geography in general and in the geographical problems of Northern Canada in particular. The benefit accruing from this appointment will obviously not be confined to the University but will extend to the country as a whole.

The Peace Committee

Regarding the Armistice Service being conducted by the Peace Committee of the Student Christian Movement we have been asked to publish the following:

To the Editor, The Varsity.
Dear Sir—

The Peace Committee of the Student Christian Movement in conducting a student peace service on Remembrance Day, November 11th in Hart House Theatre, wishes it to be understood that this move is not the outcome of any antagonism to the traditional Alumni Service. The Alumni Federation found it impossible to co-operate with the Peace Committee in effecting any change in the Tower Service. The Committee, therefore, recognizing the right of the Alumni to conduct an Alumni Service in accordance with their own views, claim a similar right for themselves and the undergraduate constituency which they represent. There has been an express need for a memorial service which is non-military and which lays a definite emphasis on peace and international good-will. For that reason the Committee has inaugurated a student service which undertakes to meet such a need.

Hart House Theatre has been chosen for this service because it is central, non-faculty and non-denominational.

Peace Committee of the S.C.M.
Violet Tennant,
Chairman.

A Plea for Illumination

The grounds of the University of Toronto and all the buildings which stand upon it present a remarkably striking picture. Visitors are strongly impressed by an unusually beautiful setting for an illustrious institution. The ancient dignity of U.C., the stolid sincerity of the "The Little Red Schoolhouse", the modern magnificence of the Botany Building, nay, even Wycliffe College makes them stop and stare. But the "piece de resistance" is our

Hart House Art Gallery Exhibit of Photographs

This review of the photography exhibit in the Hart House Art Gallery has been written for "The Varsity" by Professor A. F. Coventry. We are very much indebted to Professor Coventry for the trouble which he has taken in the preparation of this article.

The exhibition of photographs that opened yesterday in the Art Gallery of Hart House is a travelling collection from prints submitted for the Camera Craft Monthly Competitions, and so may be taken as representative of current photography. To photographers some of the prints will be familiar, since they have been exhibited elsewhere and reproduced in recent photographic journals. This does not detract from the interest of seeing the originals, as there is nearly always loss of quality in reproduction. A feature of the exhibition is the critical notice attached to each print which gives the judges' opinions and a statement of technical details; the latter will naturally interest chiefly those who like to carry out their own photographic processes from exposure to final print, but others who give them attention will discover that photographers use a variety of methods to produce their exhibition pictures.

The exhibition is good; its origin guarantees that; this, however, does not imply that all visitors will agree with the awards of the judges, nor is it the same thing as saying that the treatment of all the pictures, no matter how well carried out, will appeal to everyone as most suitable for the subject. Space forbids detailed consideration of each print on the walls, but some thoughts that occurred to this visitor can be given briefly. The wide use of the paper negative method, especially in landscape, is interesting; it is a process by which a great amount of control can be exerted over the result produced from the original negative, and all who have tried to make a composition from the raw materials as presented by nature will appreciate the usefulness of this. Bromoil and bromoil transfer, very popular a few years ago, are represented by one print each, the transfer, "Guten Morgen, Frau", by J. D. Le Cron, being a beautiful example of the results that can be obtained by the method. The rich tones obtainable by the rather complicated Fresson process are excellently shown in "The Captive".

As suggested earlier some prints seem to fall short of their purpose for one reason or another. "Hilltop" by W. E. Wing and "Quietude" by W. D. LeSage are both sunlit scenes, but fail to give a true interpretation of its qualities, "Hilltop" in that it is all muddy and unclear, "Quietude" through its large areas of dead black, impossibly heavy in such a setting. The portrait "Naome", by D. K. Oliver, exhibits the use of a technique unsuited to the subject; to give the flesh a gritty texture as in this photograph is deliberately to throw away the magnificent power of the camera to render just those delicate gradations that characterize flesh. Comparison with the "Sacrifice of Andromeda" will emphasize the point. "Dianna", by P. H. Oelman, is unhappy not only in this respect, but in the whole pose; to combine a bow, supposed to be under considerable tension, with a position of great instability produces a feeling of unbalance that counteracts any pleasure the print might give.

But after all the prints that arouse antagonism are rare and those that cause immediate strong enjoyment are so numerous that only a few can be mentioned. Among the landscapes "Off the Highway" by N. R. Garrett, is a first-class example of the way to treat snow, with glittering highlights and thoroughly transparent shadows. "Snowscape", by J. Muller, has something of the same quality, but lacks the crispness of "Off the Highway". "Contemplation", by K. Wakasa, shows what can be done with a few simple elements. "Sacrifice of Andromeda" and "Salome (Remorse)" are Kells at or very near his best; they not only show the power of the camera to produce the most delicate tones, but also its power of representing emotions. Among the portraits "Hungarian Nobleman", by Max Thorek, stands out strongly and R. H. Andrews' "Man of Many Summers" runs it a close second. These prints gave the reviewer special pleasure, but they are only a few out of a show that well illustrates the standard and interests of the amateur photographer on this continent.

own Hart House. Its plan is dexterously different, its luxurious interior in unsurpassed, it is the building of buildings. Even we who admire its charms from day to day never cease to appreciate them. But for goodness' sakes when are they going to light up the Tower Clock at night.

Did you ever crash a party? If you haven't, you've missed one of the biggest kicks life has to offer you. For a good old-fashioned thrill, nothing can compare with crawling up a teetery ladder to crash a party via the window route. Then too, there is the added thrill that it may be the ladies' cloak room you're entering. I remember once... but that's another story. Us Gate-Crashers have a high moral code and must not be confused with low-down chisellers who rely on counterfeit tickets and forged invitations. There were no basketball games last night. The O.C.E. gym was reserved for the specialist qualifying exams of the O.C.E. students, and so the two games are postponed indefinitely. It is not yet certain whether the game between Vic Juniors and U.C. Juniors which is scheduled for tonight, will take place. This will be a good game, when and if it is played. Both teams play a fast, tricky game, with Joyce Tennenbaum on the U.C. forward line, and

By W. A. Crocker

Those of you who intend going up to London this Saturday would be well advised in taking along a saddle or two to really enjoy the proceedings. With Western's Bronchos and Mustangs galloping in chase of Varsity's Horses, Mules and Ponies a saddle would be a useful thing to have around—sort of put you on top of every play. At any rate there should be a lot of galloping and running around during the afternoon's encounter. Come to think of it the Blues will have to do some classy trotting to keep this season's record intact as the Storen-coached Londoners will be out to shoot the works tomorrow. Everybody likes to defeat a potential champion and in this regard the Mustang corral is no exception. News from the Western camp points to the fact that everything is in readiness for its second successive victory and with nothing to lose Bill Storen's lads will play a wide open style of game, gambling on ending off the season in a blaze of glory. Warren Stevens will no doubt use Bob Isbister in the game as a warm-up for next Saturday's probable play-off. Isbister has been out of action for three weeks now and if Stevens intends using him next week Bob's injured knee will have to be put to the acid test. The big boy's knee can stand up under kicking duties but whether it will be able to bear the strain of a scrimmage remains to be seen. If the Blues can get a good performance out of Isbister's boot next week the score will not even be close as the extra yardage gained through Bob's kicking will make a lot of difference in the final score.

Jack Dawson's Varsity Seconds are going to have their hands full tomorrow when they tangle with the O.A.C. squad. The Aggies proved to be a powerful aggregation in chalking up 26 points against McMaster's strong squad last week. The Seconds must win to stay in the intermediate race as a loss will give the Hamilton gridders the title. The McMaster crew must of course take Western tomorrow to make these facts true but a victory for the Hamiltonians is almost a certainty. Whitey Miller, who has been absent due to injuries, will be back at the helm tomorrow and his presence should provide the necessary punch for a victory. The game will start at 1.00 p.m. so as to give the Argo-Ottawa tussle ample time for completion before dusk.

At 10.30 tomorrow morning the entrants in the Intercollegiate Senior Harrier Meet will be sent on their way. Four colleges have entered teams, namely McGill, R.M.C., O.A.C., and Varsity. Queen's have again decided not to enter a team. Each competing college will be allowed to enter a squad of five men. The course used will be the same as that employed in the interfaculty harrier meet, that is, 5 miles, 110 feet in length. One mile of the course is cross country and the remainder is on macadam road. Since its inception in 1909 Varsity has held the Little Cup, emblematic of the Intercollegiate Senior Harrier Championship, on all but six occasions and as things stand right now the Blues have a good chance of annexing the title again. Varsity's best bet lies with Bill Kibbellewhite, who broke the course record in last week's interfaculty meet. In tomorrow's meet the winner gets one point, the second man two points and so on, the team with the lowest aggregate taking the title.

With Varsity's first game less than two weeks away Coach Irvin Bailey has his squad charging up and down the ice surface at the Arena at top speed. Seven of last year's Blue squad have returned to the fold along with about forty newcomers. Shipman, Charles, Jeffrey, McPherson, McLelland, Valiquette and McIlquham are the lads who have again put in an appearance. A good many newcomers already have shown to advantage but with the squad as large in numbers as it is at present it is quite difficult to form an opinion of Varsity's hockey chances. Coach Bailey intends to cut the squad down to working size by the week-end and next week should see the better prospects hard at work in the fight for the coveted berths on the senior squad.

JRS. OF MEOS AND U.C. DEFEAT OPPONENTS

Jr. U.C. and Jr. Meos chalked up victories in yesterday's volleyball double-header played in the upper gym at Hart House. The Jr. U.C. squad overwhelmed Jr. Vic 15-5 and 15-6 in the first contest while the medical squad, finalists in last year's volleyball race, downed the dent dents team 15-6 and 15-4 in the second encounter.

Jr. U.C.: Yankov, Hershorn, Spring, Nett, Lokash, Tepperman, Savlov, Rose and Loren.

Jr. Vic: Hurley, Deacon, Afflick, Mackinnon, Lang, Bennett, Stieldand.

Jr. Meos: Floren, Crocker, Cash, Gates, Wise, Green, Kyle, Metzler, Shulman, Emmett, Probert.

O.A.C. DEFEATS U.C. 7-0 ON GRIDIRON

The powerful O.A.C. team scored a 7-0 victory over U.C. in a difficult game on the back campus yesterday afternoon. Numerous U.C. fumbles ruined all hopes for victory and it was hard to keep O.A.C. back. Although no score was made in the first quarter, O.A.C. showed their superiority by keeping the ball in U.C. territory. Theale of O.A.C. scored a single at the beginning of half-time.

Spence of O.A.C. intercepted a forward pass by U.C. and scored a touchdown which was not converted.

O.A.C.: Robertson, Wolfe, Huff, Ford, Moffat, Stuart, Spence, Walker, Theale, Young, Charles, Aldon, Graham, Thomas, Kelly, Lavoie, Labelle, Jarvis, Ferraro, Hart, Henderson.

U.C.: Campbell, Taylor, Thompson, Shiner, Jeanneret, Self, Mallory, T. Campbell, Donaldson, Heywood, Gray, Cox, Millar, Glenn.

SCIENTIFIC SOCCERITES JOLT DRUGGISTS 4-0

School of Science soccerites handed the Pharmacy representatives a 4-0 jolt on the front campus yesterday afternoon. School was much superior, showing many pretty combination plays, intermingling with accurate shooting at the nets.

School: Mitchell, Powell, Link, Jackson, Maynard, Chute, Moody, Kerr, Thompson, Self, Jeffrey, Ashchurst, Woods, Marks.

Pharmacy: Coulter, Macintyre, Jackson, Pronger, Bain, Allan, Wineberg, Garneau, Asseltine, Spence, Ramsay, Hall.

SERVICE OF REMEMBRANCE

Under the shadow of thy throne
Thy saints have dwelt secure;
Sufficient is thine arm alone,
And our defence is sure.

Before the hills in order stood,

From everlasting thou art God,

A thousand ages in thy sight
Are like an evening gown;
Short as the watch that ends the night
Before the rising sun.

numbered how close McGill came to winning here, three weeks ago.

With Bob Isbister back in shape and hoofing the calfskin satisfyingly high and far, Varsity will be at full strength, probably stronger than for any other game this season. The famed Four Horsemen, Coulter, Connelly, Marks and Gray, are all in fine fettle and the Bucking Bronchos will have a hard job throwing these boys for a loss. The Blues' passing plays were clicking in their practise session last night and the players all seemed filled with a boyish enthusiasm that augurs well for the outcome of Saturday's game which should be fast and interesting although the result has no effect on the league standing of either team. Varsity should win, but in rugby you can never tell.

MEOS DRAW WITH OENTS IN WELL FOUGHT GAME

Two solid entangled phalanxes of football machinery met last night on the Vic campus, but victory faded from the grasp of both squads with the result, Sr. Meos 5, Dents 5.

Entering the first period of play the Dents, with their long distance punting backed Meos into their own territory and on a lofty kick by Peterson which the Meos backfield fumbled, Andrews fell on the oval for a try which was not converted. Faced by defeat the Meos forces recuperated and began a series of line smashes until within sight of the Dents goal and then with plenty of reserve strength the hard fighting Teetimen held the Meos at bay. Meos attempted several long passes which were unsuccessful but within the Dents twenty-five yard line they lost possession.

The second half of the game turned into a hard bruising game in which tempers flared and resulted in hurt feelings when Green carried the ball to the one-yard line and King scored the touchdown. Preceding these plays the hard plunging tactics of Snelling did much to advance the ball for Meos.

than the Graters who have no honour at all.

(At this point, we observe that "The Chiseller" has not been heard from since the Muddy Yorker became proficient in the gentle art of grafting. Too many passes, I'm afraid.)

My pals, Red and Gus, got a big laugh out of that notice, "CRASHERS BEWARE". Still, the Hade's Hop was a hard party to crash—we didn't get in until 9 o'clock. And then we had a hell of a (good) time. We hope that wasn't the last of the red-hot mammas. Tch, Tch, and only a few months ago she was a demure little Oriental maid, Ko Fan.

The ordinary run of amateur gate-crashers are mainly limited to class-parties but we who are accomplished extend our, shall I say "patronage", to points urban where floors and rhythm are smoother. The chief difficulty here is that one runs the risk of being identified with the grafters. Oh well.

Before crashing a party, one must reconnoitre the position and carefully examine all avenues of approach. A little preparation beforehand will often save a lot of trouble at the time of action (Elementary Tactics, C.O.T.C.) If your first attempt fails, don't get discouraged; remember, "Where there's a will, there's a way in", and try again. If the front door is absolutely the only entrance, it's considered ethical to chisel or graft a passport through it.

Some of the guys in S.P.S. strongly disapprove of the custom of stationing cops around the Women's Union while there's a party in progress. Poor fellows, if they only knew . . . cops or no cops, the Women's Union is one of the easier places to crash.

I must take time out now to decide what party I'll crash tonight. Will it be the Meds' Soph-Frosh down in the Roll Yoke or the S.P.S. brawl up in the Boulevard, or shall I go to the Buddha's Binge (I guess it's the Laughing Buddha) up in the cozy corners and shady nooks of Women-wood. I hope this party doesn't try to effect an atmosphere with a B.O. Tree—it might induce the state of things unwished for, and I'm not Maitreya, I'm only

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

House Theatre last night under the direction of G. Wilson Knight. Mr. Knight played the title-role. The interpretation of the tragedy was fine, but that of Lear was insufficient. He was lost in gestures, fits, and a gentle resignation to his fate. The part was acted too much in the spirit of tragedy but too little in that of Lear.

The figure of the Fool, played by Edwin Owen, moved always with the spirit of the play. At the end of the mad scene he seemed to carry the entire weight of the tragedy upon his shoulders. He acted the Fool drolly and lightly. Lyndon Smith's Kent was one of the best pieces of acting in the entire play. The humour, courage and loyalty of the character had the right amount of emphasis, especially the humour, dry and well pointed, much to the delight of the audience.

Gordon Robertson's Edmund was an excellent characterization. He interpreted the unmitigated villainy of the part very well indeed. The cold calculation and thoughtful deception, such striking features of the role were subtly implied. Edgar (Robin Godfrey), was satisfactory but his scenes of madness greatly surpassed the rest of his work; they were excellent. Frank Paget's Gloucester was hampered by unfamiliarity with his lines.

Cordelia was well done but colourless. Regan perpetrated her villainy excellently. Goneril was satisfactory but carried herself badly.

The grouping, sound effects, setting and lighting were all very effective. Greater clarity of speech on the part of most of the players could be desired; but the presentation as a whole was most satisfactory. If the audience was inclined to fidget, one might suggest that they see Shakespeare more often, thus accustoming themselves to the conventions of the five-act play.

The forte of geographical investigation lies in its capacity to map not only physical, but economic, historical and ethnological situations.

Ethnologically, mapping has shown the outward displacement of tribes from the core of civilization, suggesting incidentally, that the broad-headed races of Europe are the newest type of racial development.

Economically, geography has mapped the spheres of climatic influence, the districts suitable for further expansion and even the future centres of civilization.

Greatest Threat to World Peace Seen in Situation in the Orient

NO IMMEDIATE DANGER

Fascism Denounced as Being Incompatible with World Peace

Although the eyes of the world are concentrated on Ethiopia at present, it was the opinion of General Victor A. Yakhontoff, in his lecture to the Student Peace Movement at the Women's Union on Friday, that once again world attention is to be focussed on the Pacific situation. General Yakhontoff is a distinguished diplomat and journalist and was a member of the last Russian Imperial Government.

He maintained that war, however imminent, is not likely to break for some time; Russia has no logical motives for beginning the aggression. "She is not cherishing any aggressive plans and certainly will not start war," he said. Japan is in bad financial condition and Germany, speaking in terms of military preparedness, is not yet ready.

Three great powers, namely Great Britain, the United States, and Japan, are interested in the Chinese markets. While Great Britain and the United States maintain noncommittal policies, Japan has already shown her aggressiveness. Because of her false pretence (Continued on Page 4)

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Ottawa—It is reported on good authority that Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt have agreed on a basis for a reciprocal Trade Treaty between Canada and the United States. Mr. King has cancelled holiday plans in the Southern States and has returned unexpectedly to Ottawa.

Montreal—Four patients were burned to death and a fifth died of heart failure when a fire destroyed one wing of the St. Jean de Dieu Mental Hospital.

Shanghai—Rumours of impending Japanese military action caused a stream of refugees to flee from Chapei and seek shelter in the International Settlement. The rumours, which followed the unsolved slaying of a Japanese marine, were denied by Japanese military authorities.

Ethiopia—Italian forces made advances on both fronts over the weekend. In the North the Italian troops advanced past Makale, while on the Southern front the capture of Sasa Baneh was effected, marking an advance of 100 miles in the last week.

Singapore—The search for Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith and his copilot Tom Pethybridge continued unsuccessfully. The fliers have now been lost for three days, and are thought to be in the vicinity of the Bay of Bengal.

Toronto—Frank Regan, counsel for P.C. O'Shea, announced that he will ask that the Editor of the Evening Telegram be committed to jail for contempt of court. Mr. Regan charged that the Telegram had carried an editorial which held the Police Commission up to ridicule.

"The Realm of the Honey Bee", was the topic of an illustrated lecture by James I. Hambleton, of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D.C., in Convocation Hall on Saturday.

Mr. Hambleton pointed out that the honey bee is absolutely essential to agriculture, for, with the growing extinction of the bumble bee, the farmer depends upon the honey bee to pollinate his orchards. Every modern orchard has a hive which may consist of fifty to as many as a hundred thousand bees.

The queen bee, who is head of the hive, is the only fully developed female (Continued on Page 4)

Rev. L. P. Geary Speaks to Representative Group at Wycliffe

Yesterday in Wycliffe College the Reverend L. P. Geary opened a meeting of the Toronto Inter-Collegiate Christian Union with a talk on "Initial Contacts with Christ." Following this, six students representing different faculties of the University told of their experiences in connection with the above topic.

The Reverend Geary spoke of Christ as a power which could be put into practice, and which was to be obtained through Christ, the essence of Christianity. The students outlined just what the discovery of Truth through Christ meant to them.

VICTORIA TO DEBATE CANADIAN RELATIONS TO UNITED STATES

The pros and cons of Canadian relations with the United States and the position of Canada as a North American state will be discussed tomorrow night in the second session of the Victoria Debating Parliament. Various aspects of international relations—defense, tariffs, the connection between our British relationships and our culture—will be dealt with.

The subject for the evening's debate will be "That this House favours closer affiliations between Canada and the United States." The speeches for the government will be made by W. A. Rummels and Edith Lewis, representing the radical side. The traditional viewpoint will be maintained by the opposition speakers, Wrenn Stanley and W. A. Stickland.

Hermant and Kelloway Damn Social Credit in its Own Environment

TO DEBATE ON WAY BACK

Special to The Varsity
Vancouver, B.C.—Winning victories all the way, the eastern debating team of the national Federation of Canadian University Students has completed the first lap of its western tour. The team consists of S. M. Hermant, B.A., of Toronto, and E. Kelloway, of McGill.

At Regina they debated against secession of the four western provinces and won a judges' decision. They were opposed by two graduates of the University of Saskatchewan, the debate being under the auspices of the Regina Y.M.C.A.

Further west, at Calgary, they won a judges' decision speaking against Social Credit. They debated before twelve hundred partial people in this hotbed of the new political creed.

In Vancouver, the eastern team won an unanimous decision against two undergraduates of the University of British Columbia, again opposing Social Credit.

The team has several debates on the way back, finishing up in Winnipeg.

By Weight of Numbers Made to Quail Our Female Scribe May Yet Prevail

Scenes of epic warfare took place Friday afternoon as the Victoria College Union disputed the fate of one poor cowering representative of the press. Motions were moved, denunciations were thundered forth. "The press must be thrown out," cried one fervid member. Confusion reigned supreme.

The trouble all started when an innocent and trusting member of the women's staff, armed with pencil and notebook, stormed the portals of Alumni Hall to cover a special meeting of the above-mentioned Union. Surrounded on all sides by hostile and suspicious myrmidons of members, the girl reporter slipped snakily and surreptitiously into a seat and hastily assumed the bored expression of a tried and trusted Unionite. But in vain. She seemed to exude a subtle aura of newspaper ink which gradually permeated the nostrils of the elect. No sooner was the discussion of the business before the meeting well under way than a truculent member arose and pointed a

LANO-PLANES MAY BE USED

A regular 24-hour air service between the British Isles and Canada by the summer of 1937 was predicted by Mr. F. Entwistle, head of the Overseas Division of the Meteorological Office, British Air Ministry, in an interview on Friday. Mr. Entwistle is on an extended visit to Canada and Newfoundland to study meteorological conditions in connection with such a service.

Asked about the route for the new service, Mr. Entwistle stated that it would start from Ireland, and make a direct flight across to Newfoundland. The bases there, although not definitely decided upon, will likely be either Botwood, on the eastern shore of Newfoundland, or Gander Lake, near-by, both of which provide excellent take-off and landing surfaces of protected water. Lowly Mustangs Hold Varsity Till Near End of Hectic Game

Forward Passes and Wide-Open Tactics Are Featured as the Western Mustangs Hold the Mighty Blues to a 13-12 Decision in Saturday's Game

SHERK'S PLUNGING AND FIELD RUNNING STANDS OUT GRAY, VALERIOTE, EDWARDS, TURNER, STAR

Western Leads 12-7 with Ten Minutes to Play and Only Inspired Playing, in which Holden and Marks Star Pulls the Game out of the Fire

By Jim Tiller

Throwing forward passes in the most abandoned manner, Western's White and Purple Mustangs did surprising things at London Saturday and nearly robbed Varsity's Big Blue favourites of their season's spotless record, only granting them a 13-12 decision in the dying seconds of what may have been the most wide-open game ever witnessed in Canadian senior rugby. The minute-hand was on its final trip when Cam Gray booted to the deadline for the winning point, climaxing ten minutes of superb football during which the Blues traversed half the field and scored a major in two successive plays.

Apparently despairing of defeating Varsity in an orthodox manner, the Mustangs threw caution to the winds and forwards to the amount of two dozen. Of these, only five were completed while Varsity intercepted four. Varsity, too, emphasized the aerial attack and completed seven out of fourteen attempts, with Hughie Marks well-nigh perfect in the pitching role. The Western passing plays lacked a finish seen in those of the Blues and the passing of Boyce Sherk, who otherwise played a magnificent game, was none too good.

Coulter and Connolly once again featured with their brilliant ball carrying and combined for several sensational gains in extension runs, always managing to wriggle through for a few more yards when everyone thought they were stopped. After giving an exhibition of perfect passing, Marks stepped into the limelight as a ball-carrier in the last quarter, when he tore around left end from the six-yard line and somehow got through a herd of White and Purple tacklers for Varsity's second touch. Cam Gray played his usual dependable game and gave Varsity an even break on the kicking.

NINTH CONSECUTIVE WIN

Bill Kibblewhite, veteran three-miler from Wycliffe, led a strong field of twenty competitors over the new 5-mile course at High Park Saturday morning to take first place in the intercollegiate harrier meet. Kibblewhite set a killing pace in the early stages of the race and finished with a lead of 200 yards over Howett of O.A.C. who placed second. The time was 27 minutes and 38.2-5 seconds, three minutes faster than the old record which was made on the Upper Canada course.

By virtue of scoring the lowest number of points Varsity will retain the Little Cup, symbolic of intercollegiate harrier supremacy. The Blues have won (Continued on Page 4)

PARADE TO CENOTAPH SLATED FOR TODAY

This afternoon there will be a mammoth peace parade to the Cenotaph. The parade will begin at two o'clock from the Metropolitan Church grounds and led by two women on white horses, it will proceed up Bay Street and is scheduled to round Queen's Park about three-thirty.

The demonstration has been organized by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, who have received the co-operation of a great many organizations. Banners and placards bearing all sorts of peace slogans will be carried at the Cenotaph. Mrs. Marjorie King, B.A., as a representative of the young mothers of Canada, will lay a wreath. Students have been invited to join the parade.

Sacrifice To What End?

Today we will stand in silent prayer in remembrance of those who made the supreme sacrifice during the Great War. Whatever outward form our observance may take, the inward reaction will be much the same. Among other thoughts which occur to us must be this one. The sacrifices made were such as demanded a noble cause. The cause, we are told, was to end war. From what we have heard or read, it is evident that the enthusiasm displayed, the efforts made, together with the sacrifices, had never before been equalled. It is marvellous how humanity can throw itself into a cause. The Great War is the most outstanding example of that.

There are still many causes which seek a united effort on the part of humanity. One is the eradication of slums. Relatively, the problem may be of less importance than the ending of war. Yet it is one deserving of a united effort; and there are other similar ones. If we could rouse even part of the enthusiasm displayed during the war, on behalf of other causes, what astonishing results there would be! Can the activity which humanity demands ever be turned toward constructive work yielding permanent benefits?

Open Meeting Closed to Press

Recently, the press was ejected from an open meeting of a student organization because of the delicate nature of the subject under discussion. This action has suggested to us a few reflections which we set down here for what they are worth.

Any organizations is perfectly justified in excluding the press from any of its meetings, but it is hardly fair to label such meetings "open". Surely no meeting can be termed open from which the press is debarred, and whose discussion may not be made public except through an official statement. If an organization holds an open meeting, the press has a right to attend.

Moreover, the time and efforts of the representative of the press who was ejected were entirely wasted, as they would not have been had the executive of the organization made it clear at the inception of the proceedings that the meeting was a closed one. This would have saved much time and argument on both sides. Doubtless the executive knew beforehand the subject which was to be discussed; if its nature was so "delicate", why was it only apparent half-way through the meeting?

Finally—the "delicate matter" under discussion at the meeting was one which has attracted far more attention than it deserves in the University. The decision to be made was one which involved no breach with either University officials or with those of any college society. Nor did it affect vitally the status of the organization itself or that of its members. Wherein, then, lay the "delicate" nature of the subject? It seems to us that the members of this particular organization have an exaggerated idea both of the importance of the subject and of the significance of their decision upon it.

Significant Phase In World History

The advent to Toronto of the Russian talking picture Chapayev reminds us once again that we have been contemporaries of one of the major occurrences of history. We dream lazily of the French Revolution and the American Revolution—failing to realize that an event pregnant, perhaps, with even deeper significance, has occurred within our own day.

The Bolshevik Revolution marks a turning point in the evolution of capitalism, just as the American Revolution was a landmark in the development of the British Empire and together with the French Revolution formed a taking-off point for middle-class liberalism. For the first time in history a revolt against the bourgeois individualistic system stands crystallized within its shifting mass. But whether or not the other nations will follow the Bolshevik example and throw off the controlling classes with armed violence, as Lenin so confidently believed, is highly problematical.

The new Russian state has already built for itself a new set of heroes and a new history. Just as the Americans quickly came to revere Washington, Franklin, and Jefferson, who made possible a free United States, and soon realized, too, the tremendous co-ordinating influence of educational propaganda, so the Russians have made their heroes of Lenin, Trotsky, and Lunacharsky. They have idolized a host of peasant leaders, symbolized in the figure of Chapayev, who sprang from the earth spontaneously to take command, when the people were calling piteously for leadership.

Russia is giving the twentieth century a dynamic ideology such as France gave to the nineteenth century. It is an ideology based, of course, on the social and economic trends that called it forth. Whether those trends lead inevitably to armed conflict, or whether the increasingly powerful labouring classes can attain a sensible share in government by evolutionary methods is a momentous question. Many of the people who saw Chapayev showed no hesitation in their approval of violence. Grown men and women clapped like children when they saw Formanov and Chapayev sweeping over the top of the Tom Mix to annihilate the villainous whites. To us the spectacle of internecine civil strife brought nothing but dismay. However urgent seems the necessity for force, the question remains: Can you erect a new civilization, a kinder and more humane civilization, on a basis of violence and bloodshed? The Great War, the French Revolution, the English civil war, all failed of that heroic endeavour. In the American Revolution we have an example of the achievement of ideals through violence. Still, the American Revolution was not a class revolt, but the clash of two capitalistic economies; and the geographical situation was unique. Can a class overturn a country by might and make of that country a happier land? Or is the gradual method of mutual Parliamentary resistance the path to glory? Russia—and England—will, before the game is played out, supply the answers.

Literary Talent Hard To Locate

With the publication of one college magazine and the imminent publication of another this is not an inopportune moment to discuss the greatest problem which confronts the editorial boards of college magazines in general. That is the unwillingness of the college students as a whole to interest themselves in their publication or to contribute to it unless driven to do so by their friends.

In a University the size and eminence of Toronto there must be literary talent. It is strange that these literary-minded people do not welcome the opportunity of getting their efforts published. College magazines are much more lenient towards aspiring authors than commercial ones. Yet the latter are deluged with contributions most of which it must be confessed are unfit to print. The reason is of course obvious, college magazines do not pay for their stories.

If the magazine editors were to give up their task altogether and refuse to publish a magazine at all the loudest protests would be heard from those who take the least interest. Much has been written about college spirit or the lack of it but perhaps no one is as great justification for lamenting its absence as the editor of a college magazine.

Jimmy's daughter out for a walk?

Never would our innate sense of respect for womanhood have permitted such an inference as that above to enter our head, but since a telephone call from the women's night staff dragged us out of bed at midnight Thursday to suggest this witticism,—be it on their own heads.

Sugar coating:
If we must suffer in silence the sensationalism of the downtown press, we do appreciate their using a little tact in foisting it upon us. We mean to say, the Tely's offering $1000.00 reward for the ravine murderer was a bit sickening as a circulation dodge,—especially since the police were taking their man into custody about the same time the noon editions were announcing the offer! But the Star's stunt of re-setting pages 1 & 2 and running off a single copy censored of all reference to the suspected man, for the sole benefit of his wife—that we call darn clever exploitation, and considerably less difficult to stomach.

A PLEA FOR PEACE

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

On this Armistice Day, when the bugles and bagpipes are touching our civilian existence with fire, I would make a plea for consideration of the ideal for which many soldiers died. The ideal of a world in which the social order would be one of co-operation and goodwill instead of competition and hatred was surely there in 1914, and it is with us today. Some of that vision of goodwill was displayed amongst the soldiers in the ranks and perhaps is not present in much of our present life.

But ways of grasping at visions change from time to time and with different individuals. This is displayed in (Continued on Page 4)

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Vic Juniors chalked up their second win of the season when they defeated the U.C. Juniors 19-10 Friday night. Vic were ahead all the way, with Mildred Sedgewick and Muriel Beaton doing most of the scoring. Joyce Tenenbaum was high scorer for U.C., but Doris Johnston also potted some of the losers' baskets. This sounds as if the forwards did most of the work, but such was not the case. The defence for both teams played a nice game. Only too often, the defence are like the line on a rugby team, and are ungloried and unsung, but anyone who plays defence can tell you that a good guard line is just as essential to a team as a brilliant forward string.

Inquiries have been made lately regarding the possibility of a women's track and field team. So far very few women on this campus have appeared as potential Stella Walshes, although a girl was seen on St. George Street one night last week, running up the road in a sweat shirt and a pair of shorts, followed by a band of catcalling fraternity men. So someone must be interested in field events, and we'd like to hear some further news on the subject. Another idea was suggested by one of the S.P.S. co-eds, who wants to take up rifle shooting, for what purpose we aren't exactly certain. If any one else is interested, we'd like to hear about that also.

Two basketball games will be played tonight in the O.C.E. gym (unless the specialists are still specializing). Nurses will play Vic Juniors at six o'clock, and the Meds outfit will meet St. Hilda's Juniors at seven. What about a little support at these games?

MUSTANGS HOLO BLUES TO CLOSE COLEMAN

the day. Only Sherk's hard plunging and spectacular broken-field running, not to mention his passing, kept Western in the game up till the last minute. Rider rates special mention for his plunging and good defensive work, and likewise Shales, who kicked for Western. Killoran played a fine game and completed three passes.

Western took a one-point lead in the first two minutes of playing, following a 30-yard run by Rider on a short-end fumble and a long hoist by Shales. Sherk made it 4-0 about five minutes later, kicking a placement from a bad angle 25 yards out. Then a 15-yard penalty to Western for holding and a 30-yard pass from Marks to Connelly gave Varsity the ball on Western's 17. An extension, Connelly to Coulter, and a plunge by Valerite took it to the one-yard line, and Isbister came on to smash it over for a major score. Western broke through to block the convert.

Shales kicked a point to make it 5-1 early in the second quarter. Varsity went on the offensive and worked the ball to Western's six-yard line by a forward, Marks to Holden, and good plunging by Valerite, Connelly and Coulter, only to lose it on a fumble. Cam Gray later kicked a touch-in-goal, and Shales booted a long one from middle field for a similar count to make the half-time score 6-6.

Beautifully long passes by Marks which the Blue receivers missed by heart-breakingly small margins featured the third quarter in which the only score was a single point for Varsity when Cam Gray's attempted placement kick from Western's 24 went wide of the goal posts.

Western went into the last quarter with a do-or-die attitude and for a few minutes completely outclassed the Blues. Plunging alternately, Sherk and Rider cracked the Varsity line again and again, and the London fans went hilariously wild when Sherk crossed the Blues' zero line for a touchdown which he converted himself to make the score 12-7 for Western with ten minutes to go. The remainder of the game was productive of better rugby. Western put up a stubborn defence, but Marks got a 30-yard pass down centre to Holden who went to Western's six-yard line from where Marks took it over on an extension run to even the score, while the Western rooters yearned in silence. Gray miss-

BLUE FUMBLES COSTLY

Two costly fumbles that went for major scores lost the Varsity seconds their chance for a tie in the league leadership when they lost 16-8 to O.A.C. intermediates on Saturday afternoon at Varsity Stadium.

The Guelph Aggies outplayed the local intermediates throughout the first half with Campbell kicking two singles to open the scoring. In the second quarter Campbell of O.A.C. kicked another single and then Smees ran a Varsity fumble over for a converted touch to make it 9-0. Then a 35 yard pass, Miller to Powell, enabled Jarvis to run it over on the next play for a converted touch for Varsity. 9-6.

In the second half Whitley Miller's attempted drop went for a single. Two more attempted drops by Miller resulted in no score and then Ripley booted a point. 9-8. Another Varsity fumble and O.A.C. kicked it to the line with Mitchell falling on it for a touch that was not converted. A Varsity aerial attack failed to click and with three minutes to go O.A.C. intercepted another Varsity forward and kicked a single to end the game 16-8. Miller, Jarvis, Ripley and Mustard displayed great style for Varsity while Campbell, Smees and Mitchell were outstanding for the Aggies.

Varsity: Mustard, Miller, Ripley, Thompson, Owen, Jacobs, Powell, Warren, Fennell, Jarvis, Gibson, Casson, Scott, Shaken, Willoughby, Boyle, Stringer, Baeley, Saell, Bridle.

Meds Remain Undeclared in Interfaculty Rugby Series

Jr. Meds continued to outclass the opposition in the interfaculty football series by downing Jr. S.P.S. 11-0 on Trinity field Friday afternoon. During the greater part of the game they held the School youngsters in check, and only once was their line threatened. This Meds team produced something unique in interfaculty rugby, a good kicker. Clinkett gained plenty of distance in the exchanges with Dishier, and on one of his hoists almost lost the ball when he kicked over the deadline for a point.

McKone carried the ball on two occasions over the School line to register ten points, in the first half. The playing of Barron for the aspiring doctors was outstanding. He repeatedly cracked the line for long gains, and was a hard man for the School ball-carriers to get past. The most effective offensive weapon for School was the forward pass, combination of Dishier to Galloway.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By Jim Tiller

Varsity beat Western and Queen's beat McGill, and that means there'll be a play-off game here next Saturday. Both Varsity and Queen's were called to win but few people outside of London thought the Mustangs could hold the flying Blues to anything so close as the 13-12 count, and it was not generally expected that Queen's would outclass the Redmen by as wide a margin as the 18-4 score would indicate. The biggest surprise of the week-end rugby, however, occurred here in Toronto when Ottawa Rough Riders handed Argos an 18-13 lacing to put the Scullers back in a tie with Hamilton Tigers for first place in the "interpro" league. Montreal lost another game, this time by 19-6 to Hamilton.

Bill Storen will continue in his coaching capacity at Western for at least two more years, it was announced at half-time in London, Saturday. Judging by the way the crowd cheered this announcement, Storen is as popular with the Western students as Warren Stevens is here. In any case, the Mustangs will be a contending team next year. Storen had only two of last year's regulars to start with this season and he must have worked wonders to produce the team that nearly beat Varsity. The Mustangs will not be greatly affected by graduations next May.

According to the self-termed experts, Western were not foolish in tossing so many forwards, Saturday. The inside dope is that the Mustangs knew they didn't have a hope in, well, they knew they didn't have a hope of beating Varsity if they played safe. So they threw passes wholesale on the grounds that they had nothing to lose and a game to win.

Varsity also experimented with forward passing plays and proved, at least, that Hughie Marks can throw a perfect spiral pass to practically any given point at precisely the right time. There was no comparison between Marks' passing and that of Sherk, who heaved them for Western.

The Blues did not play a consistent game on Saturday. At times they flashed a championship form that made the Mustangs look like a high school team. They seemed headed for a touchdown on a number of occasions only to lose the ball when within striking distance. The Blues can go places when they need to, however. After waiting before an inspired Western onslaught in the first of the last quarter and crumpling under the power plunging of Sherk and Rider to yield a touchdown, Varsity underwent a complete reversal of form and pushed the Mustangs all over the field to win the game after the Western rooters thought they were beaten. A team that can do this are champions at heart as well as by record.

The Blues' temporary let-down, if one goes so far as to call it that, may well be excused after four weeks of travelling at top speed in home-and-home games with Queen's and McGill. No team can be expected to be at the peak of their form indefinitely. Warren Stevens is giving the boys a holiday from practice this afternoon and promises to have them at their very, very best for the coming clash with Queen's.

U.C. GIRL BASKETEERS LOSE TO VIC JUNIORS

Vic juniors scored a victory over U.C. juniors on Friday at 6 p.m. in the O.C.E. gym. There was nice play on both sides, with Mildred Sedgewick for Vic and Joyce Tenenbaum for U.C. placing sensational long shots. The Vic forwards swung into action from the first, and brought the half-time score to 11-6. The game pepped up in the third quarter, and in spite of the efforts of the U.C. defence, the three-quarter time score was 17-10. Both sides fought hard, and made a final result of 19-10.

FORESTERS WHITEWASHED BY TRINITY GRIDDERS

A hard-fighting Forestry team made it interesting for Trinity in their interfaculty rugby game last Friday when they held the latter to a 4-0 score. The Red and Black were hard pressed all the way and just managed to repulse the Woodsmen's last minute thrust.

Trinity kicked off and forced the play deep into Forestry territory, being rewarded with a safety touch when Lien recovered a high snaf. A'Court added a single on a long hoist to make the quarter-time score 3-0.

The second quarter went scoreless, Trinity having the better of the play, but furring their chances by too many fumbles.

Forestry made a valiant effort to get on the score sheet in the last half, but were turned back each time. An attempted placement by the Red and Black that went wide of the posts and to the deadline ended the scoring.

VARSITY JUNIORS BOW TO WESTSIDES IN CLOSE GAME

Fifty-Yard Run is Feature of First Game of T.R.U. Series

BUTCH MACKAY INJURED

Varsity Juniors suffered their first setback of the season when Westsides defeated them 5-3 in a hard kicking game on the back campus Saturday afternoon. It was the first game of a home and home series for the T.R.U. championship and the Blues will enter the second encounter with a two-point deficit. "Butch" McKay sustained a painful injury in the final quarter when he was accidentally kicked in the mouth. Dr. Gossage believed the injury was not serious although he lost a lot of blood.

A fumble by Usatis in the opening minutes of play gave Westsides possession on Varsity's 10 yard line and a royal chance for a major score. However, Westsides were penalized for rough play after Robison had plunged seven yards on the first down and Provan dropped the oval between the up-rights for 3 points. The winners continued on the offensive and were again rewarded when Redpath galloped 50 yards on a fake play to put them in position for a second field goal. The drop went wide and rolled to the deadline for a single.

The Blues had an advantage in play throughout the second quarter and scored two points, both the result of blocked kicks. Sirdevan smashed through to block Wise's boot on Westside's 10 yard line and when the ball rolled over the touchline Wise kicked it past the deadline, conceding a point. Varsity tacklers found it difficult to stop Wise and McKay's ground gaining extensions in this quarter. Varsity's second corner came when Owen picked up a blocked Westside punt at the winner's 45, Owen and Fennel smashed through for two first downs and Isbister booted to the deadline.

Play ranged around midfield in the third stanza with neither team committing any grave mistakes. On one occasion Mumford hoofed to Westside's 2 yard line but the elusive McKay combined with Wise for ten yards and then added ten more through centre to take play out of the danger zone. Near the end of the quarter Varsity went on the offensive again and scored a point early in the fourth quarter as a result. Westsides added another single to make the final count 5-3 and give them a 2 point advantage for the return game.

WYCLIFFE LOSE TO KNOX IN VOLLEYBALL FIXTURE

In their first game of the season on Friday afternoon in the upper gym, Knox College defeated Wycliffe 15-2, 8-15, and 15-13, in an uninspired volleyball game. Knox took the first game easily, and lost the next one the same way. In the rubber game the losers overcame an early lead and almost took the verdict.

The highlights of the contest were Sinclair's scoring rally in the first game for the Presbyterians, and Wycliffe's comeback in the final session.

Lacrosse Results

In a fast, clean game of lacrosse five iron men from U.C. showed a vastly superior passing attack to take a rather easy victory from Dents by 13-3 in the big gym at Hart House, Friday afternoon. The teams split even on penalties with one each, both being given for minor penalties. U.C. were better organized and were constantly on the attack. White was the most effective man on the floor.

by, and this type of plane will transport passengers to New York or to a Canadian field, likely Montreal, or possibly Moncton, N.B.

The actual time of the trip will, of course, depend largely upon the meteorological conditions encountered, but it is expected that the ocean trip will take about 15 hours, with another 7-hour flight linking Newfoundland with Montreal. If this schedule is adhered to, the trip will be made well within the 24-hour limit.

Whether or not the service will be an all-year-round affair, or confined to the summer months, is not definitely decided yet. If a winter schedule is adopted, an alternate base will have to be established in the southern part of Newfoundland, as the northern part is frozen over in the winter. The southern sections are fog-bound in the summer, but free from both fog and ice in the winter. There is still a possibility that the ice difficulty will be overcome by the use of land-planes instead of flying boats for the Atlantic crossing. With the multi-motored planes now being developed, forced landings from motor trouble are believed to be a thing of the past, and so it makes little difference from the standpoint of safety which type of plane is used. In such a case, it may be found better to use the land-planes rather than constructing the alternate southern base.

If present plans are adhered to, the summer of 1936 will be devoted to a series of test flights over the proposed routes, with the regular service being inaugurated in the spring of 1937. Mr. Entwistle stressed the fact that Canadian aviation, at the present time without doubt less advanced than that in Europe, will receive a great stimulus from the new service, as a continent-wide feeder service will have to be established and maintained to supply the trans-Atlantic planes.

Dave Creighton, a newcomer to University running circles, ran a heady race to nose out his team mate Forrest for third position. Franklin of McGill placed fifth, being seconds behind Forrest. Heather and Burton, the other two members of the Toronto team, were seventh and eighth. Kibblewhite and Creighton earned first colours for their efforts.

PEACE SAID THREATENED BY ORIENTAL SITUATION

of exterminating Communism in China, the other great powers have not interfered with her, with the result that she has been quite successful along these lines.

The clashes between Russia and Japan are the result of loose discipline in the Japanese army and of the fact that the intelligence service of Japan has been staging raids to determine Russia's strength. Russia is well armed. Japan's finances are not good and she is busy with her interests in China. Hence Japan would not dare to attack today. However, the danger of such an attack in the future remains.

Clashes in the Mongolian border amounted to nothing more than a common habit of "loose-talking," said the general. Japan would like admission into this territory but, if Outer Mongolia were attacked, Russia would in all probability be forced to stand by her. Japan realizes this.

Because of the Ethiopian war, England and France are allied, for the present at any rate, and for all practical purposes Soviet Russia is an ally of France. Hence a new alignment of powers in Europe is most probable with Germany isolated for a time at least.

In conclusion, General Yakhontoff said, "At present Germany is not ready for war, but if and when she is, war in the Far East would be possible, with Germany attacking Russia from the West and Japan from the East, because Japan, although unable to do anything new, is not going to abandon her plans. Indeed as a Fascist state she cannot, since Fascism means war, and Japan and Germany must do as Italy has done. A united front is necessary: only by fighting Fascism, which is the breeder of war, can it be hoped that war may be averted."

In tempo with the times General Yakhontoff possesses little faith in the League of Nations as the name stands but bases his hope of peace on exactly the same alliance of powers that constituted the bulk of the Allied front in 1914.

"The British are now not only reconciled to Russia, but are even now turning to another Triple Alliance with Russia and France." The only thing which might tell against this Entente would be the prejudice of the Conservatives against Communism, which might lead Britain to throw her lot with Fascist Germany.

General Yakhontoff's definition of Fascism is rather all-inclusive. "What is Fascism? It is the attempt to salvage decaying capitalist systems. This of course expresses itself differently in different countries. For instance there is Nazism, what is that but the Fascism of Germany; in the United States we have the Agricultural Board; similarly in all the countries of the world this attempt is being made."

Rashly it was stated "How are we to fight Fascism, there is no Fascism in this country." And equally rashly the General parried, "You say there is no Fascism—have you seen Sinclair Lewis' latest book—'It Can't Happen Here', the title of course was sardonic."

"Varsity" Masthead Honoured By S.A.C.

The faculty was represented by Professor J. R. Cockburn of the Faculty of Applied Science, who responded to the toast to the University. The toast was proposed by S. F. Rae of University College. B. We have an apology to offer to Democritus III, whose letter to the Editor, of Oct. 9, was turned over to this department for attention some time ago, but was unfortunately mislaid. Says Dem the Third, "The author has considered submitting the following as a thesis in Biology, but reflection has led to the belief that it may do more good in other quarters. It is therefore respectfully offered, pro bono publico, to your esteemed publication." The "following" follows.

OBSERVATIONS ON A BIOLOGIST

A scrawny man with slick pomaded hair,
A toothbrush mustache, and a pompous air
Struts stiffly to his desk, as if to preach,
And, lest he stutter, measures well his speech.
He comes enfolded in a sable shroud
The better to impress the listening crowd:
A ragged lab-coat covered well enough
His colleagues, who were men of honest stuff.
Profoundly sorry that he must address
Himself to creatures infinitely less,
He peers above his glasses and detects
In those before him nothing but defects.
The only place a smile is seen to pass
Across his features, is the looking-glass.

Which sounds like a few good cracks at somebody. Thank goodness this is one libel for which they can't blame

Let's Go Places

An unusual, but very successful class party was presented in Wynmildwood last Friday evening when third year Victoria went "Oriental." Beautiful Chinese walls rolls and lanterns were used as decorations and much colour was added to the evening when some of the members appeared in true Eastern dress.

As the happy couples danced a continuous search was carried on by them for the mysterious Mr. and Miss X. Two highly amusing skits were produced, one being a clever take-off on a scene from San Toy. The guest artist was introduced as Miss Sally Fand, the Broom dancer, who simply swept the boys off their feet. After the party a large number adjourned to the Royal York, where by applying "Julep's" advice they enjoyed a few more hours of dancing.

MEDS SOPH-FROSH BALL

Medical freshmen had their first taste of University social life on Friday evening. In the Crystal Ball Room of the Royal York Hotel, the Medical Soph-Frosh dance was indeed palatable. Sweet strains of Len Whitehouse and his orchestra kept the big party always ready to dance, which they did until past two o'clock in the morning. It will be a dance that freshmen and even sophomores will be pleased to remember as a highlight of their college life.

stiff formality of the Tuesday evening series nor the uncritical formality of Mr. Reginald Stewart's Proms—somewhere between the starched-shirt and the shirt-sleeve.

The items played were the old reliable Mastering Overture, Tschai-kowsky's Piano Concerto in B Flat minor and the great Beethoven "Fifth". It is in such a program of familiar and undoubtedly great music that an orchestra can best be judged. The Toronto orchestra has not behind it the vast repertoire and experience of long-established orchestras in the big musical centres; but with such music they are thoroughly familiar. Sir Ernest MacMillan had no longer to struggle with musicians whose notes were buried too deeply in the score. They responded magnificently to his subtle conducting.

Ernest Seitz' playing of the Tschai-kowsky Concerto was gratifying. This music, expansive and luxurious, is well fitted to Mr. Seitz' bravura style. His technique did not reach the heights of Mark Hambourg's playing of the same concerto last season. He had not the Hambourg vitality and sometimes tried to make up for the lack of it by unwise use of the "Loud" pedal. His playing was notable for the great care lavished on it.

Beethoven's C minor Symphony is so well known that no one can hope to escape with a shoddy performance of it. It makes the highest demands on the ingenuity of the conductor and on the flexibility and precision of the orchestra. Sir Ernest's interpretation was inspired by profound understanding of the work and the orchestra played up to him faultlessly. Hardly once did the winds cause him apprehension. The orchestra appears to have recovered from the pulmonary disease which not so long ago seemed to be chronic. Never has the Fifth been better done in Toronto.

Symphony Concert On Saturday

Another thoroughly enjoyable afternoon is in store for students who attend the second "Saturday Afternoon Concert" to be given by the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, under the brilliant direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan, at Massey Hall, November 16th at 2.20 p.m.

When Sir Ernest, in a few remarks made at last Saturday's opening concert, characterized this new series as "Pleasant Saturday afternoons", he could not have defined them more correctly, as those students who were in attendance will testify.

For the coming Saturday afternoon concert, the distinguished conductor of the Toronto Symphony has arranged a diversified program. Smetana, Tchaikovsky, Schubert, Saint Saens, Debussy and Strauss will supply the material for this concert, with Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony", Debussy's "The Afternoon of a Faun" and Strauss' ever-charming Blue Danube Waltz providing the greatest appeal.

TRINITY AND U.C. FIGHT CLOSE LACROSSE BATTLE

Red and Black Players Score One Point Victory Over U.C.

Yesterday afternoon in the big gym at Hart House Trinity eked out a 9-8 win over the U.C. squad in a closely contested, hard-fought lacrosse game. The red and black team was without the services of one of its stars, Bell, and missed more tries than did their opponents. However, the lads from U.C. were handicapped by having only two substitutes available against three for the churchmen.

U.C. took to the fore in the first period, but lost it in the next, and did not get in front again, Trinity leading 4-3 at half-time, and 8-5 at the end of the third. For the last session the red and whites suffered a bad break when the ball bounced off Kidd into the net.

Birchell of Trinity was the best man on the floor, having six tallies to his credit, with Grant and Cox as the only other scorers. For U.C. Smith, Botsford and White were outstanding.

An opinion that Japan's power in the Far East is not as strong as outward conditions would seem to indicate was expressed by Dr. T. Z. Koo, of Peiping, head of the World Student Christian Federation, in an interview yesterday.

Taking Manchukuo as an example, Dr. Koo pointed out that all was not peaceful and quiet there. Japanese-censored reports stress the fact that a strong and just government is getting the confidence of the people of the country, but other reports of a different nature keep filtering through; reports of continual raids and conflicts, of trouble along the railway, of general

Miss M. Hillyer, of U.C., says that she has never worn "Lamees", but has on occasion worn "Snuggles". However, she stated that she had every intention of trying "Lamees". Isabel Small, of U.C., likes pink ones. Keith McKerrell, of U.C., says that "Lamees" are tricky, but has not yet had time to go into the matter. This period marks the introduction of two kinds of furniture, namely the peasant type and the court type. The wood used in the provincial farmhouse was oak but that used by the rich was walnut exclusively.

The furniture of the period shows the direct influence of Charles' travels abroad during his exile from England. Both he and his supporters resolved to

GERMAN CLUB OFFERS PLAY FOR TONIGHT

Professor Boeschstein is the Director of Comedy

Members of the University German Club are promised an interesting, not to say amusing time at tonight's meeting. Mr. G. Lenschow, Davis Exchange Student, has kindly consented to give some readings in German dialects. The highlight of the evening will be a play, "Die Kleinen Verwandten" under the direction of Professor Boeschstein. It is described as a "hilarious comedy" dealing with the adventures and misadventures of two country cousins on a visit to their more sophisticated city relatives. An excellent cast has been assembled, most of whom have had previous dramatic experience. The inclusion of Miss Rebecca Himmel will be good news to those who saw her outstanding performance at last month's presentation.

Refreshments will be served as usual at the conclusion of the meeting.

MONTREAL CO-EDS FEW IN NUMBER; TORONTO A HAVEN

"QUARTIER LATIN", WEEKLY

By Tom Irving
Montreal, Que.—With the first debate of the season over, last Thursday evening was set aside by all and sundry and students took their lady friends (or "blondes" as they call them here even if they are as brown as Minnehaha) to hear whether they should marry for love or marry for reason. Whether must to the contrary went on or not on the dark side of the footlights, reason won out, and femininity went home with the idea of using a few moneybags as well as powder.

One thing very much in evidence here is that the University of Montreal is scarcely a co-educational institution. Young French-Canadian regard Toronto as a haven for loveless youth. There are some women, to be sure, but very, very few. Yet when we expect, from experience with the Hart House

PLEA FOR WORLD PEACE STRESSED IN REMEMBRANCE DAY SERVICES

S.C.M. Conducts Ceremony in Hart House Theatre for Students

NON-MILITARY SERVICE

Christian pacifism and international good-will and co-operation were the key-notes in the first S.C.M. non-military Remembrance Day service in Hart House Theatre yesterday. A capacity crowd, which filled the theatre and overflowed into the foyer, was on hand for the simple yet impressive service.

The entire service was carried on by students. The Invocation, "Armistice" by Eunice Lehmer, was read by L. S. Kim of Korea, followed by the hymn, "Father Eternal, Ruler of Creation". The address, by J. Witsel, stressed the need for a militant type of Christian pacifism in the world today, a world torn with doubts and conflict. This was followed by a prayer by W. K. Howard of Canada, and the two minutes' silence. After the final hymn, "These Things Shall Be; a Loftier Race", the service was brought to a close with the poem, "Peace" by John Oxenham, read by Grace Price of Liberia.

Also on the platform were the members of the S.C.M. Peace Committee, Violent Tennant, Wilfred Smith, Margaret Quentin, and W. Service; the representative of Emmanuel, George Birthe, and the international students, Count Arthur de Bystrice, and O. F. de Bystrice of Austria, Mr. Takeo Na-

China Holds Key to Future

China, with its vast and enviable natural resources is steadily looming up as the key to future world history. Silently, but with increasing tension, a struggle has been going on there during the past generation for the control of the vast areas and swarming masses of the Celestial Empire. However, according to General Yokhontoff, distinguished authority on Far Eastern affairs, the logical struggle is not between Japan and Russia, as so many people believe. Russia has more land and resources than she knows how to deal with at present. Eastern Siberia is poor pickings for Japan in comparison with the fruitful, defenceless land of China. The real struggle for the control of the Far East is between the United States, Great Britain, and Japan, each of which has tremendous stakes in the Chinese Empire. The pressing question is, who is going to win the one remaining large scale source of profits that modern capitalism has left to develop.

The drive for markets has been accentuated in the last generation, according to many observers. Two and a half years have passed since the bottom of the depression was reached (March 1933) and we are yet far from the level of 1929. Previous depressions have not prevented us from climbing at least as high again as we were before the bad times set in. The world economy is now being stabilized, as far as we can tell, on a level below that enjoyed in the twenties. "The general trend," as the Research Committee of the League for Social Reconstruction puts it, "(is) apparently unevenly downward instead of unevenly upward as it used to be." The reason is the increasing industrialization of the nations and the consequent dwindling of markets. The last great, virtually untapped market is China and its provinces. Japan is cutting out huge slices for herself by main force. Britain and the United States are penetrating the country more quietly and peacefully, but no less efficiently. General Yokhontoff is fairly certain that there will be no war in the Far East in the near future; but if Europe does not precipitate a crisis before the Far Eastern question adjusts itself, China stands helpless, ready to compass the threat of war which must sooner or later crystallize across the Pacific.

Art Director Leaves Hart House

It is with deep regret that we hear that "Freddie" Coates has left Hart House Theatre where he has acted so long as Art Director. Mr. Coates is known all over the continent and his fame has spread to Europe as one of the most gifted men in experimental theatre art work. Hundreds of his costume designs and set designs adorn the walls of his many admirers. Last year when Robert Edmond Jones was here he was greatly impressed with a number of innovations that Mr. Coates had put in the theatre and many other visiting stage designers have praised his very fine work. The last great piece of work Mr. Coates did for Hart House Theatre was the lovely mural which now adorns the foyer. Students who have worked around the stage of the theatre will miss the genial art director and his helpful criticism.

We hope that Mr. Coates will not completely sever his relations with little theatre work in Toronto and that he will be able to continue his fine work. His successor will indeed have a very high standard by which to guide himself.

Intolerance A Social Hindrance

Voltaire, we are told, once said to Helvetius, "I wholly disapprove of what you say and will defend to the death your right to say it." This is an attitude of mind that is well worthy of emulation by all university students, particularly those who, having formed or having been spooned their prejudices and convictions in their early youth, are inclined to close their minds to all new ideas and their ears to all expressions of opinion not in harmony with their own.

Of the crime of intolerance are guilty alike communist and conservative students—their number is legion; they are found in every faculty and college and course. A student who says he is "on the fence" as far as politics are concerned is often scoffed at by such students but at least if and when he does decide on a certain policy he will have done so in a much more rational and intelligent manner than those all too numerous students who accepted their political and social beliefs before they were old enough to think and who talked and argued about them before they were old enough to reason.

We hear cries of intolerance, of restriction of speech, of repression of thought, from, for instance, our communist friends. But is there anyone more intolerant than a communist? His platform may or may not be sound—that is not for us to say—but he considers himself immune from the opinions of others and blindly repeats his dogmas, failing to recognize the possibility that his own argument may be fallacious. Politicians, and religious fanatics, of course, do the same, but at least they do not go about shouting for freedom of expression of opinion when in reality they are opposed to it. Far from being rational these intolerant advocates of tolerance, who rejoice in their own designation as "intellectuals", often, instead, rationalize and try to justify a belief long after they accepted it.

But we do not wish to ridicule these people. Their attitude, though undesirable, is largely a natural one. It is clear that this attitude must be modified, if not removed in order that there be achieved some sort of semblance of unanimity of opinion with regard to the most plausible method of remedying our social ills. Professor S. N. F. Chant in his book "Mental Training" diagnoses the disease "intolerance" and outlines a method of cure. He says, in part,—

We do not like decisions that are different from our habitual ones; and so arise narrow-mindedness, intolerance and vituperation. Intolerant people have permitted their habitual decisions to become so fixed that they refuse to recognize one of the most natural things in the world, namely, that other people may have just as much right to them as products of their experience.

How can one avoid becoming intolerant and biased? First, by recognizing the prevalence of habitual decisions in our own thinking. Second, by emphasizing the formation of those mental habits which stress the correct forms of reasoning and judging, rather than the conclusions reached.

We can quote here only a few brief sentences from this work but we recommend it to all who are interested in the betterment of mankind and their own thinking.

The history of persecution is a history of endeavours to cheat nature, to make water run up hill, to twist a rope of sand. It makes no difference whether the actors may be many or one, a tyrant or a mob.—Emerson.

Democracy having been won in the last war, the clarion call this time will be, "Support the League and World Peace."

Dr. Frank Brannen: Worry has reached proportions which make it as formidable a foe as many of the death-dealing plagues of the past.

Those who defend the constitution had better do so by making it meet the needs of modern times. A hungry man without a job is not much interested in tradition.

Premier Mussolini: "With Ethiopia we have been patient 40 years. That is long enough."

The most optimistic man in the world: Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, who even refuses to let motion pictures of war be sent into his country for fear the people might get ideas.

Rail-Bird Dept.

This is the tale of a male on a rail
Who might have been stuck there for weeks,

For sadly the male found the rail had a nail

Which punctured the tail of his breeks.

A horrible dent in the cents he'd been sent

Had been made by his rent and tuition,
So this indigent gent, at a game when he went

Avoided the price of admission.

His method had sense—'twas to perch on the fence

But that is the whence of his plight.
The nails in the fence ripped some vents in his pants

And he had to remain there till night.

They discovered at dawn the cook's apron was gone

From its hook at a neighbourhood
beanery,

And the student was gone from the fence he'd been on—

But his pants are still part of the scenery.

Correspondence

The Varsity invites correspondence but letters must be accompanied by bona fide signatures which will not necessarily be published. Letters should also be limited to approximately 300 words.

Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

I should like to explain some points in your editorial of yesterday, entitled "Open Meeting Closed to the Press".

The term "open", as used, applies and has always applied to the members of the V.C.U., and has never pretended to include others than the undergraduate body of the college. The term is used to distinguish meetings open to the entire body, as contrasted to meetings of executive committees, which are "closed" to the entire body.

The entire meeting was not closed to the press, insofar as the main matter under consideration was preceded by other items of business. The motion for excluding the press originated from the floor, and was not a matter for the executive, for, if the members had so desired, the press would have been asked to remain. I should like to point out that the official statement of the result of the meeting, as presented to the reporter, was not published.

As it was felt that the matter under discussion had attracted too much attention, it was the wish of the members to arrive at a decision and then, if the press so desired, to inform them of that decision.

I trust that this will prove adequate to explain any misunderstanding caused you.

Respectfully yours,

Ross H. Macdonald.

Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

They had two minutes silence today to remind us. Lest we forget. But I forgot. I forgot that 17 million died in the war to make us safe, to make the world fit to live in, to bring about a new world. At eleven o'clock I was writing because I forgot. I did not remember the sacrifice of countless men because it would hurt too much. I had been taught to forget by our government, by our newspapers and by our teachers.

Our government forgot and auctioned off the houses of returned soldiers today. No, they suddenly remembered, the sale is postponed until tomorrow. Is this land fit for heroes? Is this not forgetting?

Our newspapers forgot. They still claim capitalism under which our heroes starve is God-ordained. They still do the bidding of the armament manufacturers and the financiers who have not forgotten—not forgotten that war means billions for their pockets, and death, pain, misery and starvation for the warriors.

Our teachers have forgotten. They teach the glorious history of war and forget the starkness of the truth. They insult the truth sayers as unpatriotic, as liars, as young know-nothings. They tell us of the charms of brass buttons and khaki, of brass hats and bayonets. They forget the causes of war and the results of war.

Most everybody has forgotten. "War," they say, "we must protect our women and children, our mothers, our sisters, our sweethearts." "Peace," I say, "look at your women and children. Hungry and cold, insane with worry about shelter and how life can go on. Is this what we must protect them for? Or is this what we must protect them from?"

I forgot. Do not remind me. I remember too much. You remembered today, tomorrow you forget. Every day I remember to forget.

Let's Go Places

The blood and thunder dramas are with us again and there was only one disappointing feature in our first, The Three Musketeers, it was too short. Not that we revel in dueling, corpses heaped in the middle of a field, stabings in the back and such cute tricks, but a little variety and excitement now and then is to be relished.

The plot is famous (or infamous, according to your sect). Anne of Austria, gives her lover, the Duke of Buckingham, a little something for remembrance in the form of twelve diamond clips. Richelieu puts her in a position where it is necessary to get them back within a few days. Conster-

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

Vic Seniors chalked up their second win last night when they defeated the Nurses 46-7. Vic had little difficulty outclassing their opponents, and only sloppy passing kept them from piling up a larger score. The Nurses have plenty of enthusiasm, but have a lot to learn. The guards let their checks get between them and the basket, and the Vic forwards often had unobstructed shots at the basket. The Vic team are pretty hard to beat though, with Betty Jenkinson at centre and Myrtle Robb on the forward line. Mary Parsons scored two beautiful baskets for the Nurses, and Marjory Leslie and Irma Lang were high scorers for Vic.

The St. Hilda's seniors won in their encounter with the Meds, but had no easy time doing so. The Meds are a greatly improved team, and seemed to go through the Saints' six-man defence with great ease. Their shooting wasn't very good however, and the St. Hilda's tall guard line got most of the rebounds. With a little more practice though, they should give some pretty stiff opposition to the Vic and U.C. juniors. Isobel Wright played a very nice game for the Meds, and Kay Grubbe did a good job as centre on the Saints' team. Her agonized, "Cut, Saints, cut," could be heard all over the gym.

The Meds are pretty well organized now. They spend their Tuesday evenings in the Lillian Massey gym, playing badminton from seven to eight, and swimming from eight to ten. Further news in the swimming line is that there is little hope of an intercollegiate swimming team this year. Queen's are interested in the sport, but not to that extent. It seems rather too bad, especially as some of the best Varsity swimmers will graduate this year. Kay Brown, Marjorie Murphy, Phyllis Haslem and Vy Ord are some of these.

There will be three basketball games tonight at O.C.E. U.C. Seniors are playing Occupational Therapy, U.C. Freshies meet St. Mike's and U.C. Juniors encounter the Vic Juniors. St. Mike's will appear in the sparsely knee-length tunics which they wore the other night. They seem to have abandoned the shorts they wore last year, even though some of the team have objected. There has been a change in tonight's schedule. St. Mike's Freshies will meet U.C. Freshies at six o'clock instead of at seven, and U.C. Seniors and Occupational Therapy will play at seven instead of at six.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By George C. Vair

While Warren Stevens gave his team a rest yesterday the Tricolour were busy up in Ottawa taking on the Rough Riders, who upset Lew Hayman's teetering twelve so effectively last Saturday. Although the score was 11-5 in favour of Eliowitz and Co. the college gridders turned in a fine effort and will give all those people who have been day dreaming about the respective merits of the two leagues something to think about. The losers showed that they were no longer a defensive squad when they moved the yardsticks six consecutive times for a total gain of 71 yards only to lose possession 4 yards out when an attempted forward went wide in a desperate bid for a major score. Anyone who saw the Ottawa team in action here last week-end will admit that this is no easy feat.

Teddy Reeve must think his proteges need plenty of hard practice in preparation for this week's all-important game to send them in against the McMaster coached crew two days after a senior game. Lady luck favoured the Tricolour and no serious injuries were recorded. Harry Sonshine returned to his regular position at flying wing after playing at inside against McGill since "Killer" Weir was so unfortunate as to sustain a broken wrist in his last appearance at Toronto. That story would be good copy for Ripley!

Last week we read in the downtown press about the hold-out of a certain all-star hockey player and numerous people were heard to say that it was just the old pre-season publicity gag but it is beginning to look like the real McCoy. After all why shouldn't he get the extra $1,300 greenbacks when he is the "tops" in hockey and a valuable addition to any team? It seems to us that he is due for some back pay, anyhow.

While on the subject of hockey don't forget that the Varsity seniors open their season against Oakville at Ross Workman's-ice palace a scant week from tonight. "Ace" Bailey has been giving the boys a surfeit of pointers in the past fortnight and the team is fast rounding into shape. The defence, woefully depleted by last year's graduation, etc., is looking just o.k. Charles and Jeffries, who wore the blue last season, are pairing up very nicely together and both men are dangerous rushers. Besides these men McClelland, McPherson, Shipman, Lenihan and other players of senior calibre are out to make the team and everything augurs well for a good year for the blue club. However, we will tell you more about this later in the week.

With cold weather on its way the Mulock Cup aspirants will wind up their schedule today and play-offs will be arranged shortly. Dents, present holders of the trophy, are definitely the winners of Group 1 although St. Mike's and Sr. S.P.S. will be out to get some exercise in a scheduled game. The winners of the remaining two groups are as yet undetermined but will be settled this afternoon when Trinity and Jr. Meds battle it out for the supremacy in Group 2 and the Aggies engage Victoria for the honours in Group 3. If you have nothing better to do go out and see these teams who are playing a good brand of football before anything from 50 to 100 spectators every night.

TEACHERS TRIUMPH OVER SENIOR VIC

O.C.E. Students Victorious in Fast Volleyball Rally with Victoria Srs.

O.C.E. taught Sr. Vic a nice lesson in volleyball with a fast demonstration in the upper gym at Hart House yesterday afternoon. The embryo rod-swingers swung a dozen nifty fists to win in straight games 15-7 and 16-14. The presence of the "teachers" and disorganized playing quickly lost Sr. Vic the game. The second game was much speedier and better played. Sr. Vic made a good start for a 5-0 lead but O.C.E. evened it up and forged ahead in a long scoring run of 8 points. From then on it was a see-saw battle with O.C.E. the ultimate winners.

Sr. Vic: Fallis, Hillyer, Hazlewood, Colmer, Lyeock, Welch, Tiller, Gee. O.C.E.: Copeland, Whitwell, Stroud, Lancaster, Terry, Lossing, Beare, (pronounced BEER).

NURSES YIELD TO VICTORIA IN WELL CONTESTED GAME

Last night in the O.C.E. gym, Victoria Seniors played a fast game to beat the Nurses, 46-7. They made about six baskets in each quarter, but they lost many more potential baskets by shooting and passing wildly. The Nurses were getting the rebounds but they could do nothing against the superior floor-play and team-play of Victoria. The losers showed plenty of spirit and were pepping up in the last quarter, Mary Parsons putting in two lovely baskets. Irma Lang played well for Vic on the forward line and Hazel Brown and Ruth Leavens on the defence.

Victoria Seniors: Irma Lang (13),

Maisie Cowan (10), Ruby Barrett (2), Louise Prior (9), Marjory Leslie (12), Betty Jenkinson, Hazel Brown, Ruth Leavens, Doris Wagstaff.

Nurses: Mary Parsons (4), Orfa Busch (2), Lillice Reid (1), Muriel Tait, Ruth Hindmarsh, Alexa Broadfoot, Peggy Little, Jean Kent, Ruth Kent.

MEMORIAL SERVICE INSTITUTION HERE and also laid the corner stone of the Memorial Tower. Convocation Hall was the scene of the presentation to five men and one woman of honorary degrees in recognition of war service. Enthusiasm was still at a high level in 1921. The front page was plastered with photographs and messages from various dignitaries. A wire from the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Prime Minister of the Dominion; a two-column full-page message from Sir Arthur Currie, G.O.C. Canadian Corps, B.E.F., who was principal of McGill University, and a few words from Sir Robert Falconer, president of the University of Toronto; laudatory comments about Canon Scott, Senior Chaplain to the C.E.F., with his picture and message. The student body was overwhelmed with messages from all sources.

But the next year memorial services had slipped from a place of importance. The great news of the day: "Varsity Ties Intercollegiate Series," and "Glorious Victory over Queen's". Squeezed between two columns of jubilant accounts of the game was a short item concerning a memorial service conducted at Victoria College by Chancellor R. P. Bowles.

By this time the Armistice celebrations had become just an annual occurrence. In 1924 it was "brief and dignified" and in later years it was accorded its quota of space along with all the other University activities. It retained a fairly stereotyped form, the placing of wreaths in the Memorial Tower and the presence of the C.O. T.C. being features.

Not until this year was a change made. In 1935 the growing pacifist movement in Canada was manifest in the protest of the S.C.M. against militarist elements in the service. The disagreement led to an unheard-of thing: a strictly non-militaristic Remembrance Day Service under the auspices of the Peace Committee of the S.C.M. which is described elsewhere on this page.

With all this information whirling in his head, with grimy nose and heavy eyes, the reporter heaved the last file back into place and emerged into this war-mad world.

"China as a whole is a pacific people, who prefer to settle their differences by the aid of a third party, and this traditional attitude also characterized their relationship with Japan in the recent war," stated Dr. Koo. "As far as intellect is concerned, the youth of China says to arm and fight, but in their hearts, they have the age-old feeling for peace," continued Dr. Koo.

Ignorance of the background and custom of other peoples of the world is one of the chief difficulties in the path to world amity, stressed Dr. Koo, and the only way to overcome this, is to develop that feeling of respect and understanding that brings about international understanding. To be a really effective peace-worker it is necessary to overcome some of the prejudice and hatred existing among peoples today.

"We should look for the individual rather than the type, for beneath the skin we are really only one, with the same responses to joy and pain and sorrow." If we realize this fact, it will be impossible to go to war and kill each other. "The Chinese proverb says," and here Dr. Koo gave both the Chinese and English translations, "to be good to your friends, and in your enemies to recompense evil with justice." This is the primary object of all pacifist groups since after justice there is forgiveness, and this brings humility, the surest way to knowledge.

The speaker also drew the distinction between the position of the individual and the group in case of war. "As an individual I can and would refuse to take part in any war, yet at the same time I am a member of a social group whose duty it is to form an effective force to prevent any nation going to war."

Mr. Lockhart, men's secretary of the Student's Christian Movement, expressed the thanks of the organization and audience, and before concluding, Dr. Koo, an accomplished flutist, played several of his native folk-tunes on a bamboo flute.

ST. HILDA'S DEFEAT MEOS IN SENIOR BASKETBALL

Last night at seven o'clock St. Hilda's Seniors defeated another victory when they defeated Meos basketballers 18-3 in the O.C.E. gym. Meos put up a strong defence and intercepted a lot of passes holding the Saints down to 8-2 at half time. Ellic Wilson pepped up in the second half and played a super game, scoring 12 of the Saints points.

St. Hilda's Seniors: Edie Ardagh (62), Marg Macdonald, Ellie Wilson (12), Isobel Walbridge, Kay Grubbe, Mary Dignam, Jack Whiteside, Helen Burnham.

Meds: Dorothy Prowse, Mary Al-bertson, Isobel Wright, Margaret McFarlane, Lily Sugarman, Charlotte Horner, Jean Lang.

However, a School offside at midfield just before the end of the quarter started Dents steam roller going. Peterson and Oswald combined for yards and Peterson kicked to McArthur whose fumble was picked up by Dents on the five yard line. The quarter ended one play later.

On the second play of the next quarter Oswald crossed the Engineers' line for a major which he converted to make the score 6-0 for Dents. Singer pulled off a 40-yard run to the S.P.S. 10-yard line where he was tackled to end the half with the score unchanged. When play was resumed Singer made another run of 30 yards. As the third quarter ended Jack Garrett made the best run of the game for Dents of 60 yards, bringing the ball to the School

The dean of women at Hood College said in speech that not until the 19th century did young women find out that they could do things.

And in the 20th century they surely are making up for lost time.

And then, we wouldn't be quite on the job unless we reprinted that one from the Winnipeg Free Press about the Hindu who told the missionary that he wasn't particular about going to heaven as the place could not be much good or the British would have grabbed it off years ago!

debates, that they would surely be banned from a meeting like that, you are mistaken, for it is one of the events to which the weaker sex is admitted.

Toronto seems to be held rather high in more than one way. In the page devoted to exchanges in the student paper hardly a week goes by in which The Varsity does not get a showing. Of course it is all put into French, but it is the good old Varsity just the same. One thing about their paper is that there is always a cartoon by one of the students, eight by eight inches, glaring at you from the front page, announcing what has happened in the week gone past. "Le quartier latin", as it is called is not a daily, but comes out each Thursday. It has therefore more of the appearance of a literary weekly, which standard it tries to maintain.

Just at present they are starting an inquiry into "What is a French-Canadian?" Although we may have our own views on the subject, this should show if they coincide very much with what the natives think of themselves. Shades of opinion run from that they are the original chosen people and cannot understand how so many "Englishmen" landed to take the country away from them, to an active wish for co-operation. It seems that more and more people are beginning to realize that the chasm existing between Canadians of the two languages should be filled up. If there are things on which we are not of accord, then "agree to disagree", but keep us at any rate from having our donkey stolen while we fight out as to whose it is.

One article in the "Quartier latin" introduces the President of the University, the Hon. Senator Raoul Dandurand. He is a gentleman who has figured in the public life of the country for many years. He became Senator in 1898, and member of the Privy Council in 1909. Since that time he has been alternately Speaker of the Senate and leader of the opposition, according to the fate of his party in the affairs of the country. He has represented Canada at the League of Nations, and is perhaps the most famous Canadian abroad because he has made himself the champion of the minorities of Europe, circumstance perhaps brought on by his realization of his role as a French-Canadian. In 1925 he was elected President of the League.

The government of France has created him, by degrees, knight, officer, and commander of the Legion of Honour. Because of his remarkable talents as an orator and writer of note and his administrative qualities he has been signalized as fitting for the honour of presiding over the second university of Canada.

With this introduction to Senator Dandurand, President of the University of Montreal, we shall take our departure from these pages for another week.

its journey down University Avenue.

Here the biggest wreath of the day was laid in honour of the war dead. Thousands crowded around the City Hall steps and heard Mayor Simpson condemn Fascism as a foment of war.

Mrs. Marjorie King, a recent graduate of this University, laid a wreath and gave a short address as a representative of Canadian women. Mrs. King said in part: "I lay this wreath in grateful memory of the men who have fought to end war; in loving sympathy with the women who have taken their losses with fortitude, believing the loss was not in vain; and in the name of women who would now dedicate their sons to the cause of co-operation and intelligence in the relations between men, and who, having learned the lesson that war teaches, now firmly believe that the cause of peace presents a challenge worthy of all that is intelligent, adventurous and courageous in men and women."

Many Dignam, III Trinity, said that she would give her opinion next week. Marg McIntosh of III Trinity also said she imagined "Lamees" would be a little warm. Three other "Saints" were interviewed, and although they declined to give their names, the first said she liked long ones, the second thought they were a good idea, and the third said they were perfectly horrible.

There seemed to be a scarcity of Vic women on the campus, and consequently no statement regarding the matter was received from them.

Introduce the furniture that they had seen in France, Italy and Austria into England. This furniture proved to be not only more luxurious but also much more comfortable. Another interesting feature was that the women replaced the men as the interior decorators of the home.

Before this time a bedroom had consisted of many individual pieces but now the bedroom suite with its matching chairs and beds came into existence. One of Charles' favourites even had an entire bedroom suite made of solid silver.

The introduction of the round table to substitute for the rectangular table is a point worthy of note. Charles, tired of formality, decided on the round table with spiral legs where there would be no person sitting at the head and all would be equal.

Something that is seldom seen today and what was very popular in this period is the day bed. It was simply an elongated chair with a back that could be moved by chains. On this back there was the comfort of a cushion.

The entire period was almost a revolution as far as furniture was concerned. The oak furniture formerly used by the wealthy people was discarded and in its place there came beautifully ornamental walnut furniture.

nation. Constance, a maid-in-waiting, is forced to send D'Artagnon to London with a message and Richelieu sends Milady de Winter to appropriate a few of the trinkets before he arrives. The journey takes a good five reels of the film but the incidental music is so good that we were not bored. It is a pity that the picture ended in midair; no solution for the D'Artagnon-Constance affair was suggested; Richelieu was starting new intrigues and Milady was looking as self-confident as ever; also we saw very little of the famous three as the story of Aramis comes in the sequel.

The picture was remarkable for excellent characterizations. D'Artagnon was the swash-buckling young hero of few prohibitions; Richelieu was the cold schemer from every angle and in every gesture, a Richelieu not to be confused with Disraeli, Wellington or Rothschild; the King was all that we imagine Louis XIII to be and Harry Baur gave his usual fine performance as Treville.

The women, however, were outstanding for such a story of adventure. Constance was not only beautiful but she could act and sing although the words of her song were a little startling. The Spanish maid was a honey. Milady was very satisfactory, so much so that we regret not seeing her decapitated and fed to the sharks. The Queen made the best of a very difficult part.

One novel feature was that while the characters and stage crews were being recognized, there passed behind the printing a panorama of charcoal sketches of incidents in the life of a musketeer. Even the coiffeur was mentioned, Antoine, no less, though if the Duke's frousy blonde wig was of his making I don't wonder he wears a purple one himself.

The picture was fascinating as portraying life in France during the first half of the 17th century. The folk-songs were appropriate though we doubt if the ballet (a performance which defies description) would have been considered entertainment even in those times. There was, however, a perfect blending of comedy and adventure that made the film completely absorbing and the diction and enunciation was the best we have yet heard—or maybe we're improving.

Italy—Last night Italy protested formally to the League of Nations against its adoption of sanctions. The Egyptian government received a separate protest from Italy regarding its adherence to sanctions, Egypt not being a member of the League.

London—An exploding paraffin lamp caused a general fire alarm in St. James' Palace. The fire spread through the servants' quarters but was quickly extinguished by the arrival of the firemen. No member of the royal family was present at the time. The wedding presents of the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester were on display there, which added additional excitement to the fire.

Washington—Edsel Ford yesterday rejected the invitation of the United States government to share in a business-labour conference designed to discuss the needs for a new N.R.A. His rejection places the Ford Company in alignment with the rest of the automobile industry.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Toronto—Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the Barker Airport and five planes last night. Damage is estimated at $45,000. The airport is owned by the National Air Transport Co. Limited.

Berlin—The German government announced last night that it had laid an embargo on the export of raw materials to any nation, to become effective next Saturday.

London—The British Government issued a note last night in reply to Italy's protest against economic sanctions. The note denied Italian charges that her side of the story had not been given full consideration and indicated that Mussolini's contentions would have no effect on British policy.

Washington—A promise that the new Reciprocity Treaty between Canada and the United States would be challenged in U.S. Courts was made here yesterday. The Florida Agricultural Tariff Association will likely be the challenger in the test case.

Manila—Wireless message from U.S. destroyers announce that 27 of the marooned men from the British freighter "Silverhazel" had been picked up from tiny rafts in San Bernardino Straits. Only four women passengers and one unidentified man were left clinging to the rock upon which the steamer went aground on Sunday.

Tokio—Newspapers were warned not to publish anything concerning military affairs involving the latest China incident last night. A Foreign Office official claimed that Japan contemplates no military action in regard to the incident.

SCHOOL DINNER NEXT WEDNESDAY

Editor of "Saturday Night",
Mr. B. K. Sandwell, Will Be Guest Speaker

700 S.P.S. MEN EXPECTED

Down in the old Brick Pile across the lot the boys are getting ready for the forty-sixth annual School Dinner. About this season every year the ditch diggers get hungry and 1935 is going to be no fast, as there was a big crop in the West. So it seems that on Nov. 20th the Engineers are going to declare the sex factor nil and start to equate or dissipate as the opportunity occurs.

Every Schoolman can go (we wonder who'll fetch the two female Essie Essers). He doesn't need a girl and doesn't need to play bridge. All he needs is enthusiasm, his appetite, and his usual defence against dinner speakers, of which an imposing array are being provided.

On this occasion, however, said armour might well be dispensed with as prominent among the guests will be Mr. B. K. Sandwell, editor of Saturday Night, economist and political writer who should prove most interesting. The committee will also present for your approval "The One Man Band", said to be the only male organization of its kind in the world.

Tickets are now on sale and about 700 of the good men and true are expected to assault the Great Hall, Hart House, take "the women" out of the old adage "He who loves not wine, women and song, lives a fool his whole life long", and proceed with a stag event for men only.

ANNEXATION NOT INTENDED

After a Stormy
Session

The Radical government of the Victoria College Debating Society was upheld last night by a vote of 47 to 29 on the motion "Resolved that this house favours closer affiliation between Canada and the United States." It is the present government's first time in power, and as was decided by the failure to secure a vote of want of confidence, not the last.

The hon. member from Runnells, speaking for the government, asserted that Canada's fulfilment lies to the south. Affiliation with Great Britain means entanglement in European affairs.

"We are not pleading for annexation with the United States," he said. "We do emphasize the fact that the future of Canada is inextricably bound up with the United States, to our own advantage and necessity. Culturally the same is true. We are American whether we like it or not. Our constitution is based on that of the United States—and any parts that are first on that of England are American in practice."

The speaker quoted the influx of

"LOFTY" WILLIS STARS

Guelph, Nov. 12—The powerful Victoria football squad entered the inter-faculty playoffs by handing the husky Guelph team a 12-6 lacing this afternoon. Vic, after playing lackadaisical football for the first half of the struggle which saw the Farmers surge to the front on a 6-0 wave, came back strong to completely out-play their opponents and smash ahead 12-6. The game was remarkably clean for an inter-faculty encounter, only two penalties being imposed by the officials.

Right from the kick-off the big O.A.C. team rushed the Vic lads off their feet and seemed to be headed for an easy victory. Lofty Willis had some trouble getting his kicks away. Vic got started off on the wrong foot when Hodgetts happened to deflect a punt outside, Guelph getting possession only

At the Eaton Auditorium last night, Charles Batcaelvar, a graduate of Harvard University and former secretary at Home-Assizes for the Philippine Islands, lectured on his travels in South America, Africa, India, China, Japan, Siam and Java. The lecture was illustrated by brilliantly coloured slides. Several of the foreign customs provoked laughs from the audience. The practice of tying bells on their wives' toes so that they know just where they wander was common among Indian husbands of higher caste.

Pigs ride like princes in China. The Chinese, instead of making their pigs walk, weave a basket around each pig and draw them to the market in rickshaws. Also in China, you can see wheel-barrows with sails on windy days.

JR. DOCTORS UNDEFEATED

Junior Meds defeated Trinity yesterday afternoon in the last game of their inter-faculty rugby fixture by the score of 7-1 at the Trinity field. By virtue of their win Junior Meds, who have won all their games this season, qualify for the playoffs.

Meds scored a touchdown in the first five minutes of the game as Trinity fumbled on their 20 yard line on the initial play of the game. Fleming ran around the right end for the 20 yards which gave Meds the touchdown. It was not converted. On the kick-off Meds fumbled and Trinity recovered the ball. On their third down they attempted a placement kick which was blocked and recovered by Meds. Meds had the advantage in the first half due to their superior plunging and Clin-kett's fine kicking.

In the second half Trinity came to

This year the Students' Council will once more make loans up to one hundred dollars available to students of the University. Starting in January these loans will be granted to needy students in the two final years. The loans are handled entirely by the Students' Council and in Mr. Macdonald's opinion are an important and necessary function of the Council.

Dr. Ryerson Joins Moynihan in His Campaign for "Mercy Killing"

FOR HOPELESS CASES ONLY

Admits Great Danger of Abuse but Only Merciful to Incurables

Dr. Ryerson, Dean of the School of Medicine, has aligned himself with some of the greatest scientists and ecclesiastics of England, including Lord Moynihan, president of the Royal College of Surgeons, in declaring in favour of euthanasia, or "mercy killing." "When the patient is beyond all medical or surgical means, and the suffering is intolerable, he should be allowed, if he so desires, to substitute for the lingering painful death one that is speedy and painless," Dr. Ryerson told The Varsity yesterday. "Cancer is an example where this sort of thing is often justifiable," he added.

In answer to questions, the Dean stated further: "The greatest danger about euthanasia is, of course, that it is liable to great abuse. There is no official movement for this purpose in Canada, though it is widely discussed. I quite agree that if it could be controlled and supervised by men of unquestionable reputation there are certain types of cases where this practice is justifiable. I would be willing to lend my support for a purpose of this kind."

In England, the official organization is called the "Voluntary Euthanasia Society" and among its founders are listed such names as Julian Huxley, the famous scientist; Dean Inge and Dean Matthews of St. Paul's.

Lord Moynihan himself has prepared a bill to the effect of legalizing the "right to die" and the administration of euthanasia, which he plans to bring before parliament. This bill requires the patient to fill in a certain application.

BERTA HAMILTON DISCUSSES HOUSING

Suggests Plan to be Carried Out without Expenditure by Government

DR. BRUCE REMEDY QUOTED

Leading her S.C.M. group at the Women's Union yesterday, in a study of the housing problem as resulting from the machine age, Miss Berta Hamilton stated she thought a housing plan might be carried out without additional expenditure on the part of the government. "We are paying vast sums as relief money," she said, "and to what end?" Unemployment increases, living conditions grow worse—and the hideous results of this—crime, juvenile delinquency, infant mortality and sickness, eat up vast amounts.

The ordinary man gets between $600 and $700 per year which enables him to pay about $16 a month rent. Where, for this money, can he keep his wife and children? Obviously, if wages are not raised he must have help from somewhere, or fall rapidly backward, and with him everybody else. For it is his money which needs to circulate.

Miss Hamilton indicated the fundamentals of Dr. Bruce's housing plan as a remedy. The plan itself would cover some years. Fair wage clauses would be included in the contracts and building laws to be strictly enforced. Each house would have proper lighting, one room per person, good heating, sanitation, and a room the window of which opened onto clear ground. Playgrounds and parks would be provided.

Why Object To Pro Athletes?

Periodically some enterprising news writer takes it upon himself to make some startling revelations within the realm of sport. The nature of these revelations is often to the effect that the competitors are not amateurs. Football is at the present time under fire in this regard, while at seasons of the year when they are most popular, hockey, baseball and boxing in turn have accusers level their fingers at the organizations and allude to their tainted amateur standing.

In any organized sport one of the things which must be avoided is deception. The public must know who they are watching, but that is the extent to which they are interested. Few, if any, men, who have had to worry about the source of their groceries at some time in their careers, will have anything of a derogatory nature to say regarding the quaint habit of athletes taking bonuses. What they will invariably find objectionable is the manner in which the athletes are forced to take their allowances.

The moral right of officials of sporting organizations which produce $15,000.00 gates at regular intervals, to tarnish a competitor's reputation by alluding to him as a "professional", is not quite clear. Neither is the position of the sports writer who makes his living by recounting the deeds of the athletes to whom he makes disparaging references. Just why it should be wrong for the men whose efforts make such gates possible and incidentally fills the officials' pay envelopes, to receive some sort of compensation for the services is questionable. Sooner or later people will realize that the number of athletes outside the college circles who get nothing for their work are very few. And those few are regarded at present as lacking an adequate business sense. Why then must they continue to take what is in effect their just rewards, in an underhand manner.

Amid the prevailing business conditions when jobs are hard to get and just as hard to hold, it is unfair to ask athletes to continue playing and practicing throughout the entire season just for the good of their health. They are taking chances on injuries every time they go on the field. They are jeopardizing their jobs as a result of the time they lose. Pictures in the paper offer small consolation for bruises and permanent disabilities. Certainly few if any of their critics are likely to devote much time in the interests of the public should their salaries be suddenly stopped.

Why then is the term "professional" so objectionable. The avowed professionals are just as highly esteemed as citizens as the amateurs. If men are worth money to clubs, why should they not be paid in a frank manner. Much of the fuss which receives attention at the present time results from men receiving salaries for sharpening pencils. The sooner men realize that the matter of taking money or not for services in sport should rest chiefly with the person concerned, the sooner may we look for elimination of many of the unhealthy scandals to which the present system gives rise.

On the Highway

Drives to ball games often remind us of things that might be but are not, concerning this province's highways. Ontario highways are notorious as a hodge-podge in which the traffic of 1935 mixes with the traffic of 1905-1925, and where road and mechanical conditions of the 1930's are governed by laws of the 1920's the inference being possibly that the 20's are considered a happy medium between 1905 and 1935!

Ontario's highways are praised the continent over wherever motorists gather, but the sun probably never sets on those who at one time or another have roundly cursed her highway administration. The woods of North America teem with hapless victims of our famed 35-mile speed limit and our celebrated small-town speed traps, and the names are legion of those who have crept along for slow, dreary miles behind some lumbering vehicle, with opposing traffic too heavy for passing.

These conditions belonged to their own period, but they are years out of date now. The 35-mile speed limit harks back to the day when, with gravel and dirt roads, early auto construction and high-pressure tires, "the old boat" crack right up or get a blowout if I took her over forty." But now we have concrete roads with non-skid surfaces, banked at the turns, and STOP signs on every side-road. Tires are double-walled, low-pressure, over-size, minimizing danger.

Furthermore, the high-compression engines of many cars are designed to give minimum gas consumption at speeds between forty and fifty miles an hour, and with automatic over-drives and four speeds ahead, such as appear in a number of 1936 cars, driving as slow as thirty-five is actually wasting gas! With all these factors working against it, the speed limit is of course customarily broken all over the province, but always with the danger of being picked up and hit for a hefty fine.

The small-town speed traps, another crowning nuisance, are tending to disappear. But there are still plenty of places where you can roll along at a comfortable clip, with nothing but countryside in view, and suddenly find yourself in the toils of the law as the uniformed sniper on his motorcycle leaps out from ambush—and you find in your hands another summons, to pay through the nose or to get fixed somehow. The answer of course is that in the midst of the wilderness has been placed a "TOWN OR —, SPEED 20 MILES" sign, and two or three miles farther on you find the town. This is literally true, even on main highways, and we can name at least one town of over 5,000 not very far from Toronto that still uses this fruitful source of revenue. It's a little like watching university students stealing dorms on Halloween to see a grown-up town of 5,000 up to such childish and annoying pranks.

The third torment mentioned a moment ago—slow vehicles on crowded, narrow main highways—has grown till it probably displaces the speed-traps as Highway Bore No. 2. Farm vehicles are for their own safety keeping more and more to the side roads. Nor can the transport trucks be blamed, for their sallies are mainly nocturnal.

Solutions to these problems shouldn't be hard to find. Ninety per cent of auto accidents, even where speed is a factor, are due principally to defection on the driver's part, either in driving or in maintaining his car in safe conditions.

Speed out of control is murderous, but under control is harmless. A wholesale cleanup of physically and mentally unfit drivers and cancellation of permits would take time and expense, but would pay for itself a thousandfold in lives, property, hospital bills and insurance saved, and would make the roads safe for the merely fast driver who honestly has a place to go and wants to get there. Such a cleanup would entail giving each driver an expert test—not necessarily a driving test—along lines designed to reveal defects in co-ordination, eyesight, hearing, judgment and other vital qualities. Several places in United States use such methods, with marked success. As for maintaining cars in condition, compulsory brake and lights tests are a big step in the right direction.

The speed-trap nuisance is a matter of local morals, but could easily be abated by appropriate legislation.

The slow-vehicle pest has been solved in a number of places by simply penalizing the slow drivers instead of the fast—a minimum instead of a maximum speed.

The Royal York Hotel is a very busy place and just so that you may be able to keep track of everything that is going on the management provide a large glass-fronted bulletin board at the entrance to the elevator corridor on the ground floor. On its black cloth background movable white letters spell out the events of the day, under such suitable headings as "Conventions", "Dances", "Dinners", etc., and since the local hostelry is no mean establishment it is likely that many noteworthy events have thus been listed for the brief edification of those invited, those with Julepian intentions of attending anyway, or those merely curious. We suppose that notice of civic luncheons for visiting heroes, princes and movie stars have momentarily gleamed upon this ever-changing record. We suspect that on certain occasions, such as the Shriners Convention and the Canadian Corps Reunion, when everything in town went completely haywire, the Royal York Bulletin Board simply gave up in despair. We do know that last Friday evening this silent town crier (Continued on Page 4)

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

Toronto Symphony

Last night, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra presented a brilliant all-Russian program. In fact, it was too brilliant. To put two such strenuous works as the Scheherazade Suite and the Petroushka Suite on the same program was extremely bad judgment. The brilliance of either would have been more effective against, say, the rich dark plush of a Tchaikovsky Symphony. The whole program, from the first note to the last, contained but few moments of calm—and they were tinged with the oncoming storm.

The opening number, Borodin's Overture to "Prince Igor" was packed with the barbaric splendour of the east. Its orchestration, by Glazounov, is its best feature.

Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Scheherazade Suite" is one of the finest pieces of program-music. It narrates some of the adventures from the Arabian Nights. This type of work, although light in character, is a severe test of orchestral technique. The frequently reiterated themes are tossed from instrument to instrument with the lightning rapidity of a baseball team warming up. The third movement showed the (Continued on Page 4)

Let's Go Places

Jack Benny is back at Loew's starring in "It's in the Air", and instead of a columnist he is now an aviator, who makes a flight in a balloon. In between times he makes flights from the police and conducts little money-making schemes which are picturesque and profitable if not polite. The story is that of a soldier of fortune, who, in search of his wife, who dislikes his economic methods, finds her in a town, becomes involved in a plan to ascend in a balloon. While his original idea was to shake his sponsors down for pennies, he collects the money and then goes through with it. His matter of factness is attractive and he is well supported.

Wallace Beery goes sob sister in the other half of the double feature, a pretty performance regarding an animal trainer in the circus whose wife leaves him and takes her son with her. His search and final meeting with the son, whom he found in a military school after the death of his mother, gives him a chance to play an emotional role which is unusual but none the less well handled.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By E. S. W.

In their second appearance on the basketball floor, the Therapists again showed up as a very classy team. Although the U.C. Seniors defeated them 30-26, the Therapists played a beautiful game, and had a two-point lead at half-time. Considering the facts that they have had very few practices, and that U.C. have four intercollegiate players on their team, the Therapists deserve a lot of credit. Ruth Carlyle and Phyllis Webb each scored ten points for them, with Hetty Smith contributing the other six points. For U.C., Kay Brown and Joan Romeyn did most of the scoring, with Jean Atkinson and Helen McGarry doing nice work on the defence.

The St. Mike's-U.C. Freshies game was very close, but a last-minute free shot by St. Mike's gave them the game 27-26. Sunny McLaughlin played a beautiful game for the winners, and Marg Glass scored for the losers. At half-time the score was tied fourteen-all, and it was anybody's game. There were a good many fouls, and free shots were handed out liberally. The Vic Junior-U.C. Junior game was not very interesting to watch, lack of speed and sloppy passing featuring the play. U.C. were very unlucky in their shots, and Vic took the game 18-4. The Victoria guards played a better game than their forwards, and did some neat work.

Vic also cleaned up in the opening baseball game, defeating St. Mike's by 28-8. This was rather a surprise, as St. Mike's beat Vic 6-4 in the exhibition game they played last week. Last night St. Mike's lost their heads, and made some very costly fumbles, while the Vic team ran around the bases. Catherine Mulville was the only one of the St. Mike's crowd who seemed to remember what it was all about. The others were rather confused by the tricky pitching of the Vic girls, and during the confusion, Vic went to town.

THERAPISTS DEFEAT U.C. SENIORS 30-26 IN BASKETBALL

Last night in the O.C.E. gym U.C. Seniors played a fast game to defeat the Therapists by a score of 30-26. The passing and shooting of both teams was excellent but by intercepting the U.C. pass the Therapists were able to secure a 2-point lead by half-time. In the third quarter play centred around the U.C. basket and they were successful often enough to obtain a count of 20-18. In the fourth quarter Phil Webb sank two lovely shots for the Therapists but U.C. finished in the lead with a score of 30-26.

IRISH VICTORIOUS IN FINAL GAME

St. Mike's Defeat Sr. Meds 3-1 in Last Rugby Tilt of Season

KAVANAUGH KICKS WELL

In a game that meant little besides completing the schedule, St. Mike's Fighting Irish scored their second victory at the expense of Sr. Meds, winning 3-1 on the back campus last night.

In the first quarter the play was held around midfield until the doctors started an offensive that yielded a point from Caldwell's toe.

St. Mike's opened up the play in the second quarter by tossing a barrage of forwards, many of which succeeded, but Meds managed to avoid a major score. However, Kavanagh made sure of the tying point by kicking to the dead line towards the close of the session.

Play dragged somewhat in the third, fumbles being more frequent and neither team made much headway.

In the fourth period St. Mike's secured possession when a Meds extension on their own 20 yard line went astray. The Galloping Gulls earned another point when Caldwell failed to run out Kavanagh's punt. A determined march by the doctors was cut short when a bad snap cost Meds 30 yards, putting the Irishmen on the offensive. Play fluctuated again then Red Finan fell on a loose ball on Meds 15 yard line. Kavanagh accounted for the final point of the game by kicking the oval out of touch.

For St. Mike's, Kavanagh's kicking and Finan's tackling proved effective. Neilson's secondary work, with Caldwell's kicking and running were outstanding for Sr. Meds.

ST. MIKE'S DEFEAT UNIVERSITY FROSH BY NARROW MARGIN

St. Mike's led U.C. Freshies by one point in one of the closest games of the season last night at 6 o'clock in the O.C.E. gym. Both sides were evenly matched and it was anybody's game from start to finish. The feature of the match was the shooting of Sunny McLaughlin for St. Mike's. U.C. forwards were also superb. Marg Glass put in some excellent lift shots. The U.C. defence intercepted the passes of their taller opponents well, especially Jocelyn Rea. The two teams kept up to each other point by point, making it 7-5 at quarter time and 14-11 at half time. In the third quarter play was fastest, and a good many free shots were awarded to both sides, to give a three quarter time score of 19-17.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

By W. A. Crochower

With the completion of the final three games of the Mulock Cup schedule yesterday three teams will line up for the dash down the home stretch! Dents, last year's titleholders, Jr. Meds, who opposed the Dental gridders in the final for the Cup, and Victoria have successfully navigated the rapids of the regular schedule. As is the custom in previous years one of the three lucky squads will get a bye which will take them right into the finals. The other two twelves will meet in a preliminary affair, the winner having the right to enter the final interfaculty rugby fray of the season. Of the three survivors, the Jr. Meds squad has the most impressive record for the season's work. Besides having a great offensive punch as shown by their impressive total of seventy points scored they have held the opposition to the small total of three points. The Rosso-coached youngsters make up a fine squad, if you ask us. Reports lead one to believe that Rosso's men are just itching to meet Dents again in the finale just to get revenge for last season's defeat. However, we feel sure that Victoria will have something to say in the final drive.

With Varsity's first home game scheduled for the first of next week "Ace" Bailey is moving quickly these days getting his charges in shape for the opening bill. On Friday night the Blue mentor will send his squad out against Oshawa's Toronto and York Mercantile League entry down in the Motor City in an exhibition tilt. The game should serve as a good prep for Tuesday's opener and will no doubt allow Coach Bailey to make his final decision as to the personnel of the Blues' senior squad. In the meantime Bailey has called for the first practice for Varsity's juniors tonight at 5.00. Varsity will again have a squad in the Major circuit of the T.H.L. This squad serves as the testing ground for up and coming senior hockeyists and if the Blues continue to enter a squad in the T.H.L. they'll reap the benefit in a couple of years.

Warren Stevens now has his squad in what will probably be its final week of preparation for the 1935 season. At present it is very doubtful whether the Blues will continue in the Eastern rugby playoffs. This is of course taking it for granted that Steve's crew will down Reeve's Limestone City crew and that, my friends, is taking an awful lot as all said and done. Those of you who were thrilled by the Queen's-Varsity game two Saturday's ago had better get your tickets early because there'll be a big rush for the prized pasteboards later on in the week. Student season ticket holders will probably be asked for an additional small sum for Saturday's game. In last Saturday's tilt with McGill Reeve did a lot of shifting around of his men and with excellent results too. Moving Sunshine up to the front wall will tend to make it stronger than ever while the shifting of big Zvonkin to the outside wing berth will mean that Coulter and Connelly will get an awfully large number of hard jolts because big Abe is a punishing tackler and a pretty good one too.

Mac McCutcheon is already sending the basketball prospects through their preliminary drill in preparation for the long cage grind. Stevens of course will not be out until next week and in the meantime Mac is sending the lads here and there in a tune-up campaign. Practices will continue every day in the week, Saturdays and Sundays excluded, from 5 until 6.15. Mac has a large group out and has already started the weeding-out process. Early elimination of candidates has some good points but more often it cuts off a lad who with the proper tutelage might be developed into a star.

Those of you who are interested in jui-jitsu will be glad to know that two Japanese students at Trinity have agreed to conduct a sort of study group in the wrestling room in Hart House. The two lads are quite adept at the art and each has the Black Belt which is some kind of an insignia denoting high standing in jui-jitsu circles. At any rate the two Japanese gentlemen are quite willing to show Varsity students the whys and wherefores of their art so that if any of you want to feel like the man on the flying trapeze drop around some afternoon.

The long and heavy football season invariably takes its toll of injuries and without respect of persons. The latest entry to the injured ranks is Johnny Munro, Queen's star half. Johnny sprained his ankle in practice yesterday and is no better than an even bet to start in the crucial game here Saturday. Should Munro be out, the picture would be entirely changed. He has led the Tricolour offensive all season, and without him the backfield could not hope to function to its capacity.

VOLLEYBALL GAMES DULL AND ONESIDED

St. Michael's Defeat Junior Vic, Sr. Meds Wallop S.P.S. 15-1 and 15-8

In yesterday's volleyball double-header played in the upper gym at Hart House, St. Michael's defeated the Jr. Vic squad 15-12 and 15-5 in the first contest, while in the second encounter Sr. Meds walloped Sr. S.P.S. 15-1 and 15-8.

The first game was a rather dull affair with neither side showing any signs of scientific volleyball. Powers of St. Mike's, however, did some good spiking.

Led by Krakauer the Sr. Meds squad easily outplayed the Schoolmen, who showed no team work at all.

portant harbour of Tiberias. Dr. Bingham commented on the remarkably small fish caught in the Sea of Galilee. According to the pictures there could be no impressive fish stories credited there.

The scene then shifted to Egypt. "If you do not visit the shops at Port Said, the shops will visit you," said Dr. Bingham. "The people come out in boats. If you pay the first price they might fall back into the water."

From Port Said, you go by train to Cairo. At Cairo is a railway station almost as fine as the Union, and hotels that compare favourably with the Royal York.

two yards out and on the next play plunged over for a touch which was converted.

The scarlet and gold clad boys came out determined to do or die in the second half. Every department started to click. Willis plunged consistently for huge gains through the line while Pratt, Cooper and Colmer ran the ends for yards time after time. With but a few minutes to go to the end of the quarter the Taylor-coached team plunged the pugskin up the field and Willis went over for the major. Holman converted to tie up the game.

During the last quarter the Vics really showed their superiority and play was within striking distance of the Guelph line continually. Holman put the game on ice for the visitors when he recovered a Guelph fumble deep behind the touch line. He converted to give Victoria a 12-6 lead with only a few minutes to play.

The whole Toronto team played as though inspired in the last period. Outstanding were Willis, who played great football the whole afternoon both defensively and offensively, Holman, who gathered in 7 of the winners' points, and Pratt and Colmer combined for many smart dashes. Vaughn, Hodggets, Gillespie and Ellesse also turned in star efforts.

THE FOLLIES DAY BY DAY

One of the most important things we have to tell you is that the University College Follies Revue in the Hart House Theatre on November 23 will be reviewed only by the first lucky 1,000 to arrive. Two gentlemen will be presented, but as the theatre capacity is an even 500, the answer is our opening sentence. As each find with her little arrives, she will be escorted with her escort to the big gym, until the tickets-off yells "no more, hold!" This doesn't mean that you can't do that sort of thing, but it will mean that theatre capacity has been reached, and that no more will be allowed in the gym. till after the concert, there's dancing plenty for those who miss the show. The rest of the evening will be devoted to the orchestra, water polo and diving exhibitions, etc., and eat for all. Everything will be wide open after 10.30.

You will make it your business to make your money to Hart House by 8.45, and you'll be among those who can say to their grandsons in 100 years: "I was at a great evening—the Follies of 1935 were the best I saw!"

bore, among other inscriptions, the words "Students Administrative Council", and that upon following its instructions we sat down in Private Dining Room No. 9 to a very enjoyable steak dinner, with gravy and speeches. True, the bulletin board failed to warn us that our old Jarvis compatriot, George Ignatieff, would, in the teetering process of delivering a few remarks about The Varsity, be so good as to congratulate this department on "continuing to excel in Cattiness". Neither, on the other hand, was the bulletin board aware that as a result of this banquet we would uncover the story of perhaps the most illustrious event which it has ever taken upon itself to announce.

It was our friend Berkley, the eminent collector of wedding placards, who was moved to reminiscing of one summer's arduous experience when he and a few other stalwarts were urged from their vacation idleness to the building of a massive breakwater of concrete and stone, designed to protect the Berkeley stretch of beach from the effects of time and tide. The inducement offered by the head of the house to his son & co. was a bang up feed at one of the big hotels upon their return to town. The job completed and the summer over, the boys were duly invited to drop down to the York one evening and pull up a chair for a really classy dine-out, which they did to a man. It was just as the assembled lads, looking strangely unlike day-labourers in their dinner jackets, were about to move along out of the lobby, that glorious chance caused one of their number to glance at the bulletin board, and to discover amid the listings of various Associated Plumbers Guild Conventions and Loyal True Blue and Orange Lodge (Local 532) assemblies, the inscription—as nature made them and have come very little into contact with the white man. There are about 60,000 of them left, mostly living on the northwest coast. Until a few years ago the native race of Australia was in danger of extinction but the women have recently come into great demand as domestics and the possibilities of the race surviving have increased now that they have found their place in modern life. Deserts are a very important problem in a geographer's life, said Dr. Taylor. Most of Australia and a large part of the United States is too dry for normal growth. Contrary to popular belief deserts are not all sand; there is always some vegetation and only in small areas is there nothing but sand. Irrigation is possible only in the wettest areas, Dr. Taylor pointed out, in speaking especially of the American desert.

In South America Dr. Taylor chose Colombia as the basis of his discussion of the conditions of settlement. Colombia, settled in 1502, was probably the first land settlement in America. Up the mountains beyond the Spanish colony live still relatively uncivilized Indians in their houses of wicker-work filled with mud. These Indians are very short, the shortest tribe in fact in the world with the exception of the real pygmies. They are the survivors of the original population of the country and have inhabited little Spanish culture. The oxen they use are of Spanish descent but they have no pottery and the loom they had before the coming of the Spaniards.

Dr. Taylor discussed the effects of glacial action on the Alps and then went on to talk about the Nile which he called one of the most fascinating rivers of the world from a geographer's point of view. There existed a canal into the Mediterranean from the Nile about 600 B.C., the forerunner of the present Suez though in a somewhat different position. He concluded his remarks with an account of some of his experiences in Antarctica, the seventh continent. One of the important discoveries made by Captain Scott's Antarctic expedition, of which Dr. Taylor was a member, was that of formerly unknown fossil fish embedded in the ice of that far southern land.

melodic capabilities of the orchestra. The finale is a tremendous burst of power.

The tone-poem, "Night on the Bare Mountain", is a short work of macabre gaiety. In it, Moussorgsky, a master of orchestration, thoroughly enjoys himself.

The "Petrouchka" Suite, by Stravinsky, is an example of modern Russian music. It is vividly impressionistic particularly in the last movement, which catches perfectly the incessant, many-tongued hubbub of a carnival. The wind section of the orchestra found difficulty in coping with some of Stravinsky's obscure harmonies.

The program concluded with the dramatic "Marche Slave" by Tchaikovsky. This work was well interpreted, from the ominous opening movement to the crashing conclusion—leaving a dazed and slightly weary audience.

Trinity Dramatics

The second of a group of six one-act plays, to be presented during the current year, will be staged tonight at Trinity College by the Trinity College Dramatic Society. One of the highlights of the evening will be a short speech by Mrs. Nancy Pyper, the new director of Hart House Theatre.

Under the able direction of Miss Muriel Robertson, rehearsals for tonight's production have shown great promise. The play is entitled "The Trysting Place" and comes from the pen of the famous Booth Tarkington. Frances Evans, Ruth Cockeran, Desiree Seale, Don Curzon, Adam Griffiths, Ken Kernighan and Rockborough Smith are the talented cast.

The scene of the play is laid entirely in the lobby of an hotel. Apparently several ladies, some of them strangely related to one another, all have appointments with gentlemen friends of theirs; for some reason or other none of them wish the others to know of their appointments and the entrances and attempted concealments of the men in question bring about an extremely farcical situation that is eventually capped with a brilliant and unexpected climax.

The speech by Mrs. Pyper will start the ball rolling tonight at seven twenty in room four of the college. There will be refreshments after the play.

The Masquers Club

The Toronto Masquers Club presented their thirteenth production, "Tons of Money", to a city audience last night at Margaret Eaton Hall. A large house enthusiastically applauded the clever presentation of this three act farce with its ridiculously complicated plot and its riotous humour.

The presentation was not as smooth and complete as it might have been but was very satisfying and pleasing in its portrayal of a young couple's confused existence after inheriting a legacy and then losing it. An explosion, a drowning, a couple of imposters, a solicitor, and the inevitable butler and maid are all jumbled together in a concoction that undoubtedly produces humorous sequences.

The wit and humour—there were even some wisecracks of very ancient vintage—of Will Evans and Valentine, the authors, was mutilated on occasion by the forced attempt at brilliance on the part of William Graham who portrayed Aubrey Allington in the lead. Young Mr. Graham had a pleasing appearance and a dazzling smile of amazing proportions which he kept flaunting in the audience's face like a lantern. Which was very annoying.

The lead part of Aubrey Allington was especially created by the author for Ralph Linn, the great English comedian, and in an effort to emulate his great predecessor, Mr. Graham overdid himself in melodramatic stances, grimaces and dashing smiles which were more ridiculous than humorous. His own undue enthusiasm for the part, his unique bounding about the stage and his forced vitality gave a rather rough edge to the entire play.

The rest of the cast handled their parts adequately enough. Constance

HERE are the advantages that make Dominion Ring Books longer lasting, more convenient to use and better looking:—

Steel Hinges, anchored right into the leather cover, not only make the book flat-opening for easy writing, but prolong its life at the point where ordinary books wear out first.

Fibre Back, coloured and grained to match the leather, prevents scuffing.

Flattened Steel Rings have greater capacity and are easier on punched sheets. Available in 3 or 7 rings.

Yet with all these advantages Dominion Steel Hinge Equipment costs no more than ordinary ring books.

American literature into Canada as a proof that our culture is essentially American. "British culture embroiled us in the last war. British or European culture is as bad for Canada as British or European politics."

Miss Wilma Stanley, the first speaker for the opposition, retorted that if British culture embroiled us in the last war, surely American capital made it possible to continue the war. She argued that the tendency of the American public was to be interested in the sensational, and that the materialistic attitude of the United States is foreign to Canada. Closer affiliations between Canada and the United States mean the acceptance of this point of view—and everyone knows that it is bad policy for a woman to marry a man to reform him.

The second speaker for the government, Miss Edith Lewis, pointed out the advantages of reciprocity with the United States and Canada, and argued the right of Canada as a nation to decide her foreign policy. Mr. Bill Stickleland, as second speaker for the opposition, said that the war affiliations in its fundamental meaning implies a subordinate position for one party concerned. "Canada would become a sort of junior partner, if not an office boy, in the firm of United States and company," asserted the hon. member.

Vernon, as Louise Allington, the wife, was splendid and William Anderson as the gardener brought a dry humour to the presentation which was very satisfactory.

Betty Boylen, of Victoria College Dramatic Society fame, gave a fine performance as Jean Everard who had three bearded husbands return from Mexico to claim the legacy—but two of them fortunately were impostors. There is no moral to the play and the plot is too confused to really understand but it is superb light entertainment. It is under the direction of E. G. Sterndale Bennett and will be presented again tonight.

romance of the daughter of that household with a respectable but bashful boy. The cast was more than adequately supported by Professor Boeschstein, complete with beard, Arthur Wells, Arnold Andrews, Fanny Schwartz, Rebecca Himmel and Margaret Davies.

A short reading of samples of low German prose was given by Mr. G. Lenschow, Davis Exchange Student, followed by a description of German labour camps. Many amusing experiences were related and Mr. Lenschow dispelled any illusions the audience might have that German labour camps are prisons.

The meeting concluded with refreshments and the singing of German songs under the direction of Professor Holt.

life with some deceptive line plunging and a few forward passes. However, any advantage gained by completed forward passes was offset by those which were intercepted by Meds. In the third quarter each team scored one point. In the fourth quarter Trinity tried desperately to get within scoring distance but the Medical team was too strong for them. Clinkett kicked another point for Meds just as the game finished.

Meds: Allen, Broadhead, Caven, Graham, Miller, Wright, Belton, McGoey, McKone, Clinkett, Fleming, McCullough, Mahood, Moore, Jameson, Lindsay, Barron, Marchant, Bean. The House Committee of Hart House at their meeting last evening were called on to deal with an unusual problem when a request to be allowed to visit the House was received from Abdul Bey of Constantinople. The committee considered that the presence of the harem which would accompany the potentate was not conducive to the good order of the house and so declined the request.

Advice to the lover is offered by Dr. Floyd Ruch, of the University of Illinois. "Whom do you love the best?" will get better results than "Do you love me the best?" according to the professor.

He says that the former brings better results because a question of subjective preference creates doubt while the question of simple behaviour does not.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Cairo—Anti-British riots broke out in Egypt again last night. The disorders which began when students celebrating Independence Day clashed with the police, were continued last night when 30,000 natives attended a demonstration and started rioting. The disorders spread to outlying points of Cairo and resulted in two deaths and many injuries. It was not till late at night that the riots were apparently quelled.

Guest speaker at a regular Economics and Finance lecture to second year Schoolmen yesterday afternoon was Dr. Griffith Taylor, professor of geography. After being introduced by Dean C. H. Mitchell of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, Dr. Taylor told his audience that he had once been an engineer—a statement that provoked loud applause—and had later turned to geography. He stressed the practical side of geography, and the use of diagrams, especially "block diagrams", or three dimensional pictorializations, to impart geographic information. Illustrating his talk with numerous slides, Dr. Taylor gave examples of the use of

President Thinks "Hall of Fame" Impracticable and Unnecessary

Many Features Deemed More Advisable Than Proposed Scheme of Honours

OFFICIALS HONOURED

Impossible to Appraise Human Virtue States Principal Wallace

"The idea of a Hall of Fame in the University of Toronto is practically impossible," stated President Cody. This remark resulted from a discussion of the Hall of Fame which New York University has had for several years. Every five years the names of three men are submitted to the Hall of Fame and busts made to commemorate them. A committee of 101 distinguished men and women, of many walks of life, act as electors.

"There are two different systems now in use at universities for the commemoration of great men," President Cody pointed out. "In English universities as in our own university it is the custom to commemorate by portraits, those who hold official positions of service to the University, such as presidents, chancellors and professors. This is done by contemporaries of the men thus honoured.

"On the other hand the people filling places in the Hall of Fame at New York University are not elected by contemporary judgment, but on a standard of permanent greatness. I consider a selection of this sort almost impossible," said President Cody. "There are many things I consider more necessary than a Hall of Fame in the University of Toronto."

Principal Wallace of University College stated his lack of enthusiasm for the idea. "Awarding honours of that kind is very badly done by human beings, and this method of appraising human virtue is absolutely impossible."

PERIOD COSTUMES FOR MASQUERADE

Home-Made Outfits Taking Edge Over Those Rented from Costumiers

WELL QUALIFIED JUGGES

The lady at the Hart House Costume Department was busily sewing a bit of lace onto the velvet cuff of a Colonial gentleman's waistcoat when the ever-inquiring Varsity reporter entered the room. There were costumes in profusion—some of them strewn around others hung neatly on hooks. One section contained all of the costumes so far reserved for the Hart House Masquerade. There were clowns, pirates, sheiks, and Spaniards hanging side by side. Almost every man's costume rented so far belongs to one of these four groups.

The girls are going largely for Victorian, Colonial and other period gowns. But, as the wardrobe mistress sadly explained, there haven't been nearly as many costumes rented this year as in those previous. Of course, many are making theirs at home. That ragbag search is always lots of fun and the result is always amusing and sometimes strikingly original. And of course, there are Mallabars and several other places in the city, where costumes may be obtained.

The judges this year are particularly well qualified to pass approval on the masqueraders. They are H. S. Palmer, the artist, and Mr. Martyn Baldwin of the Art Gallery. This event takes

Spreading of Faith Bossuet's Ambition

Rev. Father Bondy Tells Club of Life of French Author and His Books

At the initial meeting of St. Joseph's College "Le Cercle Français", Rev. Father Bondy, honorary president, gave an appreciation of Jacques Bossuet and his literature.

Above all a man of action, Bossuet was, at the same time, pre-eminently a priest. His works without exception were written with but a single aim in view—to bring more souls to the knowledge of his faith. Not ambitious personally, a great many of his important works were written solely for the education of the Dauphin, of whom he became tutor in 1670. The most notable of these—"Discours sur l'histoire universelle"—later ranked among the historical masterpieces of French literature. The latter part of Bossuet's life was devoted almost wholly to controversial works in defence of the Catholic faith.

His "Oraisons Funébres", however, were mainly responsible for elevating him to his present status in French letters. In this field of literature, he brought about a complete revolution in style and treatment of subject matter. Where precocity had reigned, Bossuet adopted an eloquence, born of an utter simplicity of language and a scrupulous knowledge of the subject of his eulogy.

POETRY UTILIZED TO HEIGHTEN PLOT SAYS E. A. DALE

Interest in Othello Chiefly Lies in Handling of Story

'POETRY RELIEVES HORROR'

"So far from poetry and drama being different things, in poetic drama, and especially in Shakespeare, drama has reached its highest point," said E. A. Dale, professor of Latin at University College and president of the Shakespeare Society of Toronto, in his speech last night at the Reference Library Auditorium. Although the title of the address was "Othello and its Source", Mr. Dale explained that "Othello" was being used merely as an illustration of the real subject, which was the use of poetry in drama. "The great difficulty of modern dramatists," he said, "is the restraint and constraint of realism"; the playwright "has to represent the realities of life in the midst of a battery of dramatic conventions."

Stage conditions demand that much that can be explained in a novel must be implied in a play, and the conventions evolved by this need hamper the realistic writer. The use of poetry, however, may prove a liberating factor.

"Othello," according to Mr. Dale, is taken from an old Italian story whose plot is almost identical. The point of interest is not, however, the similarity of the plots, but the diversity of the treatments. As a simple prose tale,

Dr. Bingham Discusses Routes Important in Alaskan Development

"It was not so much greed as a desire to explore the horizons of life which inspired the miners of '98," declared Doctor H. Bingham, in the course of a talk on Alaska yesterday afternoon. "Were it not for such men the spirit of adventure and of wonder would die out."

The speaker followed the course of the Alaskan steamers up the Pacific coast, touching on the growing importance of Prince Rupert as a shipping port. "As the great Peace River district is opened up, a railway will be necessary to link it with the coast, and Prince Rupert is the logical terminal," he said.

Dr. Bingham outlined the routes usually taken by miners during the great gold rush and discussed the hardships they experienced, of which such

NEW PLAZA HOTEL NEARS COMPLETION

Plans Show Many Conveniences will be Installed for Patrons

FREE VIEW OF STADIUM

The Queen's Park Plaza apartment hotel gradually nears completion, but will not open for about another three months, possibly longer.

The tentative plans of the interior were given to The Varsity by Mr. McMillan, engineer supervising the construction work. In the basement there will be a coffee room, kitchen and a dance floor. On the ground floor will be a cocktail room, sandwich room, shops, and the foyer. Offices for professional men will occupy the second, third and fourth floors. Floors five to sixteen will be the room and apartment floors; apartments ranging up to five and six rooms. The seventeenth and top floor will be taken up by a penthouse dining room.

When asked the possibility of a large ballroom in the hotel Mr. McMillan stated that there had been rumours in regard to the matter, but there was nothing concerning such a room in the plans as they now stand.

Mr. McMillan said that he watches the rugby games at Varsity Stadium and never pays a nickel. He merely goes up to one of the upper floors and

Miss Ruth Home Describes "William and Mary" Period

Yesterday afternoon at the Museum, Miss Ruth Home delivered a lecture on the "Period of the later seventeenth and early eighteenth century in furniture which is commonly known as the 'William and Mary' period. With the use of slides Miss Home pointed out the main features which characterize this period. These included the use of bright colours, the influence of the East, the introduction of the grandfather clock and the knee-hole desk, and the use of veneered furniture. She outlined the differences between this period and the "Queen Anne" period, with which it is sometimes confused. At the close of the lecture questions and comments were given by members of the audience. Next week's lecture will conclude this series, Miss Home stated.

Some weeks ago The Varsity carried the announcement of the appointment of C. R. Delafield to the position of unofficial student representative to the Board of Syndics of Hart House Theatre. Yesterday, in an interview with The Varsity, Mr. Delafield announced his intention of starting a University Dramatic Society to function supplementarily to the various college and faculty dramatic organizations already in existence. "The idea," he stated, "has often been thought of as starting a dramatic society that will embrace the entire University; that will have the opportunities, unattainable by the smaller faculty and college club, of making use of the entire dramatic talent of the University; that will be able to act as the central board for those smaller societies in such matters as arranging dates at the theatre and avoiding

Student Status At Theatre

The Board of Syndics of Hart House Theatre have been doing a great deal, lately, to win favour with the students of the University. We have been given, during every Hart House production of the present season, one night to be absolutely our own, when we can see that production for an outlay of fifty cents; we have been given unofficial student representation on the Board, and have been told that we will be welcome to act in small parts in Hart House plays; if we like we may help shift scenery behind the sets.

Some weeks ago we learnt the real attitude of the Board of Syndics to the students. Apparently they are willing to do all in their power to co-operate with the undergraduates—if it will increase box office receipts proportionately!

Now the opinion of the Board of Syndics is that the undergraduate should go to as many plays as possible; that he should take a deep interest in Dramatics; but that he is incapable of himself being an actor. In point of fact, they seem to hold the view that a student is only good as an actor if he continues to take part in amateur High School productions before audiences composed of parents and friends. The Board believes it impossible that a student of a mere twenty or so summers should be able to play the part of the worried father, the maiden aunt, or the expectant mother.

Furthermore, the opinion has been voiced by members of the Board that Hart House Theatre, the theatre that runs under the quadrangle of the most prized institution of the University, the theatre that obtains its fame through its connection with Hart House itself, and that obtains student rates and privileges in all its projects, that this theatre is no more a part of the University than the Royal Alexandra!

Now there are some undergraduates, with an intense interest in dramatics, who feel the mistakenness of such an attitude. For these there is a solution. The foundation and successful operation of a University Dramatic Society, embracing the whole student body, producing its own plays and, in general, acting in the role that Hart House Theatre itself should rightly occupy, that of fostering Dramatic art on a larger scale and more comprehensively than is at present possible. Perhaps, with a little co-operation, we might even beat Hart House at its own game, force the theatre to realize the fallacy of its present situation, and once more possess the gem that has been lost to us!

British General Elections

Today they are repeating in Britain the spectacle staged here one month ago. The British people are electing a new government. There is this significant difference in the two performances. In Canada the choice was between two parties, both of which represented substantially the same interests; in Britain the electors have to select between two widely varying parties, representing really different interests, that of labour and that of capital.

Everyone expected that Stanley Baldwin would dissolve the House as soon as a substantial war scare arose, and when Italy became menacing enough the House was promptly dissolved. Everyone too, is convinced that the Conservative Party—alias the National Government—is going to be returned with a comfortable majority. Major Clement Attlee, recently appointed leader of the Labour Party, admits the prospect. Stanley Baldwin, in his own modest way, also admits it. The chances are, however, that the Labour representation will be sufficiently strengthened so that His Majesty's Government may once more have an effective Opposition.

Interest will centre on the dwindling figures of three of England's greatest men. Ramsay MacDonald, running in a workers' constituency, anticipates the possibility of defeat; but he is too ruggedly proud to flee away to a safer base. Sir Herbert Samuel will lead a Liberal Party into the new House of Commons, presumably. Or will he? This election should show whether "Liberalism (in Britain) though it speaketh, is dead." Then there is that old lion rampant, David Lloyd George, saviour of his country in time of war and would-be saviour in time of peace. He is fostering a Reconstruction Party of his own. No one doubts that the Welshman himself will ride home; but will he be a rider in the wilderness? All these doubts and anticipations will be settled today in Britain's general election.

Professional Amateurs

Whether we like them or not, the amateurs are with us. On the radio and on the stage they tell their life story and sing and dance and do tricks and play various instruments, all rather badly. Yet they get paid for it.

An amateur used to be a person who did something only because he liked doing it, whether in creative artistry or musical performance. This year it appears an amateur is a novice who has nerve enough to parade his talents before audiences who clap madly no matter how poor the performance. In fact, the radio audiences seem to prefer those artists who receive what Major Bowes would call the gong, or what the man on the street would call the business, which means that the amateur performance was even worse than usual and that the sympathy of the audience has been aroused.

In our modern connotation, the amateur performer, if he happens to be a hockey player, is a person who is paid for playing hockey in an amateur league. If he is a rugby player, he gets paid for playing rugby for the love of it. If he is an all-American, he may choose his University by the financial condition of the prospective Alma Mater. So the question arises, when is an amateur an amateur?

The only thing of which we may be sure is that Charlie Conacher is a professional because it says so in the papers. Whether this is because he has never entered an amateur contest or because he gets paid for playing hockey is a difficult problem.

The amateur complex seems to have been brought about by the eternal search of the entertainment business for new talent. In place of the secretly held and mysterious auditions and tryouts, the search has become more open and above-board, the actual choice of entertainment being left in the final analysis to the people themselves. The choices which are made are not the most discriminating possible. Singers are chosen because they are out of work, or are waiters without a chance of advancement. Why they should be recommended for advancement in the musical field is another of the idiosyncrasies of the amateur complex.

But the amateurs are here, and while Major Bowes sits back in his chair in New York and keeps one eye on the stream of gold which is coming into his pocket, and the other on the eight or ten groups of amateurs out on the road who are being amateurs at a very high salary, they will continue to be here.

Nazi's Recognize Christianity

An official statement recently released by the Nazi powers announced that the government favours the establishment and full recognition of "positive Christianity". This statement is characteristically vague and may be given several interpretations. But whatever its real meaning is, it cannot include the worship of primitive Teuton divinities which for the last several months has been so stringently observed by the German aristocracy.

It is to be hoped that these wiser counsels also will prevail in modifying and repudiating other policies of the Hitler regime which have a distinct flavour of social conditions which existed in the dark ages.—Virginia Long.—Oklahoma Daily.

The other day on one of our rare (we swear it) visits to this venerable journal's Women's Office, we found stacked upon the wall and addressed to this department, the following tender tale. Rather doubtful that its being published here will accomplish the purpose desired by the writer, we give it to you for its face value.

C-C

"A maiden weeps; her heart is broke; she is undone. Listen, Oh Yorker, to the tale of woe. A lady, young, demure and kind, on entering our midst to study, after much consultation on the values and merits of the work decided to join The Varsity staff. Her diligence, her cheerful disposition and her acquaintance with the elementary rules of English grammar, made her the delight and ray of sunshine of the mast-head.

"Two years ago this autumn, the tragic tale begins. Our cub, note book in hand, set out to cover a club meeting. The gathering of young intelligent men culled from the best that Knox, Wycliffe, and Emmanuel could offer, was delightful. When matters drew to a close, a slim blonde lad sought the reporter's side, he was insisted, he would escort her home.

C-C

"A twelve month passed. The club again began its work and our little maid timidly asked for the assignment. Would he be there? Be still, oh flutter—(Continued on Page 4)

ART, MUSIC AND DRAMA

The A.C. Players' Guild

Venus on an Iceflo, an adaptation of Sigrid Undset's Kristin Lavransdatter, was interesting. It was interesting because it was a sincere effort at something different to the usual bill at the Players' Guild.

The adaptation as a play is not particularly good but it has its moments of brilliance. Some of the lines have a poetic quality, an attribute that led at least part of the audience to believe that the play was a poetic drama. It was this poetic quality however that led the director to limit the amount of action on the part of the actors in order to stress the lines. This, as Wilson Knight pointed out is a misunderstanding.

Among the actors Margaret Howe and Arthur Bernstein as mistress and lover, gave the better performances. They and Miss Helen Goulding, in the title role of Kristin, brought out the finer bits in the play and did it quite well.

The production was also distinguished for the simplicity of the sets which displayed a remarkable economy of means. Their effectiveness was only marred by the deficiency in lighting which obscured the faces of the performers.

Trinity Dramatics

"The Trysting Place", presented last night by the Trinity College Dramatic Society, was received with great ovation. The able direction of Miss Muriel Robertson, the brilliant acting of Adam Griffiths, and the strong support of the remainder of the cast assured this intriguing little play of its good reception.

One of a series of six one-act plays to be presented by the Trinity Dramatic Society during the season, "The Trysting Place" is a story of an hotel lounge in which various couples, including a mother, daughter and son with their respective lovers, have agreed to meet. The seventh member of the cast is not seen but heard. From a hiding place in an old armchair he overhears the love-making and is in a position to bring about a very laughable ending to all the petty intrigues.

Miss Evans and Don Carson were very good as the old couple reliving a youthful romance, while Desirée Seale, as the undesigning actress, Ruth Cockram as the distasteful daughter, and Ken Kernaghan as her lover were extremely able.

Nancy Pyper opened the meeting with a short talk on acting in general, in which she stressed the fact that undergraduate actors would receive a very welcome reception when they tried out for any of her own productions at Hart House. She spoke feelingly of her profession and went so far as to call the stage "The temple of the ascent of man".

asserted that the enrolment was nearly up to quota. "We have that amount on paper," he said, "although some have not yet filled out their forms."

Col. Cockburn said that he had not anticipated the enrolment being below the required mark, but in such a case he could petition for a reduction in the establishment. Such a petition granted, one platoon less would be required. This would mean a reduction of the grant to the University of $125. The grant at present is in the neighbourhood of $2,000.

Complete enlistment has not yet been made, he said, "but I hope that by the end of the week this will be altered." At the present time the members of the band are the chief offenders in this matter but their complete enrolment will be completed by Friday, when the medals will be given to all who have not signed, at the practice that day.

And there she was beside him—wasn't it nice? The little girl shyly admitted that it was.

usually taken for sisters by their audiences. But, Miss Yanova, who was born in Toronto, knew nothing of Miss Coles, a native of Regina, until they were brought together in their student days and discovered that they were temperamentally fitted for the exacting work of playing together.

Today, they are at the top of the list in their chosen field because they have become as one in the playing of two instruments, as one. This demonstrates their success from a temperamental as well as a musical point of view—a very important factor.

These Canadians have been received in New York, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and many other musical centres with enthusiastic acclaim and their extreme popularity is evidenced by the fact that they are now scheduled for return engagements during this season, at many points.

He showed on a diagram how all sciences are related by geography, and how a geographer is a "liaison officer" between the sciences. Modifying the old saw that a geographer was a jack of all trades and a master of none, he stated it, "A geographer is a jack of all trades and a master of one or two of them." Dr. Taylor showed how he had predicted the future white population of the world and how it would be distributed. The lecture was concluded with a prediction of a great future for geography as a means for the betterment of civilization.

stated, so Germany was quite justified in breaking the bond that was stifling the world.

Out of the post-war reaction for pacifism was born the League of Nations. Deserted at birth by its parents, the United States, it was still-born, yet the other nations have persistently refused to give it up, in spite of the League's many failures. Now, however, Britain finds she is the only nation of consequence left in the League with France. In order not to abandon the League she must become a subsidiary power siding with either France or Germany.

Realizing England can expect little help from the British Commonwealth, Baldwin is going to the country on a platform of British rearmament. Great Britain showed Geneva, this fall, how successful this policy of strength can be when she sent her navy into the Mediterranean. Germany having adopted a somewhat similar international policy, offers no threat to world peace today.

POETRY UTILIZED TO HEIGHTEN PLOT

"Othello" attracts no special attention, but as a poetic drama it is a masterpiece.

"Othello" is, said Mr. Dale, a good example of the advantages of the poetic form; in it Shakespeare uses poetry to paint his scenes, to develop his characters, and to give force to the drama generally. "Poetry allows a freer expression of mental states"; thus Othello who seems a blunt, practical man, is given, through the use of the poetic form, the eloquence necessary to express his inner self. Poetry also relieves the horror of the plot, and makes the audience feel that Othello, in spite of everything, is essentially a great figure.

BLUES MEET QUEEN'S FOR INTERCOLLEGIATE TITLE

LORD TWEEDSMUIR WILL RECEIVE HONORARY DEGREE FROM UNIVERSITY

Event to be One of Greatest in University's History —Canon Cody

PRIMARILY FOR STUDENTS

Governor-General Will Pass Entire Day About the University

His Excellency Lord Tweedsmuir, Canada's new governor-general and outstanding man of letters, will receive an honorary degree of doctor of laws from the University of Toronto at a special convocation to be held here on Wednesday, November 27, President Cody announced yesterday.

Characterizing the occasion as "one of the most outstanding events in the history of the University," Dr. Cody indicated that Convocation Hall would be practically entirely reserved for students and members of the faculty on the afternoon when the degree is conferred on the former John Buchan.

"We want it to be primarily for students," Dr. Cody said. "I believe the problem however, will be to get them all in the Hall. It is essentially a University function and I hope the undergraduates, as the most vigorous element in the University, will be out in force."

Mr. Fennell, the registrar, stated that tickets would be issued to students who wish to attend. The two galleries have been reserved for students and about 1,000 undergraduates can be accommodated. The S.A.C. is looking after the ticket allotment for the convocation.

And that's what approximately one thousand Varsity students think about the Hart House Masquerade, as the Comptroller's office states there are that many tickets out. There still is time, however, as the Comptroller's office has extended ticket sale until 5.30 this afternoon, but under no circumstances will any ticket be sold after that hour.

Team Has Made Decision to Default Ontario Play-offs

DESIRE TORONTO TITLE

This Saturday the junior Blues meet the strong Westside squad in the second round of the T.R.U. play-offs. As the Blues were handed a 5-3 setback last Saturday and with points to count on the round, they will have to show a greatly improved game in order to win the series. However, they will have a decided advantage over Westsides as far as physical fitness is concerned; the Blues are intact from injuries while Westsides will suffer the loss of one of their star halves, Butch McKay, (Continued on Page 4)

BOOK WEEK AROUSES INTEREST OF PUBLIC

Purpose is to Stimulate Public Interest in Canadian Authors

For the purpose of stimulating interest in Canadian authors and their works, this week has been set aside as Book Week. The movement, launched by the Canadian Authors' Association, has gained ground all across the country, and by means of posters and displays in the stores and libraries, has succeeded in arousing great interest among the public.

At a dinner held last Saturday by the Toronto branch of the Association, the publication of a new poetry magazine was announced, for the encouragement of which the I.O.E. has offered a prize for a poetry competition to be held this week.

National Government in Control

England today has a National Government in the British Parliament as a result of their sweeping victory in yesterday's general election. Although the Labor party recorded large gains, the Conservatives were given a substantial majority with the prime minister, Stanley Baldwin, holding his constituency by acclamation. Ramsay MacDonald, former prime minister and Labor candidate was reported defeated early this morning. The Liberal forces, led by Sir Herbert Samuel, who was himself defeated, were completely shattered in yesterday's vote.

EMINENT VISITOR TOURS HART HOUSE

Dr. Lanfear Visits Toronto for Purpose of Studying Hart House System

MUSIC APPRECIATION GREAT

An opinion that we here in Toronto did not seem sufficiently aware of the world-fame of Hart House was expressed in an interview yesterday by Dr. V. W. Lanfear, Dean of Men of the University of Pittsburgh. He paid particular tribute to Mr. Bickersteth as the brain behind the Hart House experiment.

Dr. Lanfear stated that he was visiting Toronto with the express purpose of studying at first hand the Hart House system of administration, in the hope of getting many hints which would help with the better working of student affairs at Pittsburgh. Many of the innovations inaugurated here have already been adopted at Pittsburgh. (Continued on Page 4)

CROWDS AT GAMES SHOW ATTENDANCE GREATER THIS YEAR

This year's attendance at the Varsity home rugby games is the greatest in the last five years and approaches fairly close to the all-time high of 1930, according to the figures given to The Varsity by Mr. Reid. The crowds that attended the last Queen's game and the ones expected for tomorrow's are also the greatest since the banner year of 1930, when 20,700 people jammed the stadium to see the Blues play Queen's. After 1930 attendance at the games fell sharply and last year it reached its lowest point. This year, however, it picked up to an amazing degree, increasing by almost 50 per cent over last year.

Is It Right To Be a Leftist Or Wrong To Be a Rightist?

Last night the most stupendous, psychological inquisition ever conducted within the portals of a University residence took place within the sacred precincts of the Anglican fortress on the corner of Harbord and St. George Streets when the respective merits of the scientific methods of objective approach to femininity were discussed. To elucidate still further, the time honoured custom of "sparking" is one with which students have been familiar since Don Juan first entered the age of adolescence. One question to which this practice gives rise however has never been satisfactorily answered, namely, "Should the swain encircle maidenly

THE RIGHT TO DIE IS TOPIC OF DEBATE

U.C. Parliament was Scene of Exciting Discussion Last Night

MOTION CARRIED 26 TO 11

At the U.C. Parliament yesterday the government headed by A. D. B. Marshall was upheld on the motion, "That this House favours the right to die." The debate revolved about the right of an individual to sign away his own life. Speaking for the government, J. E. L. Graham held that a person suffering from pain and incapable of performing any useful function should have the right and the will to have his life destroyed.

From the Opposition benches, E. Shortt contended that a person in pain was incapable of rational judgment; furthermore, "he has no right, at law, to take his own life, his person being inviolable."

Following several speakers in defence of the government, the Speaker asked the House to divide. The motion was carried by a vote of 26 to 11.

Players Welcome Chance to Prove Superiority Over Queen's

TITLE AT STAKE

By Jim Tiller

That reverberating roar which has been echoing and re-echoing since Varsity clashed with Western six weeks ago, will reach a triumphant and perhaps final note at the Bloor Bowl tomorrow afternoon when our Big Blue team battles the Queen's Presbyterians for the intercollegiate title in the sudden death play-off game wished on Toronto by the no doubt well meaning Rugby Commission. Morally, the Varsity footballers are already champions but play-off games are all the more and the undefeated Blues are no nearer the title than the second place Queen's. Under the present play-off system, a single fumble or misplay may rob the Blues of their due reward for not a single loss all season.

STUDENTS DISCUSS COLLEGE EDUCATION

St. Joseph's College Hold First Meeting of Debating Society

COLLEGE WOMEN AS WIVES

"Are we giving too many people a college education?" At the first meeting of their debating society, the students of St. Joseph's College decided that we are not.

"College women do not make good wives and mothers," stated Miss Sunny McLaughlin, first speaker for the affirmative. The House, however, took exception to this statement, as it did to the opening remark of the leader of the negative, Miss Helen Burns, that "The University is not for the select few."

Genevieve Conlon, second speaker for the affirmative, bemoaned the loss of big sisters who stayed at home to make cushions and lamp shades. She asked if girls must stay in school until they are married or if there is a scarcity of husbands if they must stay there forever.

Several Casualties Disable Team, but Queen's Expect Tussle

PEP DISPLAYED IN PRACTICE

Undecided Whether Munro will Play on Saturday

By Ab Gratton

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 14.—A feeling of uncertainty hovered over the Tricolour camp today as the champion Revere completed their week's training grind with a brisk two hour signal session in preparation for Saturday's tilt with Varsity.

Three regulars, Johnny Munro, Mel Thompson and Johnny Edwards were absent from the daily drills, receiving treatment for injuries received this past week.

Edwards and Thompson will be ready for the all-important struggle with the league leading Blues, but whether Munro would see action or not was just a question here tonight.

With Munro out of the game, Queen's would lack their chief scoring threat and punting duties would fall on either Ed Barnabe or Johnny Wing, two lads who can consistently hoist the oval for good gains. The rest of the squad is in fairly good shape and every man is prepared for a gruelling battle.

Johnny Edwards, speedy Tricolour running half, has recovered from a slight charley horse he sustained in the Ottawa game on Monday and he will start on the back division. In all probability the same team that gave the Blues a rousing tussle two weeks ago will get the call before train time tomorrow.

Aside from the contest with the Rough Riders, the Presbyterians have refrained from participating in any heavy scrimmage work this week. Meeting with adverse weather conditions, the Gaels wallowed around in a sea of mud all week long going through their (Continued on Page 4)

L. M. MONTGOMERY FINDS ONTARIO DRAB

Prince Edward Island Makes a Colourful Background for Her Books

HAS LONG RESIDENCE HERE

At Avenue Rd. Presbyterian Church Mrs. Ewen MacDonald, better known as "L. M. Montgomery," authoress of "Anne of Green Gables," spoke on the background of all her books—beautiful Prince Edward Island. Mrs. MacDonald was born on "the only island" and loves it.

"After living 24 years here, I still find Ontario drab and dull when I compare it with the colourful land of Prince Edward Island with its red roads, green grasses and blue sky."

"L. M. Montgomery's" stories first appeared in religious publications which were circulated by such organizations as the Baptist Board, for the young people in Prince Edward Island. Later articles were sent to American magazines and, (as Mrs. MacDonald confessed), were rejected 29 times out of 30. The now famous "Anne of Green Gables" was rejected 5 times and was only published when a Prince Edward Island girl on the staff of Page & Co. of Boston "bulldozed them into accepting it".

In Defense Of Realism

Among the more than two thousand people who attended Hart House Theatre last month to see "Once in a Lifetime" there were not a few who took exception to the rather frequent and apparently indiscriminate use of red-blooded epithets. They felt that the constant recurrence of vitriolic phrases was neither funny nor at all complimentary to the type of audience to which Hart House caters. Some of those who thus passed censure upon the Theatre and its director also advocate neck-high and ankle-low bathing attire and the complete ostracism of those of us who use expressions as daring as "Jeepers Creepers!" Others, however, were people of normal intelligence and common sense, neither narrow-minded nor bigoted, who really believed that the limits of propriety (a somewhat personal quantity, by the way) had been overstepped.

We must admit that to the casual observer this criticism appears to be well-founded, but a careful and unbiased study of the play shows that such is not the case. Consider, for example, the three characters about whom the action of the play focuses. A second-rate vaudeville team, not good enough to make the "big time", used to sleeping in cheap hotels or making overnight trips in the doubtful luxury of a day-coach, forced to battle for their pay with tight-fisted managers and booking agents, they are saturated with the demanding, hard-fighting atmosphere in which they live, tempered by the rigour of the hand-to-mouth existence which they lead. It is obviously impossible to portray truthfully the intimate lives of such people without having occasional recourse to coarse and vulgar language.
